PREFACE

The aim in the present volume, as in the other issues of the series, has been, not to compile a mediæval anthology of choice poems and passages, but to represent fully and where possible by complete works, all the chief poets of the period covered. The selections have been made and the apparatus furnished with a view to arousing the interest and satisfying the curiosity of the general reader and the student of literature rather than of language. Care has indeed been taken to provide trustworthy texts, and the book should not be without value to those seeking to extend their knowledge of Middle English and Middle Scots; but the glosses supplied in the footnotes are full enough to make possible the enjoyment of the poems by readers without special acquaintance with the earlier stages of the language. In the case of some of the more difficult of the alliterative poems, Sir Gawain and the Green Knight, The Pearl, and Piers Plowman, the amount of glossary required was so great that it seemed that our purpose would be better served by a literal translation than by footnotes so numerous as to make continuous reading all but impossible. Precisely how faithful these renderings are, the reader can judge for himself by comparing the translations with the specimens of the originals printed at the beginning of the two first-named poems.

No apology need be made for including a generous selection from the traditional ballads. Their authors, if they had authors in the strict sense, are indeed not among the "Chief Poets," nor are they all by any means to be assigned to the two centuries with which we are here concerned; but in a series which, it is hoped, will cover the whole field of English poetry, it would be preposterous to neglect a type which is one of its glories; and, in point of chronology, the ballads fit this volume as well as any. They belong to the folk, and the taste of the folk has little relation to the conventional periods into which literary history is divided.

A notable feature of the collection is the prominence given to the Scottish poets of the period. Partly on account of the political separation of England and Scotland, partly through an exaggerated sense of the difficulty of the dialect, students of English literature have unduly neglected these writers. Yet after a few peculiarities in spelling have been noted, Barbour, for example, is as easy as Chaucer; and in the matter of poetic quality none of Chaucer's English disciples is the equal of Henryson or Dunbar. The latter, it is true, is often mentioned if seldom read; but it is doubtful whether there is in the whole of English literature a case of neglected genius so remarkable as that of Henryson. This book will justify itself if it does no more than make accessible and call attention to poetry of so much interest and distinction.

In the choice of poets and poems to be included we have been greatly aided by many of our colleagues in the universities of the United States, — so many that only a general acknowledgment can be made of the obligations under which their generosity has placed us. For the final decisions, as well as for whatever faults in judgment and scholarship the book may contain, the editors are jointly responsible. Mr. Webster translated the Gawain and the Pearl, Mr. Neilson Piers Plowman, but each has had the opportunity to revise and criticize, so that the credit or discredit must be shared in common.

WITCHCRAFT AND DREAMS

(Handling Sin, 11. 339-556)

GYF thou ever thurgh folye
Dydyst ought¹ do nygromauncy,
Or to the devyl dedyst sacryfyse
Thurgh wychcraftys asyse,²
Or any man gaf the mede³
For to reyse the devyl⁴ yn dede,
For to telle, or for to wrey⁵
Thyng that the was don awey;
Gyf thou have do any of thys,
Thou hast synned and do a-mys,
And thou art wurthy to be shent⁶
Thurgh thys yche⁷ commaundëment.

Gyf thou yn swerd, other yn bacyn,
Any chylde madyst loke theryn,
Or yn thumbe, or yn cristal, —
Wycchëcraft men clepyn hyt al.
Beleve nought yn the pyys cheteryng;
Hyt ys no trouthe, but fals belevyng.
Many belevyn yn the pye:
Whan she comyth lowe or hye
Cheteryng, and hath no reste,
Than sey they we shul have geste. Manyon trowyn on here wylys,
And many tymes the pye hem gylys. And many tymes the pye hem gylys.

Also ys metyng on the morwe
When thou shalt go to bye or to borwe;
Gyf than thy erende spede ne sette,
Than wylt thou curse hym that thou mette.
Hyt ys the tycement of the devyl
To curse hem that thoght the no evyl.

Of hancel ¹⁵ y can no skylle ¹⁶ also; Hyt ys nought to beleve tharto: Me thynketh hyt ys fals every deyl, Y beleve hyt nought, ne never shal weyl. ¹⁷ For many havyn glad hancel at the morw, And to hem or evyn comth mochyl sorw; And manyon havyn yn the day grete noy, ¹⁸ And yyt or evyn cometh to hem mochyl ioye.

1 at all. 2 mode. 3 hire. 4 Call him up—the origin of our colloquial phrase. 5 hide. 7 very. 8 One divined by the white flecks on the thumb-nail. 9 call. 10 magpie's. 11 doings—or possibly, a guest. 12 Many a one. 13 believe. 14 deceives. 15 prognostication. 15 I know no good of it. 17 well. 15 annoyance.

So mayst thou wyte, gyf thou gode can, 19 That hancel ys no beleve to man.

Beleve nought moche yn no dremys, For many be nat but gleteryng glemys. These clerkys seyn that hyt ys vanyte, That nought ys, ne never shal be; And ofte mayst thou fynde hyt ryght That thou hast mete ²⁰ upon the nyght. But therof to have mochyl affyaunce The may betyde the sunner a chaunce.

On syxë maners may a man mete: Sum beyn to beleve, sum beyn to lete.21 Sum men dremyn for surfeture, That etyn or drynkyn over mesure; And sum dremë on veyn thyng For over mychyl and grete fastyng: And sum beyn the fendes temptacyoun That to the trowthe ys fals tresoun; And sum come of over mochyl thought Of thyng that men wuld have wrought; And sum beyn Goddys pryvyte That he shewyth to warnë the; And, sum come thurgh grete stody, And shewe to the apertly.22 These syxë maners a clerk us tellyth, Seynt Gregory, that mochyl spellyth.28

The fyrst twey ²⁴ maners, we wote weyl, Beyn oure defautë every deyl.
The ton ²⁵ ys for over mychel outrage,
The touther ys febylnesse of corage, ²⁶
As yn mete, or drynk, over moche takyng,
Or yn feblyng the body with moche fastyng.
The touther fourë thys clerkys wytyn,
For yn the byble they ben wrytyn.
Gyf they ne come thurgh temptacyun
Of the fende, that ys a felun,
Nevere had seyd Salamon
'That dremys men deseyve ²⁷ manyon.'
For tho that to dremys over moche trastys, ²⁸
To scornë hem the fende then frastys. ²⁹

Gyf they come nat also thurgh thoght,
The wysë clerk hadde tolde hyt noght,
Ne suffryd hyt be wrytyn yn boke
That men alle day rede yn, and loke,

¹⁹ understand, 20 dreamt, 21 neglect, 22 openly, 23 relates, 24 two. 25 The one, 28 spirit, 27 deceive. 28 trust, 29 tries.

Thus the wyse clerk seyth, Catun, And techyth chyldryn thys lessun, 'Geve no charge to (thy) dremys, They been but as (glasyng) glemys That yn the thought (stertys &) lepys A-nyght whan thou (restys &) slepys: That you wakyng (sumtyme) thenkes, Beforë thy ygen hyt blenkys.'

Gyf they ne come thurgh pryvyte
That God wyl shewë me or the,
Iosep of dremys had gyve no kepe ²
What hym was shewed yn hys slepe,
That fadyr and modyr and al hys kynde,
Thurgh hym shuld they wurshyp fynde.
Yn the byble men redë thys
In the fyrst boke of Genesys.
Also hyt was shewyd pryvyly
To Iosep that wedded oure lady,
That with the chyld they shuldë fle
To Egypt, that yche cuntre.
Thys ys clepyd revelacyun,
To shewe byfore what ys to doun.

Gyf they com noght thurgh stodyyng,
That tokene ys of selkouthe ⁸ thyng,
Danyel had noght wyst byfore
The dreme of Nabugodonosore.
Danyel seyd un-to the kyng,
"Thou thougtyst to nyght a selkouth

"Thou thoughyst to nyght a selkouthe thyng;

What manere folk shuld they be
That yn this worlde come aftyr the,
And how they shulde the wurlde governe;
Yn thy thoght thou gunne hyt gerne;
And God shewyd hyt yn thy sygt;
That dremed the the touther nyght."
He tolde the profyte than every deyl;
And the profete redde by tweyl:
Wysly he seyd, and weyl thurgh soght,
Whan he hede toke to that the kynge thoght.
And God shewyd what shuld betyde;
What manere folk shulde aftyr a-byde.

Sethyn ther beyn dremys so many manere,7

Than ys doute and gretë were 8
To wytë where-of dremys come,
That every nyght dremyn thurgh custome;
Ther beyn so many dremys yn veyne,
That no man wotë no certeyn
But they that beyn with God pryve,
To whom ys graunted, swych thyng to see:
Swych men deseyveth nat the devyl,
They have no grace to knowe hys evyl;

Ellys may no man fynde hem stable, So ben dremys deseyvable. Gyf thou telle hem, than mayst thou erre; And gyf thow trow hem, that ys wel werre; For thou mayst dreme of sume evyl thyng That may turn to better for thy preyyng. "Thou, leudman, 10 gyf godë tent, 11 Trow noght agen the comaundment."

Trow noght agen the comaundment."

Gyf thou beleve yn wycchëcraft
To chaungë thyng be the devylys craft, —
Swych beyn the devyl betaght, 12
With holy chyrche they ben unsaght, 13
And allë the that on hem trowe
Mow drede hem self to brenne yn lowe; 14
And thogh they fynde hyt sothe other whyle, 15

Hyt ys thurgh the fendës gyle.
The fend fondyth 16 with alle hys myght
To put sumwat yn herë syght
That shal make hem swych thyng beleve
And God almyghty myspay 17 and greve.
For ther was never womman ne man
That any wycchëraft be-gan,
That ever myght bryng hyt to an ende,
But fals beleve that wyl hem shende.
The wurdys certys beyn ryght noght,
But fals beleve maketh dede y-wroght.
For whan thou trowyst yn a fals thyng
The devyl hyt shewyth for that trowyng.
Lo here a tale of a wycche,
That leved 18 no better tha(n) a bycche.

THE TALE OF THE WITCH AND HER COW-SUCKING BAG

There was a wycche, and made a bagge, A bely ¹⁹ of lethyr, a gretë swagge, ²⁰ She sygaldryd ²¹ so thys bagge bely
That hyt gede ²² and soke ²³ mennys ky, ²⁴ At evene, and at morw tyde, Yn here pasture, other ellys be syde.
Long hyt gede aboutë fast,
Tyl hyt was parceyved at the last;
Than all the godemen of the toune,
By fore the bysshop dyden here somoune; 10
They dyden the baggë with here bere,
To wetë ²⁵ what she shuld answere.
Hyt was shewyd by fore the bysshop,
That she dyde ²⁶ to goo swych a melk slop, ²⁷

¹ flashes before thine eyes. 2 heed.

Thurgh wycchecraft and mysaventure, To sugke here keyn yn here pasture. The bysshop merveyled, and other mo,¹ How that she myght do hyt go. "Dame," seyd the bysshop, "do thy quentyse,2 And late us se how hyt shal ryse." Thys wycche here charme began to sey, The slop ros up, and gede the weye. The bysshop seyd, "thys have we seyn; Do hyt now to lygge 8 ageyn," The wycchë dede al at hys wylle: She made the slop agen lygge stylle. The bysshop made a clerk than wryte Al that she seyd, mochel and lyte, And allë how she made here went; 4 The bysshop tharto gaf gode entent. ³ Each stanza in the sets of five is connected to the preceding stanza by the repetition in the first line of some word from the last line of the preceding stanza. 4 Such a word could perfectly well have its original

THE PEARL

1. Pearl, pleasant for princes to set cleanly in clear gold, hardily I say that out of the Orient I never found its 1 precious peer. So round, so beauteous in each array, so small, so smooth were its sides, that wheresoever I judged of gay jewels I set it singly by itself. Alas! I lost it in an arbor; 2 through grass to ground it went from me. I pine, stricken 8 by love-danger, for mine own pearl without a spot.

2. Since in that spot it sprang from me, oft have I waited, wishing for that weal that was wont whilom to rid me of my woe and raise my hap and all my joy; it doth pierce 4 through my heart and makes my breast in bale to swell and burn. Yet me thought never was there so sweet a song as stole to me in the silent hour; for sooth there floated to me many, to think of her beauty, so clad in clay. O earth, thou marrest a lovely jewel, mine own pearl without a spot!

3. That spot must needs abound in spices where such riches is run to rot. Blooms yellow and blue and red shine there full sheer against the sun; flower and fruit may not fade 5 where it drove down in the dun mould; for every herb must grow from a seed's death; else were no wheat e'er brought to barns; from good each good is aye begun. So seemly a seed could not fail that springing spices should not start up from that precious pearl without a spot.

4. To the spot which I tell of, in that green garden, I went in August, at the height of the season,6 when corn is cut with sickles keen. On the mound where the pearl had rolled down, these herbs so bright and fair cast their shade 7 - gilly-flower,

1 The pearl, as may be seen by a glance at the original on the opposite page, is indifferently neuter and feminine in the poem.

² Perhaps garden, i.e. Anglo-French herber, grassy place, herb garden.

3 Reading fordolled instead of fordolked, which latter might mean pierced.

6 Or "pierce my heart frequently."
5 MS. fede is doubtful.
6 Or, "on a high festival," i.e. Assumption.

7 Ambiguous passage: possibly the flowers shaded the hill; or again, the hill the flowers.

ginger and gromwell, and ever peonies sprinkled between. If it was seemly to look upon, yet more pleasing was the sweet odour that floated from it. There dwells, I wot and ween, that worthy one, my precious pearl without a spot.

5. Before that spot I clasped my hands for the heavy sorrow which seized me. A doleful 8 pang made a tumult in my heart, although reason reconciled me. I lamented my pearl that was enclosed there with frightened 9 reasonings that fast fought. Though Christ's goodness offered me comfort, my wretched will sank ever into grief. Such a fragrance shot to my senses that I fell upon the flowery sward, and dropped into a sleeping trance above that precious pearl without a spot.

6. From the spot my spirit sprang into space; my body abode in a trance on the mound. My ghost by God's grace went on an adventure to a land where marvels move; I knew not where in this world it was: but I knew that I was borne where cliffs are cloven: my face I turned toward a forest where rich rocks were to be descried; the light of them might no man believe, the gleaming glory that glinted from them; for never were fabrics woven by men of half so fair adornment.

7. Adorned were all the sides of the downs with crystal cliffs so clear. Bright woods about them were, with boles as blue as indigo; like burnished silver the leaves unfold, trembling thick on every limb; when a gleam from the sky glides against them with a splendid shimmering they shine full bright. The gravel upon the ground 10 was precious pearls of Orient, - the sunbeams but dark and dull in comparison with that ornament.

8. The adornment of those beauteous downs made my spirit all grief forget; so fresh was the savour of the fruit that it fairly restored me like food. Fowls there flew in the forest, of flaming hues, both small and great. But the citole-string and the cithern player could not recount their splendid mirth; for when those birds beat their wings, they sang with sweet assent; so gracious glee could no man get as to hear and see their adornment.

9. So was adorned in dear array all that woodland where fortune leads me forth; the beauty thereof for to relate is no man worthy. I walked aye forth in happy wise; no bank so big as to cause me fear; the farther into the park, the fairer gan rise the plain, the plants, the spice, the trees, and hedges and banks, and rich meads—their steep banks like gold embroidery fine. I won to a water that ran bright by the shore.

Lord, fair was its adornment!

and the adornment of the precious dell was radiant banks of beryl bright; sweetly sounding swept the water, with a murmuring voice rushing by. In the bottom there stood bright stones, that glowed and glimmered like rays through glass, or as the streaming 2 stars, when men sleep sound, 3 stare in the welkin in winter night; for each pebble, set there in the pool, was emerald, or sapphire, or gentle gem; so that all the pool gleamed with the light, so rich was its adornment.

III

11. The adornment dear of down and dales, of wood and water and fair plains, raised bliss in me, abated my sorrows, ended my distress, destroyed my pains. Down along a stream that swiftly runs I turned in bliss. Crowded was my mind.⁴ The further I followed these watery vales the greater strength of joy strained my heart. As Fortune fares whereas she will, whether solace she send or sorrow, the wight to whom her will she grants 6 strives to have aye more and more.

12. More of weal was in that plan than I could tell, though I had time; for earthly heart might not suffice to the tenth part of that gladness glad. Therefore I thought that Paradise was there over against the broad banks. I supposed the stream to be a division by waters made between joys. Peyond the brook, by slope or dale, I imagined that city might be placed. But the water was deep, I durst not wade; and ever I longed aye more and more.

13. More and more, and yet still more I listed to see beyond the brook; for if it was fair where I walked, much lovelier was the farther land. About me gan I to stumble and stare; to find a ford fast gan I seek; but dangers more I wis there were the farther I stalked by the strand; and ever it seemed to me I should not to flinch for woe where joys so precious were. Then a new matter came to hand that moved my mind ave more and more.

14. A greater marvel gan my mind to daunt. I saw beyond that merry mere a crystal cliff right brilliant; many a royal ray shot from it. At the foot thereof there sat a child, a maiden of mien full debonaire; gleaming white was her garment — I knew her well, I had seen her before. As glistening gold when it is cut, so shone that fair one upon the shore. I looked upon her there at length; and the longer, I knew her more and more.

15. The more I searched her fair face, her beauteous figure scanned, such a gladdening glory glided to me as heretofore was little wont. Desire urged me to call her, but confusion gave my heart a blow; I saw her in so strange a place; such a shock might well amaze my heart. Then she lifted up her fair face, her visage white as plain ivory, that stung my strayed heart; and more and more the longer she gazed.

IV

16. More than I desired, my dread arose; I stood full still, and durst not call; with open eyes and mouth full close I stood as mute as hawk in hall. I deemed that spiritual was the purport, and I dreaded ever what should befall lest she whom I saw there escaped me ere I could arrest her with my voice. But that gracious and gay one without fault,1 so smooth, so small, so seemly slight, rose up in her royal array - a precious piece in pearls bedight.

17. Set pearls of royal price there might man by grace have seen when she, fresh as fleur-de-lys, down the bank quickly took her way. All glistening white was her mantle,2 open at sides and brightly bound with the purest margery pearls, methinks, that ever I saw yet with mine eyes. The long sleeves, I wot and I ween, were adorned and set with double pearls; her kirtle of the same bright stuff was studded round with precious pearls.

18. A studded crown yet wore that girl, of margeries and no other stone, high pinnacled of clear white pearl, with blooming flowers wrought upon it. Her head had no other fillet, her own locks 4 covered her quite. Her semblant was stately as that of duke or earl; her hue more white than whalebone.5 As bright as cut gold shone her locks, that lay lightly unbound over her shoulders. Her deep collar did not lack embroidery of precious pearls.

19. Set and sewed was every hem, at hands, at sides, at the openings, with white pearls and no other gem; and burnished white was her vesture. But a wondrous pearl without a flaw was set securely amidst her breast. A man's reason would be greatly baffled ere his mind could comprehend its size; no tongue, I think, would suffice to give an adequate account of that sight, so clean and clear and pure it was - that precious pearl where it was set.

20. Clad in pearl, that precious piece beyoud the water came down the shore. From here to Greece was there never gladder man than I when she stood on the bank. She was nearer to me than aunt or niece; my joy therefore was much the more. Speech she proferred me, that dear being.6 Inclining low, in womanly fashion, she doffed her crown of great treasure, and greeted me with blithe countenance. Glad was I that ever I was born, to answer that sweet one clad in pearls.

5 i.e. ivory.

6 Literally, "special spice."

21. "Oh pearl," quoth I, "in pearls clad, art thou my pearl that I have mourned, regretted by me lonely in the night? Much longing for thee have I concealed since into the grass thou glided from me. Pensive, impaired, I suffer pain, whilst thou to a life of joy art come in the land of Paradise, untouched by strife. What fate has borne my jewel hither, and left me in this grief and great anxiety? Since we were torn atwain and parted I have been a joyless jeweller."

22. Then that jewel clad in gentle gems raised her face and her gray eyes, set on her crown of orient pearl, and soberly thereafter gan she speak: "Sir, ye have reckoned amiss, to say that your pearl is all lost that is enclosed in a coffer as comely as this garden gracious gay; herein to bide forever, and play, where loss nor mourning come never nigh. Here were a treasure-chest indeed for thee if thou were a gentle jeweller.

23. "But, gentle jeweller, if thou must lose thy joy for a gem that was dear to thee, thou seemst to me bent on a mad purpose, and busiest thee for a slight reason. For that which thou lost was but a rose, that flowered and failed as nature decreed. Now, through the virtue of the chest that encloses it, it has become a pearl of price. — And thou hast called thy fate a thief, that manifestly has made for thee something out of nothing. Thou blamest the very cure of thy mischief. Thou art no natural jeweller."

24. A jewel to me then was this guest, and jewels were her gentle saws. "Forsooth," quoth I, "my blissful best one, my great distress thou takest all away. To be excused I make request; for I believed my pearl vanished. Now I have it I shall make merry and dwell with it in bright groves, and praise my Lord and all his laws, who has brought me near to this bliss. Now were I with you beyond these waves I were a joyful jeweller."

25. "Jeweller," then said that clean gem, "why jest ye men, so mad ye be? Three words hast thou spoken at once; and unadvised, forsooth, were all three. Thou knowest not what in the world one doth mean.

¹ Perhaps to be taken literally, "without gall." Doves and such gentle things were supposed to be devoid of gall.

Literally, "laps."
The MS. lere leke is very difficult. Here heke (for</sup> eke), = hair also; and here-leke = hair-locks, have been proposed. Hair lace might be suggested; or leke might conceivably represent the Old Norse suffix -leikr; hereleke being then simply hair, growth of hair.

Thy words before thy wit gan fly. Thou savest that thou believest me to be in this dale because thou canst see me with thine eves: secondly thou savest that thou thyself shalt dwelt with me right here; the third is, to pass this fair water - that may no joyful jeweller.

26. "I hold that jeweller little to praise who believes 1 well what he sees with his eye; and much to blame and uncourteous him who believes our Lord would make a lie, who loyally promised to raise your life, though fortune caused your flesh to perish. Ye set his words all awry who believe nothing but ye see it; and that is a point of pride which evil beseems each good man,to believe that no tale is quite true unless his own reason can judge of it.

27. "Judge now thyself whether thou knowest how to talk - as if a man should have words with God. Thou sayst thou shalt dwell in this precinct. Methinks it behoves thee first to ask leave, - and even then of permission thou mightst fail. Thou wishest over this water to cross; first thou must take other counsel; thy corse must colder sink 2 in the mould, for it was undone at the grove of Paradise; our first father abused it there. Through dreary death it behoves each man to pass ere over this stream the Lord suffer him."

28. "Doomest thou me," quoth I, "my sweet, to grief again, then I must perish. Now I have found what I lost, must I again forgo it ere ever I die? Why must I both miss and find it? My precious pearl causes me great pain. What serves treasure but to make man weep, when he must lose it again with sorrow? Now reck I never how I decline, nor how far from my land one banish me, when I have no part in my pearl. Except enduring grief what may men expect?"

29. "Thou expectest naught but deep distress," then said that wight; "why dost thou so? For din of grief over lesser losses oft many a man overlooks the greater. Thou oughtst the better to rule thyself, and love aye God, and weal and woe, for anger gains thee not a cress. Who needs must suffer, let him not be so wild; for though thou dance as any doe, leap, and what he shall adjudge.

30. "Judge, Lord! Ever ordain for him!3 He will not turn a foot from the way. Thy amends amount not to a mite, though thou shouldst for sorrow be never blithe. Cease thy rebellion, and end complaint, and seek his compassion right swiftly and earnestly. Thy prayer may move his pity, that mercy shall show her power; his comfort may alleviate thy languor, and lightly drive off thy afflictions; for marred or made, mourning and rejoicing,4 all lies in him to ordain and judge."

31. Then spake I to that damsel: "Let my Lord not be angry, if I rave rashly, spurning in speech. My heart was all stricken with loss, as welling water gushes out of the spring. I put myself ever in his mercy. Rebuke me not with fell words, though I go astray, my dear adored one; but help me kindly with your comfort, piteously thinking upon this - ye joined together 6 care and me, ye who once were the ground of all my bliss.

32. "My bliss and my bale both have ye been; but my sorrow was much the greater. Since thou wast removed from every danger, I wist never where my pearl was gone. Now that I see it, my anguish grows less. And when we separated we were at one; God forbid we now be wroth, we meet so seldom by stock or stone. Though ye know how to speak courteously, I am but muck, and manners 6 lack. But Christ's mercy, and Mary and John — these are the grounds of all my bliss.

33. "In bliss I see thee blithely set, and I a man all mournful and downcast. Ye take full little heed thereof, though I oft suffer fierce harms; but now that I am here in your presence, I would beseech without debate that ye would tell me in sober assent what manner of life ye lead early and late; for I am full fain that your estate has truly come to worship and weal; the highway of all my joy it is, the ground of all my bliss."

Masterful mood and high pride, I promise thee, are thoroughly hated here. 36, "Blissful one," said I, "can this be true? - be not displeased if I speak error - art thou the queen of the heavens blue, whom all this world must honour? We believe on Mary, whom grace sprang from, who bore in the flower of virginity a child. Who is it could remove the crown from her unless she surpassed her in some excellence? Now for her unique sweetness we call her the Phoenix of Araby, which flew peerless in its nature, like to the Queen of courtesv."

37. "Courteous Queen," then said that beautiful one, kneeling on the ground with face enfolded. "Matchless Mother and fairest Maid, blessed Beginner of every grace!" Then rose she up and gan pause, and spake to me at that time: "Sir, many chase and capture prey there; 2 but within this place are no supplanters; that Empress has all the heavens, and earth and hell are under her sway; yet none she will deprive of their heritage, for she is Queen of cour-

What greater worship could he attain than be crowned king by courtesy?

IX

41. "That courtesy is too free of deed if it be sooth that thou sayst. Thou didst not live two years among our people; thou knewest never how God to please nor to him pray, - no, neither Pater nor Creed. And made queen on the first day! I can not believe — so God me speed — that God would turn so wrongly aside; the rank of countess, damsel, by my faith, it were fair for thee to hold in heaven, - or else that of a lady of less degree. But a queen! — that is an attainment 8 too great."

nothing but right. As Matthew tells in your mass, in the truthful gospel of God Almighty; in parable he gan it full readily divine, and likens it to heaven light. 'My realm,' he says, 'is like indeed to a lord that had a vineyard, I wot. The season of the year was come when to labour in the vineyard it was high time.

43. "That time of year well know the hinds. The lord full early rose up to hire workmen to his vineyard, and finds there some to his purpose. Into accord they gan fall for a penny a day, and forth they go; they twine and work and take great pains, cut and bind and make it snug. About midmorn the lord to the market goes, and idle men finds he standing there. "Why stand ye idle?" he says to those. "Know ye not what day this is?"

44. ""Ere break of day hither are we come"; so was all together their answer given; "We have stood here since rose the sun, and no man bids us do aught." "Go into my vineyard; do what ye can," so said the lord, and confirmed it.2 "What reasonable hire by night be run, I will pay you in thought and deed." They went into the vineyard and wrought, and all day the lord went his way, and brought new men to his vineyard. Wellnigh was passed the precious

45. "At the time of evensong, an hour before the sun goes down, he saw there idle men full strong, and said to them with sober voice, "Why stand ye idle all day long?" They said their labour was nowhere sought. "Go to my vineyard, yeomen young, and work and do that which ye may." Soon the world became right dark; the sun was down and it waxed late. To take their hire he summoned them; the term of the day was all passed.

46. "The time of day the lord perceived, called to the reve, "Man, pay the company; give them the hire that I them owe. And, further, that none may reprove me, set them all in a row and give each one alike a penny. Begin at the last that stands low, till that thou to the first attain." And then the first gan to complain, and said that they had travailled sore: "These but for an hour exerted themselves; it seems to us that we ought to have more."

47. ""More have we deserved, it seems to us, that have suffered the day's heat, than these that wrought not two hours; and thou dost make them like to us." Then said the lord to one of those, "Friend, I will cause thee no loss; take what is thine own and go. I hired thee at a penny for the whole day; 3 why beginnest thou now to complain? Was not a penny thy covenant there? One may not plead for more than covenant. Why shouldst thou then ask more?"

48. "'Furthermore, is not my giving lawful for me, to do with mine what pleases me? Or else thou dost lift a malicious eye because I am good and deceive none." Thus shall I,' quoth Christ, 'apportion it: the last shall be the first that attains, and the first the last, be he never so swift; for many are called, though few are chosen.' Thus poor men ever receive their part; though they may come late and be feeble, and though their labour ends shortly, the mercy of God is so much the more.

49. "More have I here of joy and bliss, of ladyship great and life's bloom, than all the wights in the world could win in the way of right and justice. Although I have but now begun — came into the vineyard at eventide — the Lord remembered my hire first; I was immediately paid in full. Others there were that gave more time, that toiled and sweat for long before, who yet of their hire nothing have — peradventure shall not for a year more."

50. Then further I spake and said outright, "Methinks thy tale unreasonable. God's righteousness is ready and evermore awake, or else Holy Writ is but a fable. In the Psalter is a clear verse that declares a definite point: 'Thou rewardest each one according to his deserts, thou high King ever foreordaining.' Now if thou came to payment before him that endured the long day, then is the less in work the greater in reward; and the longer one works, the less he receives."

51. "Of more and less in God's Kingdom," the gentle one said, "there is no distinction. For there is each man paid alike, whether little or much be his worth. For the gentle Chieftain is no niggard, whether he deal soft or hard. He pours his gifts like water from a spring, or floods from an exhaustless deep. Large is the franchise of the man who ever stood in awe of Him that rescues from sin; 1 no bliss is withheld 2 from him,8 for the grace of God is great enough.

52. "But now, in order to overcome me, thou declarest that I have wrongly taken my penny here. Thou sayest that I that came too late, am not worthy so great hire. Where didst thou ever know any man abide so holy in his prayer that he in some way did not at length forfeit the reward of the clear heavens? And the older they were the oftener they did so: they left right and wrought wrong. Mercy and grace had to rescue them then, for the grace of God is great enough.

53. "But the innocent have enough of grace: as soon as they are born, lineally by the water of baptism they descend; then are they brought into the vineyard. Immediately the might of death causes their 4 day with darkness to decline. The gentle Lord then pays his servants that wrought no wrong ere they went thence. They did his commandment, they were within the vineyard; why should he not allow their labour, and pay them first at the end of the time, for the grace of God is great enough?

54. "Well known it is that all mankind first was wrought to perfect bliss. Our first father forfeited that through an apple that he bit upon. We were all damned for that meat to die in grief out of delight; and after to wend to the heat of hell, therein to dwell without respite. But there came a remedy quickly; rich blood ran on the rood so rough, and precious water then in that extremity; the grace of God waxed great enough.

55. "Enough there waxed out of that well, blood and water from the broad wound: the blood bought us from the bale of hell and delivered us from the second death. The water that followed the glaive so grimly ground is baptism, the sooth to tell, that washes away the dreadful guilts by which Adam in death us drowned. Now is there naught in the round world between us and bliss that he has not withdrawn; and in happy hour is bliss 5 restored, and the grace of God is great enough.

56. "Grace enough the man may have who sins then anew, if he repent; but with sorrow and sighing he must it crave, and bide the pain thereto annexed; but right reason, that can not err, saves evermore the innocent; it is a doom that God never gave - that ever the guiltless should be harmed. The guilty may contrition reach and be through mercy haled to grace; but he that never stooped to guile - that innocent one is safe and right.

57. "Thus I know well in this case, two men to save is reasonable and good: the righteous man shall see his face, the harmless person shall come to him. The Psalter in a passage says it thus: 'Lord, who shall climb to thy high hill, or rest within thy holy place?' Himself to answer he is not slow: 'Who hath done no harm with his hands, that is of heart both clean and light, there shall his step ever be established.'

The innocent is aye safe by right.

58. "The righteous man also shall approach that proper pile 6 who takes not his life in vain, nor flatters his neighbour with any guile. This righteous one Solomon saw plain, how kindly our King 7 gan him receive; by ways full straight he gan him lead, 8 and showed him the realm of God awhile, as though to say 'Lo, you levely isle! thou canst it win if thou be wight.' But certainly, without peril, the innocent is ave safe by right.

59. "Anent righteous men yet says one - David in the Psalter, if ever ye saw it - 'Lord, draw thy servant never into judgment, for none living to thee is justified." Therefore to court when thou shalt come where all our causes shall be tried, allege thy right to be received by this same speech that I have espied. But He on the cross that bloody died, grievously pierced through the hands, grant thee to pass, when thou art tried, by innocence, and not by right!

60. "Whoso can read aright, let him look on the book and be advised how Jesus walked with the former people, and men brought their children to him. For hap and health that from him went, they fairly prayed him to touch their children. His disciples wrongfully bade let be, and with their words stayed full many. Jesus then said to them sweetly, 'Away! Let the children to me forthwith; for such is the heavenly kingdom arrayed.' The innocent is aye safe by right.

61. "His mild disciples then Jesus to him called, and said his kingdom could no wight win but he came thither right as a child. Otherwise should he never come therein. Harmless, true, and undefiled, without mote or speck of soiling sin — when such as these knock on the door, quickly to them shall one unpin the gate. There is the bliss that can not cease, which the jeweller sought through precious stones, and sold all his goods, both linen and wool, to buy him a pearl that was flawless.

62. "This flawless pearl, that bought is dear, for which the jeweller gave all his goods, is like the realm of the clear heavens,' so said the Father of field and flood; for it is perfect, clean, and clear; and round without end, and blithe of mood, and common to all that righteous were. Lo, even in the middle of my breast it stood. My Lord the Lamb, that shed his blood, he placed it there in token of peace. I rede thee forsake the frantic world and purchase thy flawless pearl."

63. "Oh, flawless pearl, in pearls pure, that bears," said I, "the pearl of price, who formed for thee thy fair figure? Who wrought thy weeds he was full wise. Thy beauty came never from Nature; Pygmalion painted never thy face; nor did Aristotle with his learning tell the nature of these properties. Thy colour passes the fleur-de-lys; thine angel-bearing so purely courteous — tell me, bright one, what kind of office bears the pearl so flawless?"

64. "My flawless Lamb, who all redeemed," quoth she, "my dear Destiny, chose me, unmeet, to be his mate. At a certain time that union became fitting—when I went from your dark world. He called me to his favour: Come hither to me, my love so sweet, for mote nor spot is none in thee. He gave me might and beauty too; in his blood he washed my weeds on the dais, and crowned me clean in virginity, and clad me in flawless pearls."

65. "Why, flawless bride that shines so bright, that has dignities so rich and great, what manner of thing may this Lamb be, who would wed thee unto his wife? Over all others didst thou climb so high to lead with him so stately a life? So many a comely lady in great suffering for Christ has lived, and thou hast all those dear ones driven out, and from that marriage all others kept—thou all alone, so stout and strong—a matchless maid and a flawless!"

XIV

66. "Flawless," replied that lovely queen, "unblemished I am, without blot, and that may I properly maintain; but 'matchless queen' then said I not. The Lamb's wives in bliss are we, a hundred and forty thousand together, as in the Apocalypse it is clear; St. John saw them all in a group on the hill of Sion—that seemly spot. The Apostle saw them in spiritual dream arrayed for the wedding in that hilltop, the new city of Jerusalem.

67. "Of Jerusalem I will in speech expound, if thou wilt know what his condition is — my Lamb, my Lord, my dear Jewel, my Joy, my Bliss, my Lover free. The prophet Isaiah of him spoke piteously — for his sweetness: 'That glorious, guiltless One that men slew for no deed of felony. As a sheep to the slaughter then was he led; and as a lamb that the clippers take in the field, so closed he his mouth to every query, when the Jews judged him in Jerusalem.'

68. "In Jerusalem was my Lover slain, and rent on the rood by villains cruel; all our griefs full ready to bear, he took on himself our heavy cares; with buffets was his face flayed that was so fair to look upon; for sin he accounted himself as nothing—he who never had sin of his own to control.

For us he let himself be beaten and bent, and stretched upon the cruel beam, as meek as lamb that made no plaint. For us he suffered in Jerusalem;

69. "Jerusalem, Jordan, and Galilee, where baptized the good St. John — his words accorded with those of Isaiah. When Jesus gan toward him go, he said of him this prophecy: 'Lo, God's Lamb as true as stone, that does away the heavy sins that all this world has wrought.' Himself he wrought never one, yet on himself he took them all. His generation who can reckon, that died for us in Jerusalem?

70. "Thus in Jerusalem my Lover sweet twice was accounted a lamb by true record of either prophet, for his mood so meek and all his bearing. The third time is meetly described in the Apocalypse. Amidst the throne, where saints sat, the apostle John saw him clearly, reading the book with square leaves, where seven signets were set together. And at that sight each power gan quail, in hell, in earth and Jerusalem.

XV

71. "This Jerusalem Lamb had never stain of other hue than wholly fair, which speck nor spot might touch, for the white wool so rich and full." Therefore each soul that had never spot is to that Lamb a worthy wife; and, though each day a store he fetch, among us comes no other struggle nor strife, but each single one we would were five;—the more the merrier, so God me bless. In a great company our love thrives more in honour, and never less.

72. "Less of bliss can none bring to us who bear this pearl upon our breast, for they can have no stain who bear the crest of spotless pearl. Although our bodies moulder in the earth, and ye cry for sorrow without rest, we have thorough knowledge; by the death of One our hope is made perfect.² The Lamb gladdens us, our care is cast aside; he charms us all at every feast; ³ each one's bliss is full and best, and never one's honour the less.

73. "Lest thou disbelieve my seemly tale, it is written in a passage of the Apocalypse. 'I saw,' says John, 'the Lamb great and strong, stand on the mount of Sion, and with him maidens an hundred thousand, and four and forty thousand more. On all their foreheads written I found the Lamb's name, his Father's also. A cry from heaven I heard then like the voice of many waters running turbulently, and like the thunder leaping in the black crags; that sound was never less.

74. "'Nevertheless, though it was a great shout and a loud voice, a note full new I heard them play; right pleasant was it to listen to. As harpers harp on their harps, that new song they sang full clear, in echoing notes a gentle lay. Full fairly they took up the tune together, right before God's chair; and the four beasts that him obey, and the elders so stately of mien, their song they sang never the less.'

75. "Nevertheless no one was ever so cunning, for all the craft that ever he knew, that of that song he could sing one note, except the band that follows the Lamb; for they are redeemed, far removed from the earth, as new fruit due to God. And to the gentle Lamb are they appointed as being like to himself of face and hue; for lying nor untrue tale never touched their tongue for any distress. That spotless band can never depart from the flawless Master."

76. "Nevertheless let my thoughts have place," said I, "my Pearl. Though I ask searching questions, it is not to tempt thy wit so keen, who to Christ's chamber art chosen. I am but muck and mire, and thou a lovely rose so rich; and thou abidest here by this blissful bank where living pleasure can never fail. Now, oh being of simplicity compact, I would ask thee one thing expressly, and though I be rude as a churl, let my prayer avail nevertheless.

XVI

77. "Nevertheless earnestly I entreat you — if ye can allow it to be done, — as thou art glorious without gall, do not deny my rueful boon. Have ye no homes in castle wall, no manor where ye may meet and dwell? Thou tellest me of Jerusalem, the rich and royal, where David great was dight on throne; but in these groves it cannot lie; but in Judea it is, that noble dwelling. As ye are altogether ⁵ flaw-less, so should your dwellings be without blemish.

78. "This unblemished band thou speakest of, of thousands thronged so great a rout, it behoves you to have, without a doubt, a great city, - for ye are many. Such a lovely array of precious jewels, - 't were evil done that ye should dwell outside. And by these banks where I tarry I see no building anywhere about. I trow ye dwell alone and live retired, to look on the glory of this gracious stream. If thou hast other dwellings stout, now direct me to that fair castle."

79. "The castle thou meanest in the land of Judea," then said to me that precious being,1 "that is the city which the Lamb founded to suffer in sorely for man's sake -namely, the old Jerusalem; for there the old guilt was slaked. But the new Jerusalem, that came of God's sending, the apostle in the Apocalypse took for his theme. The Lamb devoid of all black spots has borne thither his fair band; and as his flock is without fleck, so is his city without

80. "Two cities are to be distinguished, both called Jerusalem nevertheless - which is to signify to you naught but 'city of God,' or 'sight of peace.'2 In the one our peace was made complete: the Lamb chose it to suffer in with pain. In the other is naught but peace to glean, that shall last for ever and aye. That is the city that we press to after our flesh is laid to rot; there glory and bliss shall ever increase for the band without a spot."

81. "Spotless maid so meek and mild," then said I to that lovely flower, "bring me to that fair dwelling, and let me see thy blissful bower." The bright one said: "That will God deny; thou may not enter within his hill. But of the Lamb I have obtained for thee through great favour a sight thereof. Outwardly thou may see that clean cloister, but inwardly not a foot; to step in the street thou hast no vigour, unless thou were clean without a spot.

bide, but glided by branches with lovely leaves, till I espied the hill, and gazed on the city as I pressed forward, revealed beyond the brook from me, that brighter shone than the sun with its shafts. In the Apocalypse is its fashion told, as describes it the apostle John.

83. As John the apostle saw it, so saw I that city of great renown, Jerusalem, so new and royally dight, as it was lighted from the heavens down. The burg was all of burned gold bright, like gleaming glass burnished clear, with gentle gems placed underneath; with bantels 8 twelve set on a base, and foundations twelve of rich work. Each tier was a different stone; as in the Apocalypse the apostle John fairly describes this same town.

84. As John in his writ named these stones, I knew their names after his count. Jasper was the first gem called, that I on the first base descried; it gleamed green in the lowest row; sapphire held the second place; then the chalcedony without flaw in the third tier shone pale and pure; the emerald was the fourth, so green of hue; the sardonyx the fifth stone; the sixth, the ruby, as in the Apocalypse the apostle John distinguished it. 85. John added yet the chrysolite as the seventh gem in the foundation; the eighth the beryl clear and white; the twin-hued topaz the ninth inlaid; the chrysophrase the tenth is called; the gentle jacinth the eleventh; the twelfth, the fairest of all, the amethyst, purple blent with blue. The wall above the bantels was of jasper that shone like glistening glass. I knew it by his devising in the Apocalypse, the apostle John's.

86. As John devised I saw further. These twelve steps were broad and steep. The fair city stood above them right square, as long, as broad, as high; the streets of gold like sheer glass, the wall of jasper that glinted like light; 4 the dwellings within were adorned with all kinds of jewelry that could be gathered together. Each side of the square stretched in this manner twelve furlongs space ere ever it ended, all squared in height and length and breadth, for John the apostle saw it measured.

XVIII

87. Yet more I saw as John describes it. Each side of that place had three gates; so twelve in succession I espied; the entrances covered with rich plates, and each gate of a margery, a perfect pearl that never fades. Each in scripture displayed a name of one of Israel's children following their dates - that is to say, as their birth was. The eldest ave first thereon was put. Such a light there gleamed in all the streets they needed neither sun nor moon.

88. Of sun nor moon they had no need: for God himself was their lamplight, the Lamb their lantern, forsooth. Through him gleamed the town all bright. Through wall and house my glances went, for their subtle clearness hindered in no wise the light. The high throne there might ye behold decked with all its array, as John the apostle well describes. The high God himself sat upon it. A river ran from out the throne, which was brighter than both the sun and moon.

89. Sun nor moon shone never so sweet as the plenteous flood from out that floor. Swiftly it swung through every street without filth or impurity or slime. Church was there none within the city; no chapel or temple was ever set there. The Almighty was their minster meet, the Lamb their sacrifice.1 The gates were never closed, but evermore open at each street; there none enters to take his abode that bears any blemish beneath the moon.

90. The moon can gain no might therein; too spotty she is, of nature 2 too grim; and also there is never night. Why should the moon there her compass climb, and strive to match the glorious light which shines upon that river's brink? The planets are in too poor a plight, and the very sun far too dim. About the water are trees full bright that early bear twelve fruits of life. Twelve times a year they bear full plenteously, renew themselves at each moon.

91. So great a marvel under the moon might no fleshly heart endure, as when I gazed upon that city, so wondrous was the fashion thereof. I stood as still as dazed quail for the strangeness of that glorious 3 vision, so that I felt neither rest nor toil, so was I ravished with the pure radiance. For I dare say with sure conscience, that had a man in the body endured that joy, though all clerks had him in care, his life were lost under the moon.

92. Right as the great moon rises ere the day-gleam has quite gone down, so suddenly in wondrous wise I was ware of a procession. The whole city of rich device was suddenly full without any summons of such virgins, clad in the same guise, as was my blissful one in her crown; and crowned were they all in the same fashion, adorned with pearls and white weeds; on each one's breast was bounden fair the blissful pearl with great4 delight.

93. With great delight they glided together in the golden streets that gleamed as glass; hundreds of thousands I wot there were, and all of a suit were their liveries. hard to know who had the gladdest mien. The Lamb proudly passed before, with his seven horns of clear red gold. Like precious pearls were his weeds. Toward the throne they go in company. Though they were many, no press ensued; but mild as modest maidens at mass, so passed they forth with great delight.

94. The delight that his coming inspired. too great were it to tell of. The elders, when he approached, fell prone at his feet. Legions of angels, gathered together, there cast incense of sweet smell. Then glory and glee were broached anew; and all sang for love of that fair Jewel; that sound might strike through the earth to hell, that the Virtues of heaven for joy gave forth. To love the Lamb in the midst of his troop I caught indeed a great delight.

95. Delight to describe the Lamb marvellously seized my mind. He was best, blithest, and most to prize, that ever I heard mentioned; so beauteous white were his weeds, his looks so simple, himself so courteous. But a wound full wide and wet showed near his heart, through the rent skin, and from his white side his blood sprang forth. Alas! thought I, who committed that crime? Any breast ought to have shrivelled for sorrow ere it had taken delight in such a deed.

96. The Lamb's delight none needed to doubt; that he was hurt and had a wound, in his bearing was never apparent, so glorious glad were his glances. I looked among his fair troop, beholding how they were filled with life, and there I saw my little queen, that I weened had stood by me in the glade. Lord, much mirth was it she made among her mates that were so white! That sight made me think of wading over in the delight of my love-longing.

XX

97. Delight drove me in eye and ear; my man's mind melted to madness; when I saw my lovely one, I would be there, though she were withdrawn beyond the water. I thought that nothing could frighten me, shake my resolution, or give me pause; and to start into the stream should none hinder me, to swim the space, though I drowned there. But from that design I was deterred. When I was about to start astray into the stream I was recalled from that plan; it was not my Prince's pleasure.

98. It pleased him not that I so pressed over marvellous meres in mad intent; though I was rash and rude in my haste, yet I was quickly restrained; for, right as I rushed to the bank, that very violence snatched me out of my dream. Then I wakened in that fair garden, my head laid upon the hill where my pearl fell to ground. I stretched and fell into a great fright; and sighing to myself I said, "Now may all be to that Prince's pleasure."

99. Yet it pleasured me ill to be outcast so suddenly from that fair region, from all those sights so beauteous and bright. A heavy longing struck me into a swoon, and ruefully then I began to cry: "O pearl," quoth I, "of great renown, it was dear to me, that which thou didst teach in this true vision." If it be a true and soothfast speech, that thou so roamest in garland gay, then well is me in this dungeon of grief, that thou art dear to that Prince.

100. Had I aye inclined to that Prince's favour, and yearned for no more than was given to me, and held me there in true intent, as the pearl prayed me that was so advanced—as sooner drawn to God's presence—to more of his mysteries had I been led. But ever would man seize more of fortune than may by right cleave to him; therefore my joy was soon taken away, and I cast from the country that lasts for aye. Lord, mad they are that strive against thee, or proffer thee aught against thy pleasure.

101. To please the Prince or gain his peace is full easy for the good Christian, for I have found him both day and night, a God, a Lord, a Friend full fine. On this mound this fortune I experienced, bowed down with pity for my pearl; and afterwards I betook it to God, in the dear joy and memory of Christ, whom, in the form of bread and wine, the priest shows us every day. May he grant us to be his lowly servants, and precious pearls unto his pleasure.

Amen. Amen.

SIR GAWAIN AND THE GREEN KNIGHT

FYTTE THE FIRST

1. After the siege and the assault had ceased at Troy, the city been destroyed and burned to brands and ashes, the warrior who wrought there the trains of treason was tried for his treachery, the truest on earth. This was Aeneas the noble: he and his high kindred afterwards conquered provinces, and became patrons of well nigh all the wealth in the West Isles. As soon as rich Romulus turns him to Rome, with great pride he at once builds that city, and names it with his own name, which it now has; Ticius turns to Tuscany and founds dwellings; Longobard raises homes in Lombardy; and, far over the French flood, Felix Brutus establishes Britain joyfully on many broad banks, where war and waste and wonders by turns have since dwelt, and many a swift interchange of bliss and woe.

2. And when this Britain was founded by this great hero, bold men loving strife bred therein, and many a time they wrought destruction. More strange things have happened in this land since these days than in any other that I know; but of all the British kings that built here, Arthur was ever the most courteous, as I have heard tell. Therefore, I mean to tell of an adventure in the world, which some count strange and extraordinary even among the wonders of Arthur. If ye will listen to this lay but a little while, I will tell it forthright as I heard it told in town, as it is set down in story that cannot be changed, long written tourneyed betimes, jousted full gaily; then returned these gentle knights to the court to make carols.2 For there the feast was held full fifteen days alike with all the meat and the mirth that men could devise. Such a merry tumult, glorious to hear; joyful din by day, dancing at night. All was high joy in halls and chambers with lords and ladies as pleased them best. With all the weal in the world they dwelt there together, the most famous knights save only Christ, the loveliest ladies that ever had life, and he, the comeliest of kings, who holds the court. For all this fair company were in their prime in the hall, the happiest troop under heaven with the proudest of kings. Truly it would be hard to name anywhere so brave a band.

4. When New Year was fresh and but newly come, the court was served double on the dais. As soon as the king with his knights was come into the hall, the chauting in the chapel came to an end; loud was the cry there of clerks and others. Noel was celebrated anew, shouted full often; and afterwards the great ones ran about to take handsel; 3 called aloud for New Year's gifts, paid them out briskly, busily discussed the gifts; ladies laughed full loud, though they had lost; and he that won was not wroth, that may ve well trow. All this mirth they made till the meat time. When they had washed, worthily they went to their seats, the best man ever above, as it best behoved. Queen Guinevere full beauteous was set in the midst, placed on the rich dais adorned all about. Fine silk at the sides, a canopy over her of precious cloth of Toulouse, and tapestries of Tars.4 that were embroidered and set with the best gems that money could buy. Truly no man could say that he ever beheld a comelier lady than she, with her dancing gray eyes.

5. But Arthur would not eat till all were served. He was so merry in his mirth, and somewhat childlike in his manner; his life pleased him well; he loved little either to lie long or to sit long, so busied him his young blood and his wild brain. And another custom moved him also, that he through chivalry had taken up; he would never eat upon such a dear day before he was told an uncouth tale of some adventurous thing, of some great marvel that he could believe, of ancient heroes, of arms, or of other adventures; or unless some person demanded of him a sure knight to join with him in jousting, to incur peril, to risk life against life, trusting each in the other, leaving the victory to fortune. This was the king's custom whenever he held court at each goodly feast among his free company in the hall. And so with undaunted face he strides stoutly to his seat on that New Year, making great mirth with everybody.

4 Oriental figured stuff.

6. Thus the great king stands waiting before the high table, talking of trifles full courteously. The good Gawain was placed there beside Guinevere, and Agravain of the Hard Hand sat on the other side, both of them the king's sister's sons and full sure knights. Bishop Baldwin at the top begins the table, and Ywain, Urien's son, ate by himself. These were placed on the dais and honorably served, and after them many a good man at the side tables. Then the first course came in with blare of trumpets, which were hung with many a bright banner. A new noise of kettle-drums with the noble pipes, wild and stirring melodies wakened the echoes; that many a heart heaved full high at their tones. Dainties of precious meats followed, foison of fresh viands, and on so many dishes that it was difficult to find place before the people to set on the cloth the silver that held the several courses. Each man as he himself preferred partook without hesitation. Every two 1 had twelve dishes between them, good beer and bright wine both.

7. Now will I tell you no more of their service, for everybody must well understand that there was no lack of opportunity for the people to take their food. Another noise full new suddenly drew nigh, for scarcely had the music ceased a moment, and the first course been properly served in the court, than there burst in at the hall door an awesome being, in height one of the tallest men in the world; from the neck to the waist so square and so thick was he, and his loins and his limbs so long and so great, that half giant I believed him to have been, or, at any rate, the largest of men, and withal the handsomest in spite of his bulk, that ever rode; for though his back and breast were so vast, yet his belly and waist were properly slim; and all his form according, full fairly shaped. At the hue of his noble face men wondered: he carried himself in hostile fashion and was entirely green, 140

8. All green was this man and his clothing; a straight coat sat tight to his sides; a fair mantle above, adorned within; the lining showed, with costly trimming of shining white fur; and such his hood also, that was caught back from his locks and lay on his shoulders, the hem well stretched; 8 hose of the same green, that clung to his calf; and clean spurs under, of bright gold upon silk bands richly barred, and shoes 4 on his shanks as the hero rides. And all his vesture verily was clean verdure, both the bars of his belt, and the other beauteous stones that were set in fine array about himself and his saddle, worked on silk. It would be too difficult to tell the half of the trifles that were embroidered there, with birds and flies, with gay gauds of green, - the gold ever in the middle; the pendants of the poitrel, the proud crupper, the bits, - and all the metal was enamelled; the stirrups that he stood on were coloured the same, and his saddle bow likewise, and his fine reins 5 that glimmered and glinted all of green stones. The horse that he rode on was of the same colour too, a green horse, great and thick, a steed full stiff to guide, in gay em-master.

9. This hero was splendidly dressed in green; and the hair of his head matched that of his horse; 6 fair flowing locks enfolded his shoulders; a beard as big as a bush hung broidered bridle, and one right dear to his suite."

² It seems to make somewhat better sense if we transpose, as has here been done, lines 132 and 133; otherwise this passage means that a second course came in heralded by new music.

³ Translation doubtful. 4 Word doubtful.

⁶ Translating hors swete of the MS. as "horse's over his breast; and it, together with his splendid hair that reached from his head, was trimmed evenly all round above his elbows, so that half his arms were caught thereunder in the manner of a king's hood,1 that covers his neck. The mane of that great horse was much like it, very curly and combed, with knots full many folded in with gold wire about the fair green, - always one knot of the hair, another of gold. The tail and the forelock were twined in the same way, and both bound with a band of bright green, set with full precious stones the whole length of the dock, and then tied up with a thong in a tight knot; where rang many bells full bright of burnished gold. Such a steed in the world, such a hero as rides him, was never beheld in that hall before that time. His glances were like bright lightning, so said all that saw him. It seemed as if no man could endure under his blows.

10. He had neither helm nor hauberk, nor gorget, armour nor breastplate, nor shaft nor shield to guard or to smite; but in his one hand he had a holly twig, that is greenest when groves are bare, and an axe in his other, a huge and prodigious one, a weapon merciless almost beyond description; the head had the vast length of an ellyard, the blade all of green steel and of beaten gold: the bit 2 brightly burnished, with a broad edge, as well shaped for cutting as sharp razors. The stern warrior gripped it by 3 the steel of its stout staff, which was wound with iron to the end of the wood and all engraven with green in beauteous work. A lace was lapped about it, that was fastened at the head, and tied up often along the helve, with many precious tassels attached on rich embroidered buttons of the bright green. This hero turns him in and enters the hall, riding straight to the high dais, fearless of mischief. He greeted never a one, but looked loftily about, and the first word that he uttered was: "Where is the governor of this company? Gladly I would see that hero and speak with him."

He cast his eye on the knights and rode

fiercely up and down, stopped and gan ponder who was there the most renowned.

11. All gazed fixedly on the man, for everybody marvelled what it might mean, that a knight and a horse could have such a colour: as green grown as the grass, and greener, it seemed; shining brighter than green enamel on gold. All were amazed who stood there, and stalked nearer to him, with all the wonder in the world what he would do; for many marvels had they seen, but such never before. Therefore for phantom and faery the folk there deemed it; and for that reason many a noble warrior was slow to answer, and all were astonished at his voice and sat stone still in a deep silence through the rich hall. Their voices 4 sank as though they had suddenly fallen asleep. I deem, however, that it was not all for fear, but somewhat for courtesy. But now let him to whom all defer undertake the wight.

12. Then Arthur before the high dais beheld that adventure, and saluted the stranger properly, for never was he afraid, and said, "Sir, welcome indeed to this place. I am called Arthur, the head of this hostel. Light courteously down and tarry, I pray thee; and whatso thy will is we shall wit after."

"Nay, so help me he that sits on high," quoth the hero. "To dwell any time in this house was not my errand; but because the fame of this people is lifted up so high. and thy town and thy men are held the best. the stoutest in steel gear on steeds to ride, the wightest and the worthiest of the world's kind, and proved opponents in other proper sports; and here courtesy is known, as I have heard tell, — it is this that has enticed me hither certainly at this time. You may be sure by this branch that I bear here that I pass in peace and seek no quarrel; for if I had set out with a company in fighting fashion, I have a hauberk at home and a helm both, a shield and a sharp spear shining bright, and other weapons to wield, I ween well also; but since I wished no war, my weeds are softer. Now if thou be as bold as all men tell, thou wilt grant me graciously the game that I ask."

Arthur knew how to answer, and said: "Sir courteous knight, if it is battle that thou cravest, thou shalt not fail of a fight here."

2 "Bit" is still used for the cutting edge of an axe.

⁴ Possibly "faces" or "looks."

13. "Nay, I demand no fight; in faith I tell thee there are but beardless children about on this bench. If I were hasped in arms on a high steed there is no man here to match me, their might is so weak. Therefore I crave in this court a Christmas game, for it is Yule and New Year, and here are many gallants. If there be a man in this house who holds himself so hardy, is so bold in his blood, so rash in his head, that he dares stiffly strike one stroke for another, I shall give him as my gift this rich gisarm, this axe, that is heavy enough, to handle as he likes; and I shall abide the first blow as bare as I sit. If any warrior he wight enough to try what I propose, let him leap lightly to me and take this weapon - I quit-claim it forever, let him keep it as his own - and I shall stand him a stroke firmly on this floor. At another time, by our Lady, thou wilt grant me the boon of dealing him another blow; I will give him respite of a twelvementh and a day. Now hie, and let us see quickly if any herein dare say aught."

14. If he had astonished them at first, stiller were then all the retainers in hall, the high and the low. The warrior on his steed settled himself in his saddle, and fiercely his red eyes he reeled about; bent his thick brows, shining green; and waved his beard, awaiting whoso would rise. When none would answer him he coughed aloud, stretched himself haughtily and began to speak; "What! Is this Arthur's house," said the hero then, "that is famous through so many realms? Where is now your pride and your conquests, your fierceness, and your wrath and your great words? Now is the revel and the renown of the Round Table overcome by the word of a single man; for all tremble for dread without a

With this he laughed so loud that the lord grieved; the blood shot for shame into his fair face. He waxed as wroth as the wind; and so did all that were there. The king so keen of mood then stood near that proud man.

15. "Sir," said he, "by heaven thy asking is foolish; and as thou hast demanded folly, it behooves thee to find it. I know no man that is aghast of thy great words. Give me now thy gisarm, for God's sake, and I will grant thy boon that thou hast bidden."

Quickly he leaped to him and caught at his hand; and the other alights fiercely on foot. Now Arthur has his axe, and grips the helve; he whirls it sternly about as if he meant to strike with it. The bold stranger stood upright before him, higher than any in the house by a head and more; with stern cheer he stood there, stroked his beard, and with cool countenance drew down his coat, no more afraid or dismayed for Arthur's great strokes than if some one had brought him a drink of wine upon the bench.

Gawain, that sat by the queen, turned to the king: "I beseech now with all courtesy that this affair might be mine."

16. "Would ye, worthy lord," quoth Gawain to the king, "bid me step from this bench and stand by you there, - that I without rudeness might leave this table, and that my liege lady liked it not ill - I would come to your help before your rich court; for methinks it is obviously unseemly that such an asking is made so much of in your hall, even though ye yourself be willing to take it upon you, while so many bold ones sit about you on the bench; than whom, I ween, none under heaven are higher of spirit, nor more mighty on the field where strife is reared. I am the weakest, I know, and feeblest of wit; and to tell the truth there would be the least loss in my life. I am only to praise forasmuch as ye are my uncle; no other nobility than your blood know I in my body. And since this adventure is so foolish, it belongs not to you; I have asked it of you first; give it to me. Let this great court decide 1 if I have not spoken well."

The heroes took counsel together and they all gave the same advice, — to free the crowned king and give the game to

17. Then the king commanded Gawain to rise from the table; and he right quickly stood up and made himself ready, kneeled down before the king and took the weapon; and Arthur lovingly left it to him, lifted up his hand and gave him God's blessing, and gladly bade him be hardy both of heart and of hand. "Take care, cousin," quoth the king, "that thou give him a cut; and if thou handle him properly, I readily believe that thou shalt endure the blow which he shall give after."

Gawain goes to the man with gisarm in hand; and he boldly awaits him, shrinking never a whit. Then speaks to Sir Gawain the knight in the green; "Rehearse we our agreement before we go farther. First I conjure thee, hero, how thou art called, that thou tell me it truly, so that I may believe it."

"In good faith," quoth the knight, "Gawain am I called, who give you this buffet, whatever befalls after; and at this time twelvementh I am to take from thee another with whatever weapon thou wilt, and from no wight else alive."

The other answers again, "Sir Gawain, so thrive I as I am heartily glad that thou shalt give this blow."

18. "By Gog," quoth the green knight, "Sir Gawain, it delights me that I am to get at thy fist what I have requested here; and thou hast readily and truly rehearsed the whole of the covenant that I asked of the king, save that thou shalt assure me, sir, by thy troth, that thou wilt seek me thyself wheresoever thou thinkest I may be found upon the earth, and fetch for thyself such wages as thou dealest me today before this rich company."

"Where should I seek thee?" quoth Gawain. "Where is thy place? I know never where thou livest, by him that wrought me; nor do I know thee, knight, thy court, nor thy name. But tell me truly the way and how thou art called, and I will use all my wit to win my way thither,—and that I swear thee, for a sooth, and by my sure troth."

"New Year will suffice for that; no more is needed now," quoth the man in green to Gawain the courteous. "To tell the truth, after I have received thy tap, and thou hast smitten me well, I shall promptly inform thee of my house and my home and mine own name. Then thou mayest inquire about my journey and hold promise; and if I speak no speech, then thou speedest the better, for thou mayest linger at ease in thy land and seek no further. Take now thy grim tool to thee and let us see how thou knockest."

"Gladly, sir, for sooth," quoth Gawain as he strokes his axe.

19. The green knight on the ground prepared himself properly. With the head a little bowed he disclosed the flesh. His long. lovely locks he laid over his crown, and let the naked nape of his neck show for the blow. Gawain gripped his axe and gathered it on high; the left foot he set before on the ground, and let the axe light smartly down on the naked flesh, so that the sharp edge severed the giant's bones, and shrank through the clear flesh 2 and sheared it in twain, till the edge of the brown steel bit into the ground. The fair head fell from the neck to the earth, and many pushed it with their feet where it rolled forth. The blood burst from the body and glistened on the green. Yet never faltered nor fell the hero for all that; but stoutly he started up with firm steps, and fiercely he rushed forth where the heroes stood, caught his lovely head, and lifted it up straightway, Then he turned to his steed, seized the bridle, stepped into the steel bow and strode aloft, holding the head in his hand by the hair; and as soberly the man sat in his saddle as if no mishap had ailed him, though he was headless on the spot. He turned his trunk about - that ugly body that bled. Many a one of them thought that he had lost his reason.

20. For he held the head straight up in his hand; turned the face toward the highest on the dais; and it lifted up the eyelids and looked straight out, and spoke thus much with its mouth, as ye may now hear: -"Look Gawain, that thou be ready to go as thou hast promised, and seek lovally, hero, till thou find me; as thou hast promised in this hall in the hearing of these knights. To the green chapel go thou, I charge thee, to receive such a blow as thou hast dealt. Thou deservest to be promptly paid on New Year's morn.8 As the knight of the green chapel many men know me; therefore, if thou strivest to find me, thou shalt never fail. And so come, or it behooves thee to be called recreant."

With a wild rush he turned the reins, and flew out at the hall door—his head in his hand—so that the fire of the flint flew from the foal's hoofs. To what country he vanished knew none there; no more than they wist whence he was come. The king and Gawain roared with laughter at that green man; but this adventure was reckoned a marvel among men.

21. Though the courteous king wondered in his heart, he let no semblance be seen, but said aloud to the comely queen with courteous speech, "Dear dame, today be never dismayed; well becoming are such tricks at Christmas, in lack of entertainment, to laugh and sing about among these pleasant carols of knights and ladies. Nevertheless I may well go to my meat, for I can not deny that I have seen a marvel." He glanced at Sir Gawain and said cheerfully, "Now, sir, hang up thine axe; it has hewn enough." And it was put above the dais to hang on the tapestry where all men might marvel at it, and by it avouch the wonderful happening. Then they turned to the board, these heroes together - the king and the good knight - and the keen men served them double of all dainties, as was most fitting; with all manner of meat, and minstrelsy both. They spent that day in joy until it came to an end. Now take care, Sir Gawain, that thou blench not for the pain to prosecute this adventure that thou hast taken on hand.

FYTTE THE SECOND

1. This hansel of adventures had Arthur at the beginning, in the young year, since he vearned to hear boasting. Although there was little news when they went to their seats, now they are provided with stern work, their hands quite full. Gawain was glad to begin those games in the hall; but it would not be surprising if the end were heavy; for though men be merry in mind when they have much drink, yet a year runs full swiftly, and yields never the same; the beginning full seldom matches the end. And so this Yule went by, and the year after it. each season in turn following the other. After Christmas came the crabbed Lent, that tries the flesh with fish and more simple food. But then the weather of the world quarrels with winter, and though the cold still clings, the clouds lift; copiously descends the rain in warm showers, and falls upon the fair earth. Flowers show there; green are the garments both of fields and of groves; birds hurry to build, and lustily they sing for the solace of the soft summer, that follows thereafter. Blossoms swell into bloom in rows rich and rank; and levely notes are heard in the beauteous wood.

2. After the season of summer with the soft winds, when Zephyrus blows on seeds and herbs, happy is the plant that waxes then, when the dank dew drops from the leaves, to await the blissful glance of the bright sun. But then harvest hastens and hardens it soon: warns it to wax full ripe against the winter. He drives with drought the dust to rise, - from the face of the earth to fly full high. The wild wind of the welkin wrestles with the sun. The leaves fall from the bough and light on the ground. The grass becomes all gray that erst was green. Then all ripes and rots that which formerly flourished; and thus runs the year in vesterdays many; and winter returns again without asking any man,2 till the Michelmas moon has come in wintry wise. Then thinks Gawain full soon of his anxious

3. Yet till Allhallows day with Arthur he lingers; and Arthur made a feast on that festival for the hero's sake, with great and gay revel of the Round Table. Knights full courteous and comely ladies all for love of that man were in sorrow: but nevertheless they spoke only of mirth; and many a joyless one there made jests for his gentle sake. After meat he mournfully addresses his uncle, and speaks of his passage, and openly he says - "Now, liege lord of my life, leave I ask of you. Ye know the cost of this case; I do not care to tell you even a trifle of its dangers; 8 but I am ready to start for the fray no later than tomorrow morn, to seek the man in the green, as God will guide me."

Then the best of the castle gathered together, Ywain and Erec, and others full many, Sir Dodinel de Sauvage, the Duke of Clarence, Lancelot and Lyonel and Lucan the Good, Sir Bors and Sir Bedever, big men both, and many other proud ones, with Mador de la Port. All this company of the court came nearer to the king, to counsel the knight, with care at their hearts. There was much deep grief felt in the hall that so worthy a one as Gawain should go on that errand, to endure a sorry dint and deal none himself with his brand. But the knight ever made good cheer, and said, "Why should I swerve from stern and strange destiny? What can a man do but try?"

4. He lingered there all that day, and on the morn made ready. Early he asked for his arms, and they were all brought. First a carpet of Toulouse was stretched over the floor, and much was the gilt gear that gleamed upon it. The brave man stepped thereon and handled the steel, clad in a doublet of costly Tars, and afterwards a well wrought hood, closed on top and bound within with a glistening white fur. Then they put the sabatons upon the hero's feet, lapped his legs in steel with fair greaves, to which were attached well polished poleynes2 fastened about his knees with knots of gold. Fine cuisses then, that well enclosed his thick, brawny thighs, they attached with thongs. Next the decorated burnie 3 of bright steel rings upon precious stuff encased the hero, and well burnished braces upon his two arms, with elbow-pieces goodly and gay and gloves of plate, and all the goodly gear that might avail him at that time, with rich coat armour, gold spurs well fastened, and a sure brand girt about his side by a silken sash.

5. When he was hasped in arms his harness was rich; the least latchet or loop gleamed with gold. So, harnessed as he was, he heard his mass, offered and adored at the high altar. Then he came to the king and his court; courteously took his leave of lords and ladies; and they kissed him, and convoyed him, entrusting him to Christ. By that time was Gringolet ready, and girt with a saddle that gleamed full gaily with many gold fringes; everywhere nailed anew, prepared for that emergency. The bridle, barred about, was bound with bright gold; the decoration of the breastplate and of the fine housings, the crupper and caparison, accorded with the saddle-bow, and all was adorned with rich red gold nails, that glittered and gleamed like the gleam of the sun. Then he took the helm and quickly kissed it. It was stoutly stapled and stuffed within; it was high on his head, hasped behind, with a light urison 4 over the ventail, 5 embroidered and bound with the best gems on a broad silken border; and birds on the seams like painted popinjays ⁶ preening themselves here and there; turtle-doves and true-loves ⁷ thickly interlaced. As many birds there were as had been in town for seven winters. The circlet that surrounded his crown was even more precious — a device of gleaming diamonds.

6. Then they showed him the shield, that was of sheer gules, with the pentangle painted in pure gold. He took it by the baldric and cast it about his neck; and it became the hero passing fair. And why the pentangle pertains to that noble prince I mean to tell you, though it should delay me. It is a sign that Solomon set formerly as a token of truth, by its own right, for it is a figure that holds five points, and each line overlaps and locks in another; and throughout it is endless; and the English call it everywhere, as I hear, the endless knot. Therefore it suits this knight and his clear arms, forever faithful in five things. and in each of them five ways. Gawain was known for good and as refined gold, devoid of every villainy, adorned with virtues. Therefore, the new 8 pentangle he bore on shield and coat, as the man most true of speech and the knight gentlest of behaviour.

7. First, he was found faultless in his five wits; and again the hero failed never in his five fingers; and all his affiance in this world was in the five wounds that Christ received on the cross, as the creed tells; and wheresoever this man was hard bestead in the mêlée his pious thought was in this above all other things - to take all his strength from the five joys that the courteous Queen of Heaven had of her child. For this cause the knight had her image comely painted in the greater half of his shield, that when he looked down thereupon, his courage never abated. The fifth five that I find that the hero used, were generosity and fellowship above all things, his purity and his courtesy that never swerved, and pity that passes all qualities. These very five were more surely set upon that warrior than upon any other. Now all these 9 were established fivefold in this knight, and each one was fastened in another that had no end, and they were fastened on five points that never failed, nor met anywhere, nor sundered either, but finished always without end at each corner, wherever the game began or concluded. Therefore on his fair shield this knot was painted royally with red gold upon red gules. That is the true pentangle as the people properly call it. Now was the gay Gawain armed. He caught up his lance right there, and with a good-day he went for evermore.

8. He spurred his steed with the spurs and sprang on his way so swiftly that the stone struck out fire after him. All who saw the gentle man sighed in heart, and the heroes said all together to each other in their love for that comely knight, "By Christ, it is a shame that thou, hero, must be lost, who art so noble of life. In faith it is not easy to find his match upon the earth. To have acted more warily would have been better counsel; and to have made you dear one a duke; it would well become him to be a brilliant leader of people here. This would have been better than to have him utterly destroyed, given over 1 to an elvish man for mere boasting pride. Who ever knew any king to take such counsel as to suffer knights to be so tricked for a Christmas game." Much warm water welled from eyes when that seemly sire departed from the dwellings that day. He made no stop, but wightly went his way; many a tiresome path he rode, as I heard the book tell.

9. Now rides this hero, Sir Gawain, through the realm of Logres in God's behalf, though to him it seemed no play. Oft alone companionless he lodged at night in places where he found not before him the fare that he liked. No company had he but his foal by friths and downs, nor nobody but God to talk with by the way; till that he approached nigh unto North Wales. He kept all the isles of Anglesey on the left side, and fared over the fords by the forelands, over at the Holy Head, till he again took land in the wilderness of Wirrel. There dwelt but few that loved either God or man with good heart. And ever as he fared he asked of men that he met if they had heard any talk of a green knight of the green chapel in any spot thereabout, and all nicked him with nay, that never in their life saw they any man of such green hue. The knight took strange roads by many a rough bank. His cheer changed full oft ere he saw that chapel.

1 The meaning of the verb is doubtful.

10. Many a cliff he overclimbed in strange countries; far sundered from his friends, lonely he rode. At each ford or water where the hero passed it were strange if he found not a fee before him, and that so foul and so fell that it behooved him to fight. So many marvels in the mountains there the man found that it were too tedious to tell of the tenth part. Sometimes he warred with serpents, and with wolves also, sometimes with savages that dwelt in the cliffs: both with bulls and bears, and boars sometimes; and giants that assailed him from the high fell. Had he not been doughty and stern, and served God, doubtless he had been dead and slain full oft. But the warfare tried him not so much but that the winter was worse, when the cold clear water shed from the clouds, and froze ere it might fall to the barren earth. Near slain with the sleet he slept in his iron more nights than enough on naked rocks, where clattering from the crest the cold burn ran, and hung high over his head in hard icicles. Thus in peril and pain and plights full hard through the country wanders this knight all alone till Christmas Eve. At that tide to Mary he made his moan that she might direct his riding and lead him to some dwelling.

11. Merrily on the morn he rides by a mount into a forest full deep, that was strangely wild. High hills were on each side, and woods beneath of hoar oaks full huge, a hundred together. The hazel and the hawthorn were twined all together, covered everywhere with rough ragged moss, with many unblithe birds upon bare twigs that piteously piped there for pain of the cold. The knight upon Gringolet rides all alone under the boughs, through many a moss and mire, mourning for his trials, lest he should never survive to see the service of that Sire who on that very night was born of a lady to quell our pain. And therefore sighing he said: "I beseech thee, Lord, and Mary, that is mildest mother so dear, for some harbour where I might properly hear mass and thy matins tomorrow. Meekly I ask it, and thereto earnestly I pray my pater and ave and creed." He rode in his prayer and lamented for his misdeeds. Oft-times he blessed himself, and said, "Christ's cross speed me."

12. The hero had not crossed himself more than thrice ere he was aware in the wood of a dwelling on a hill, above a clearing, on a mount, hidden under the boughs of many a huge tree about the ditches; a castle the comeliest that ever knight owned, set on a prairie, a park all about, with its beautiful palace, pinnacled full thick, and surrounded with many a tree for more than two miles. The hero gazed at the castle on that one side as it shimmered and shone through the fair oaks. Then he humbly doffed his helm and devoutly he thanked Jesus and St. Julian - who are both gentle - who courteously had directed him and harkened to his cry. "Now bon hostel," quoth the man, "I beseech you yet!" Then he spurs Gringolet with his gilt heels, and he full fortunately takes the way to the chief road, that soon brought the hero to the bridgeend in haste. The bridge was securely lifted, the gates locked fast; the walls were well arrayed; no wind blast did it fear.

13. The hero that sat on his horse, abode on the bank of the deep double ditch that stretched to the place. The wall sank in the water wondrous deep, and again a full huge height it towered aloft, of hard hewn stone up to the top courses, corbelled under the battlement in the best manner; and above fine watch-towers ranged along, with many good loop-holes that showed full clean. A better barbican that hero never looked upon. And farther within he beheld the high hall, with towers set full thickly about, and fair and wondrous high filioles with carved tops cunningly devised. Chalk-white chimneys enough he saw that gleamed full white on the battlements. So many painted pinnacles were set everywhere, built so thick among the crenellations of the castle, that it verily appeared cut out of paper. Fair enough it seemed to the noble knight on his horse if he could only attain the shelter within, to harbour in that hostel, while the holiday lasted. He called, and soon there appeared on the wall a right pleasant porter who took his message and greeted the knight errant.

14. "Good sir," quoth Gawain, "would you go my errand to the high lord of this house to crave harbour?"

"Yea, by Peter," quoth the porter; "and truly I trow that ye are welcome, sir, to dwell while you like."

Then the man went again quickly, and a crowd of folk with him, to receive the knight. They let down the great draw and eagerly poured out, and kneeled down on their knees upon the cold earth to welcome the hero as it seemed to them proper. They opened up wide the broad gate for him and he raised them courteously, and rode over the bridge. Several attendants held his saddle while he alighted, and afterwards good men enough stabled his steed. Then knights and squires came down to bring this hero joyfully into the hall. When he lifted up his helm people enough hurried to take it at his hand, in order to serve the courteous one; his sword and his shield they took too. Then he greeted full courteously the knights each one; and many a proud man pressed there to honour that prince. All hasped in his high weeds, they led him to the hall, where a fair fire burned fiercely upon the hearth. Then the lord of the people came from his chamber to meet courteously the man on the floor. He said. "Ye are welcome to wield as you like what is here; all is your own to have at your will and commandment." "Gramercy," quoth Gawain. "Christ reward you for it." Like glad heroes either folded the other in his arms.

15. Gawain looked on the man who greeted him so goodly, and thought it a bold hero that owned the castle, a huge warrior for the nonce, and of great age. Broad and bright was his beard, and all beaver-hued. Firm-gaited was he on his stalwart limbs; with a face as fierce as fire, and a free speech; and to the hero he seemed well suited indeed to govern a nation of good people.

The lord turned to a chamber and promptly commanded to give Gawain a retinue to serve him in lowly wise; and there were ready at his bidding men enough. who brought him to a bright bower where the bedding was curtains of pure silk with clear gold hems, and covertures right curious with comely borders, adorned above with bright fur. Curtains running on ropes, red gold rings, tapestries of Toulouse and Tars hung on the wall, and under foot on the floor of the same pattern. There with mirthful speeches the hero was despoiled of his burnie and of his bright weeds. Quickly men brought him rich robes that he might pick and choose the best for his change. As soon as he took one and was wrapped therein, that sat upon him seemly with sailing skirts, the hero by his visage verily seemed to well nigh every man in looks glowing and lovely in all his limbs; it seemed to them that Christnever made a comelier knight. Wherever in the world he were, it seemed as if he might be a prince without peer in the field where fell men fight.

16. A chair before the chimney, where charcoal burned, was prepared for Sir Gawain richly with cloths and cushions, upon counterpanes that were both fine. And then a beauteous mantle was cast on the man, of a brown fabric richly embroidered, and fairly furred within with the best skins, all of ermine; the hood of the same. And he sat on that settle in seemly rich attire, and warmed him thoroughly; and then his cheer mended. Soon a table was raised up on trestles full fair, and set with a clean cloth that showed clear white, napkins, salt-cellar, and silver spoons. The hero washed when he would and went to his meat. Men served him seemly enough, - double fold as was proper - with pottages various and suitable, seasoned in the best manner; and many kinds of fish, some baked in bread, some broiled on the coals, some boiled, some in sauces savoured with spices; and always discourse so pleasant that it pleased the warrior. Full freely and often the hero called it a feast right courteously, when all the retainers together praised him as courteous.2 "Do this penance now, and soon things will be better!" Right mirthful was he for the wine that went to his head.

17. Then they questioned and inquired sparingly in skilful queries put to the prince himself, till he courteously acknowledged that he was of the court which noble Arthur holds alone, who is the rich, royal king of the Round Table; and that it was Gawain himself that sits in the house, by chance come for that Christmas. When the lord had learned that he had that hero, he laughed aloud, so dear it seemed to him; and all the men in the castle made much joy at appearing promptly in the presence of him who contains in his own person all worth and prowess and gracious traits, and is ever praised; above all the men in the world his renown is the greatest. Each warrior said full softly to his companion—"Now shall we see courteous turns of behaviour, and the blameless forms of noble talking; what profit there is in speech may we learn without asking since we have taken that fine father of nurture. God has indeed given us his grace, who grants us to have such a guest as Gawain, on account of whose birth men sit and sing for joy. This hero will now teach us what distinguished manners are; I think that those who hear him will learn how to make love."

18. When the dinner was done and the dear ones risen, the time was nigh arrived at the night. Chaplains took their way to the chapels, and rang full loudly, as they should, to the melodious evensong of the high time. The lord turns thither, and the lady also. Into a comely closet daintily she enters. Gawain joyfully proceeds, and goes thither straightway. The lord takes him by the mantle and leads him to his seat, recognizes him openly and calls him by his name, and says he is the welcomest wight in the world. And Gawain thanked him thoroughly and either embraced the other, and they sat soberly together during the service. Then the lady desired to look on the knight, and came from her closet with many fair maidens. But she was fairer than all the others in flesh and face, in skin and form, in complexion and demeanour - more beautiful than Guinevere, it seemed to the hero. He walked through the chancel to greet that gracious one. Another lady led her by the left hand, that was older than she; an ancient lady it seemed, and one highly honoured by the knights about her; but unlike to look on were the ladies, for if the younger was fair, yellow was the other. Rich red on the one bloomed everywhere; rough wrinkled cheeks rolled on the other. The kerchiefs of the one broidered with many clear pearls, openly displayed her breast and her bright throat, which shone clearer than snow that falls on the hills. The other covered her neck with a gorget, that wrapped her black chin in milk-white pleats. Her forehead was completely enveloped in silken folds, adorned and tricked 8 with small ornaments:

¹ In the old meaning of fireplace, fire-back, or grate.
2 Possibly the host, and not Gawain, is the subject of this sentence, which then might be translated: "Full freely and oft the host called it a feast (i.e. made the feaster welcome) right courteously, when all the retainers praised him (Gawain or the host?) as courteous."
In the next two sentences the host is pretty certainly the subject. With this interpretation of. Macbeth, III, 4, 33: "The feast is sold that is not often vouch'd, while
't is a-making, 't is given with welcome."

³ The precise, but not the general, meaning of the two participles is uncertain.

and naught was bare of that lady but the black brows, the two eyes, the nose, and the naked lips; and those were ugly to behold and oddly bleared. A gracious lady in the land one might call her forsooth! Her body was short and thick, her hips round 1 and broad. More pleasant to look on was the being she led.

19. When Gawain looked on that beauteous one who gazed graciously, he took leave of the lord, and went toward them. The elder he saluted, bowing full low; the lovelier he took a little in his arms; he kissed her comely, and knightly he greeted her. They welcomed him, and he quickly asked to be their servant if it pleased them. They took him between them and led him conversing to the fireplace in the parlour; and straightway they called for spices, which men speeded to bring them unsparingly, and the pleasant wine therewith each time. The lord leaped merrily up full often, and saw to it that the mirth never faltered. Gaily he snatched off his hood and hung it on a spear, and exhorted them to win it as a prize - he to have it2 who could make the most mirth that Christmas tide. "And I shall try, by my faith, with the help of my friends 8 to compete with the best, ere I lose my apparel." Thus with laughing mien the lord makes merry in order to glad Sir Gawain with games in the hall that night. When it came time, the king commanded lights; Sir Gawain took his leave and went to his bed.

20. On the morn when as every man knows God was born to die for us, joy waxes in every dwelling in the world for his sake. So it did there on that day, with many dainties at meats and meals, right quaint dishes, and brave men on the dais dressed in their best. The old ancient wife sits the highest, the courteous lord placed by her, as I trow; Gawain and the gay lady together just in the middle, as the courses 4 properly come; and afterwards the rest throughout all the hall, as it seemed best to them, each man in his degree was properly served. There was meat, there was mirth, there was much joy, that it were arduous for me to tell thereof, though to note it I took pains belike. But yet I know that Gawain and the lovely lady took comfort in each other's company, in the choice play of their sharp wits, and the pure courtesy of their modest talk: their disport surpassed indeed that of any royal game. Trumps and drums came playing loudly; each man minded his own business, and they two minded theirs.

21. Much delight was taken there that day, and the second; and the third followed as pleasantly. The joy of St. John's day was gentle to hear of; and it was the last of the festival, the people considered. There were guests to go upon the grey morn; therefore wondrous late they sat up and drank the wine, danced full gavly with sweet carols. At the last, when it was late. they took their leave, each good man to wend on his way. Gawain gave his host good day; but the good man takes him, and leads him to his own chamber, by the fireplace; and there he draws him aside and properly thanks him for the great worship that he had granted him in honouring his house on that high tide, in embellishing his eastle with his good cheer. "Indeed, sir, while I live I shall be the better that Gawain has been my guest at God's own feast."

"Gramercy, sir," quoth Gawain, "in good faith the merit is yours; all the honour is your own, - the high King reward you; and I am your man to work your behest in high and in low as I am bound by right."

The lord eagerly strives to hold the knight longer; but Gawain answers him that he can in no wise.

22. Then the hero asked of him full fairly what extraordinary deed had driven him at that dear time from the king's court, to go all alone so boldly, ere the holidays were wholly over.

"For sooth, sir," quoth the hero, "ye say but the truth; a high errand and a hasty had me from these dwellings; for I am summoned to such a place as I know not in the world whitherward to wend to find it. I would not for all the land in Logres fail to reach it on New Year's morn - so our Lord help me. Therefore, sir,

² These four words supplied.

This phrase may go with "lose," thus aggravating

the joke.

4 This word (messe) can refer to the courses (the food), or to the "mess" (the two persons eating together, i.e. using the same goblet, platter, etc.).

The clause literally translated is insignificant; we expect something like "and yet I should fail for all my pains."

this request I require of you here, that ye tell me truly if ever ye heard tale of the green chapel, where in the world it stands, and of the knight green in colour that keeps it. There was established by statute an agreement between us that I should meet that man at that landmark if I could but survive. And of that same New Year there now lacks but little, and by God's Son I would gladlier look on that person - if God would let me - than wield any possession in the world. Therefore, indeed - by your good will - it behooves me to wend; I have now at my disposal barely three days; and I were as fain fall dead as fail of mine errand."

Then laughing quoth the lord, "Now it behooves thee to stay; for I shall direct you to that spot by the time's end — the green chapel upon the ground. Grieve you no more; for ye shall be in your bed, sir, at thine ease some days yet, and set out on the first of the year and come to that place at mid-morn, to do what you like. Stay till New Year's day; and rise and go then. One shall set you on your way; it is not two miles hence."

23. Then was Gawain full glad, and merrily he laughed; "Now I thank you especially for this above all other things; now that my quest is achieved, I shall dwell at your will, and do whatever else ye decide."

Then the sire seized him and set him beside him, and let the ladies be fetched to please them the better. Fair entertainment they had quietly among themselves; the lord in his jovial, friendly demeanor behaved as a man out of 1 his wits that knew not what he did. Then he spake to the knight, crying loud, "Ye have agreed to do the deed that I bid. Will ye hold this hest here at once?"

"Yea, sir, forsooth," said the true hero, while I stay in your castle I shall be obedient to your hest."

"Since ye have travelled from afar," quoth the warrior, "and then have sat late with me, ye are not well nourished, I know, either with sustenance or with sleep. Ye shall linger in your loft and lie at your ease tomorrow till mass time; and go to meat when ye will with my wife, who shall sit with you and comfort you with her company till I return home; and I shall rise early and go hunting." Gawain grants all this, bowing courteously.

24. "Yet further," quoth the hero, "let us make an agreement. Whatsoever I win in the wood, it shall be yours; and whatsoever fortune ye achieve, exchange with me therefor. Sweet sir, swap we so, swear truly, whichever one of us gets the worse or the better."

"By God," quoth Gawain the good, "I consent thereto; and whatever game you like, agreeable it seems to me."

"On this beverage just brought the bargain is made," said the lord of that people;

and both laughed.

Then they drank and played and amused 2 themselves, these lords and ladies, so long as it pleased them; and then with politic demeanour and many fair gestures, they stood up and lingered a while, and talked quietly, kissed full comely, and took their leave. With many a gay servant and gleaming torches each hero was brought to his bed full softly at the last. Yet before they went to bed they oft rehearsed the covenants. The old lord of that people knew well how to keep up a jest.

FYTTE THE THIRD

1. Full early before the day the folk arose; the guests that would go called their grooms, and these hastened to saddle the horses, arrange their gear, and truss their mails. The great ones arrayed themselves to ride, leaped up lightly and caught their bridles, each wight on his way where it well pleased him.

The dear lord of the land was not the last; arrayed for the riding, with retainers full many, he ate a sop ³ hastily after he had heard mass, and took his way quickly with his bugle to the field. By the time that any daylight gleamed upon earth, he with his heroes were mounted on their high horses. Then these hunters that understood it, coupled their hounds, unclosed the kennel doors and called them thereout, blew blithely on bugles three simple calls. At this the brachets ⁴ bayed and made a wild noise, and the hunters chastised and turned back those that wandered off, - a hundred hunters of the best there were, as I have heard tell. To their stations the trackers went; hunters cast off the couples; and then arose for the good blasts great uproar in that forest.

2. At the first noise of the quest the game quaked: the deer moved down into the dale, dazed for dread; hurried to the height; but quickly they were hindered by the beaters, who cried stoutly. They let the harts with the high heads go their way, the wild bucks also with their broad palms,1 for the generous lord had forbidden that there should any man meddle with the male deer in the close season. But the hinds were held back with "Hav!" and "Ho!" and the does driven with great din to the deep glades. There might one see as they ran the flight of arrows: at each turn under the boughs out flew a shaft, that savagely bit on the brown hide with full broad heads. How they leaved and bled and died by the banks! And ever the hounds with a rush eagerly followed them; hunters with shrill horn hastened after with such a resounding cry as if cliffs had cracked. What game escaped the men who shot was all run down and torn at the stands. The deer 2 were pestered at the heights, and worried at the waters; the people were so alert at the low stations, and the greyhounds so great, that got them quickly and pulled them down as fast as a man could see. The lord, shouting for joy, shot and alighted full oft, and passed the day thus with joy till the dark night.

3. So this lord sports by the eaves of the linden wood, and Gawain the good man lies in his gay bed; reposes till the day light gleams on the walls, under the beautiful coverlets, curtained about. And as he fell into a doze, faintly he heard a little din at the door, then distinctly; 3 and he heaved up his head out of the clothes, caught up a corner of his curtain a little, and watched warily in that direction to see what it might be. It was the lady, loveliest to behold, who drew the door to after her right slyly and quietly, and turned toward the bed. The hero grew bashful and laid himself down cunningly and pretended that he slept. And she stepped quietly, and stole to his bed, cast up the curtain, and crept within, and seated herself full softly on the bedside. and stayed there surprisingly long, to see when he should awake. The man lay pretending a full great while, bothered in his conscience what this affair might mean or amount to. Marvellous it seemed to him. But yet he said to himself, "More seemly would it be to find out by asking what she would." Then he waked, and stretched, and turned to her; unlocked his eyelids, and made believe he was amazed, and crossed himself with his hand, to be the safer for his prayer. With chin and cheek full sweet, of mingled white and red, right lovely she looked, with her small laughing lips.

4. "Good morrow, Sir Gawain!" said that fair lady. "Ye are a careless sleeper when one can enter thus. Now ye are certainly taken; unless we can make a truce I shall bind you in your bed, ye may be sure of that!" All laughing the lady shot those jests.

"Good morrow, fair one," quoth Gawain the blithe. "I shall be at your disposal, and that pleases me well, for I yield me ontright and pray for grace, - and that is the best course, I judge, for I am in straits." And thus he returned the jests with many a blithe laugh. "But would ye, lovely lady, grant me leave, free 4 your prisoner and bid him rise, I would leave this bed and dress myself better. Then I could talk with you in more comfort."

"Nay, forsooth, fair sir," said that sweet one, "ye shall not rise from your bed; I shall manage you better. I shall tie you up securely,5 and afterwards talk with my knight that I have caught; for I ween well, ye are indeed Sir Gawain, whom all the world worships whereso ye ride. Your honour, your courtesy, is heartily praised, by lords, by ladies, by all alive; and now ye are here, for sooth, and we all alone. My lord and his people are gone far away; the other men in their beds, and my maidens also; the door shut and closed with a strong hasp; and since I have in this house him whom all like, I shall make good use of my time while it lasts. Ye are welcome to my person, to do whatever you wish; I am perforce, and must remain, your servant."

5. "In good faith," quoth Gawain, "a great privilege it seems to me - though I be not now he that ye speak of. To reach such reverence as ve rehearse here. I am a man unworthy, I know well. By God, I should be glad - if it seemed good to you - to do what I might in speech or in service to enhance your worship; 1 - it were a pure joy."

"In good faith, Sir Gawain," quoth the gay lady, "if I should speak ill of the fame and the prowess that pleases all others, or esteem it light, it would show but small discernment.2 But there are ladies enough who were liefer have this courteous one in their power - as I have thee here, - to dally dearly with your dainty words, to comfort themselves and dispel their cares, - than much of the treasure and gold that they have. But I praise the Lord who rules the skies that through his grace I have wholly in my hand that which all desire."

Great cheer she that was so fair of face made him; the knight with discreet speeches answered her every proposal.

6. "Madame," quoth the merry man, "Mary reward you, for in good faith I have found your generosity noble. People judge a person's deeds largely from the accounts of others;3 but the praise that they accord my deserts is but idle. It is simply your own nobility, who know nothing but good."

"By Mary," quoth the gracious one, "methinks it is otherwise; for were I worth all the store of women alive, and all the wealth of the world were in my hands, and I should bargain and choose to get me a lord, then for the good traits that I have found in the knight here, of beauty and graciousness and gay seeming, and from what I have heard before and hold in this case to be true, there should no hero in the world be chosen before you."

"Indeed, worthy one," quoth the hero, "ye might have chosen much better; but I am proud of the estimation that ye put upon me; and as your devoted servant I hold you my sovereign, and your knight I become; and Christ pay you for it."

Thus they spoke of various things till past the midmorn; and ever the lady be-

"Though I were the fairest of women," mused the lady, "little love would he show, because of the danger that he seeks without reproach - the blow that may slay him, but must needs be undergone." The lady then asked leave, and he granted her full soon.

7. Then she gave him good day, and of a sudden laughed; and as she stood there she astouished him with right sharp words: "Now may he that speeds each speech, pay you for this entertainment; but that ye are

Gawain, it goes not in my mind." 5

"Wherefore?" quoth the hero; and eagerly he asks, afraid lest he had failed in the performance of his design.6 But the lady blessed him and spake in this wise: "A man as good as Gawain is properly held - and courtesy is closed so entirely in him — could not easily have lingered so long with a lady but he had on some trifling excuse or other 7 courteously craved a kiss.

Then said Gawain, "Indeed, be it as you like; I shall kiss at your commandment as becomes a knight, and fear lest he displease you; so urge that plea no more." She comes nearer at that and takes him in her arms; stoops graciously down and kisses the man. They courteously entrust each other to Christ. She goes forth at the door without more ado, and he prepares to rise, and hurries amain; calls to his chamberlain, chooses his weeds, steps forth blithely to mass when he is ready; and then he goes to his meat, behaving always courteously, and makes merry all day till the bright moon rises. Never was a hero fairer entertained by two such worthy dames, the older and the younger. Much disport they make together.

8. And ever the lord of the land is bound on his sport, to hunt in holts and heath at barren hinds. Such a sum of does and of other deer he slew there by the time the sun was low, that it were a marvel to estimate. Then eagerly they all flocked together at the last; and quickly of the slain deer they made a quarry. The leaders hastened thereto with men enough: gathered the greatest of grease,1 and proceeded properly to undo 2 them as the occasion demands. Some that were there tried them at the assay 8 and found two fingers of fat on the leanest of all. Afterwards they slit the slot,4 seized the arber,5 cut it free with a sharp knife, and tied it 6 up. Next they cut down along the four limbs and rent off the hide; then they opened the belly, took out the paunch, cutting eagerly, and laid aside the knot.7 They began at the throat again and skilfully divided the weasand from the windpipe and threw out the guts. Then they cut out the shoulders with their sharp knives, and pulled them through by a little hole, so as to have whole sides. Next they divided the breast, and cut it in two; and once more they began at the throat, split the beast quickly right up to the crotch, took out the advancers,8 and immediately severed all the fillets by the ribs, and took them off properly along the backbone even to the haunch, - all of which hung together. Then they heaved it up whole and cut it off there; and that they took for the numbles,9 as it is rightly called. At the fork of the thighs they cut the flaps behind; hastily they hewed the carcass in two, and severed it along the backbone.

9. Both the head and the neck they hewed off then, and afterwards they sundered the sides swiftly from the chine, and the corbie's fee 10 they cast in a green tree. Then they pierced either thick side through by the rib, and hung them each by the hocks of the haunches - each man for his fee, as it befell him to have it. Upon a skin of a fair beast they fed their hounds with the liver and the lights, the leather of the paunches, and bread bathed in blood mingled thereamong. Loudly they blew the prize, and bayed their hounds; then they started to carry home their meat, blowing full stoutly many loud notes. By the time daylight was done the band had all arrived at the comely castle, where the knight is quietly waiting in comfort beside a bright fire. When the lord arrived and Gawain met him, there was joy enough.

10. Then the lord commanded to gather in the hall all the household, and both the ladies to come down with their maids. Before all the folk on the floor he bade men fetch his venison before him; and all in merry sport he called Gawain, told him the number of the choice beasts, and showed him the fat meat cut from 11 the ribs: "How like you this play? Have I won the prize? Have I properly earned thanks by my woodcraft?"

"Yes, indeed," quoth the other hero; "here is the fairest store that I saw this seven year in the season of winter."

"And all I give you, Gawain," quoth the host, then; "for by our plighted covenant you can claim it as your own."

"That is true," replied the hero, "and I say to you the same; I too have won this worthy thing within doors; and I am sure that with quite as good will it belongs to you." He throws his arms about his fair neck and kisses him as courteously as he knew how. "Take you there my merchandise: I have won no more; though I should give it up willingly even if it were greater."

"It is good," quoth the good man; "gramercy therefor. Perchance it might be better if you would tell me where you won this same favour by your own 12 wit."

"That was not the agreement," said he; "ask me no more, for ye have got all that belongs to you, be sure of that."

They laughed and made merry in low tones; then they went quickly to supper with new dainties enough.

11. And afterwards as they sat by a fireplace in a chamber, servants poured to them oft the choice wine; and again in their jesting they agreed to make the same bargain on the morning that they made before, - whatsoever chance betide to exchange their winnings at night when they met, whatsoever new they win. They made this agreement before all the court, and the beverage was brought forth merrily at that time. 18 Then at length they politely took leave; and everybody hurried to bed.

When the cock had crowed and cackled but thrice, the lord had leaped from his bed: likewise his followers each one, so that the meat and the mass were promptly despatched, and the troop ready for the chase in the wood ere any day sprang. With hunters and horns they passed through the plains, and uncoupled the racing hounds among the thorns. 12. Soon they heard the cry of the dogs by a marsh side. The huntsman encouraged the hounds that first caught the scent, hurled sharp words at them with a great noise. The hounds that heard it hastened thither quickly, and fell immediately to the scent, forty at once. Then there rose such a resounding cry of gathered hounds that the rocks about rang. The hunters cheered them with horn and with mouth; theu all together they swung in a troop between a pool in that wood and a wild erag. On a hi!l, beside a cliff at the side of the bog, where the rough rock was rudely fallen, they fared to the finding, and the hunters after them. The men surrounded both the rock and the hill, because they knew well that he was within them, - the beast that the bloodhounds were proclaiming there. Then they beat on the bushes and bade him rise up, and he savagely rushed out athwart the men, the most formidable of swine. Long since had he left the herd on account of his age, for he was a huge beast, the greatest of boars. His grinders when he grunted grieved many, for at his first burst he thrust three to the earth, and sped hastily forth at great speed without respite. And they hallooed "High!" full loudly, and cried "Hay, hay!" With horns to mouth lustily they blew the recheat.1 Many were the merry cries of men and of hounds that hastened after this boar with hue and cry to kill him. Full oft he bides at bay, and maims the pack in the mêlée. He hurts many of the hounds and grievously they howl and yell.

13. The hunters pushed forward then to shoot at him, aimed at him with their arrows and hit him often. But the shafts that struck on his shields,2 give way at the pith, and the barbs would not bite on his brawn though the shaven shafts shivered in pieces; the head hopped out again wheresoever it hit. But when the dints of their keen strokes scared him, then mad for destruction he rushed on the men, did them sore hurt where he hurled forth, and many a one grew wary thereat and gave back a little. But the lord on a light horse hurries after him, blowing his bugle like a bold hero. He winds the recheat as he rides through thick groves, following this wild swine till the sun declined. Thus they drive on the day with such doings while our lovely hero lies comfortably in his bed at home in clothes full rich of hue. The lady did not forget; she came to greet him; full early she was by him to change his mind. While

14. She comes to the curtain and peeps at the knight. Sir Gawain at once welcomes her worthily, and she returns his greeting right promptly, seats herself softly by his side, laughs openly, and with a lovely look addresses these words to him: "Sir, if ye be Gawain, it seems to me a very strange thing that a man of such quality should not follow the conventions of good society; and should after making acquaintance with a person cast him utterly from his mind. Thou hast already forgotten what I taught you vesterday in the best language that I knew."

"What is that?" quoth the hero, "Forsooth I know not. If what ye say be true,

I am to blame."

"Yet I taught you about kissing," replied the fair lady; "wherever a countenance is known, quickly to claim a kiss; that becomes every knight who practices courtesy."

"Cease such speech, my dear lady," said the ready man. "I durst not claim it lest I should be denied. If I proposed and were refused, I should certainly be wrong in proffering."

"By my faith," quoth the lovely dame, "ye cannot be refused. Ye are strong enough to compel it by strength if ye pleased, supposing any were so ill-bred as to deny you."

"Yea, by God," said Gawain, "your speech is good; but violence is considered discourteous among my people, as is any gift that is not given with a good will. I am at your command to kiss when ye like. Ye may begin when ye please, and leave off whenever it likes you."

The lady stoops down and gracefully kisses his face. They converse long of the fears and joys of love.

15. "I should like to know from you, sir," said the peerless lady, "if it vexes you not, - what might be the reason that so young and so gallant person as ye now are, one so courteous and so knightly as ye are known everywhere to be, have never spoken of love.1 For in relating the pains of true knights, the chief thing praised in all of chivalry is the royal sport of love, - and the science of arms: it is the title, token. and text of their works; how heroes for their true love adventured their lives, endured for their sweethearts doleful hours. and afterwards avenged themselves by their valour; dispersed their care, and brought bliss to bower, with plenteous rewards for themselves. And ye are the most renowned knight of your time; your fame and your worship walks everywhere, - and now I have sat by you here two separate times. yet have I never heard from your head a single word that pertained at all to love, less or more. And ye, that are so courteous and so distinguished in your vows, ought willingly to show and teach to a young thing some tokens of the art of true love. Why are ye so rude who are so praised? Is it that ye deem me too dull to hearken to your dalliance? For shame! I came hither all alone to sit and learn from you some accomplishment: do teach me part of your skill while my lord is from home."

16. "In good faith," quoth Gawain, "God reward you! Great is the entertainment, and huge the pleasure to me, that so worthy a one as ye should come hither, and take pains with so poor a man, and play with your knight in any wise; it delights me. But to take upon myself the task of expounding true love, of touching upon the themes of that text, and tales of arms before you, who I wot well have more knowledge of that sort by the half than I or a hundred such have, or ever shall have so long as I live, - that were a manifold folly by my troth, dear one. But I would work your will with all my might, highly beholden to you as I am; and I wish evermore to be your servant, so God save me."

Thus the fair lady besought him, and tried him oft, for to have won him to wrong, — whatever it was she purposed; but he defended himself so fairly that no fault appeared, nor any evil on either side; they knew nought but joy. They laughed and played a long time, till at last she kissed him, took her leave fairly, and went her way.

17. Then the hero bestirred himself and rose to the mass; and afterwards their di ner was dight and splendidly served. The hero sported with the ladies all day, but the lord raced over the land full oft, following his uncouth swine, that rushed along the banks and bit in sunder the backs of his best brachets.2 There he abode at his bay till bowmen broke it, and maugre his head made him move forth. Many fell arrows there flew when the folk gathered about, but yet at times he made the stoutest to start; till at the last he was so wearv he could no more run; but with the haste that he might he won to a hole in a cleft by a rock, where the burn runs. He got the bank at his back and began to scrape; the ugly froth foamed from the corners of his mouth, and he whet his white tusks. It was not pleasant for all the bold hunters that stood about him to approach him even remotely; and to go nigh him durst none for fear of harm. He had hurt so many before, that all seemed then full loath to be more torn with the tusks of that savage and crazed beast.

18. When the knight came himself, reining his steed, and saw him bide at the bay near his men, he lighted nimbly down, left his courser, pulled out a bright brand and boldly strode forth, and hurried fast through the stream where the fell one abode. The wild creature was ware of the wight with weapon in hand, and heaved on high his hairs; so fiercely he snorted that many feared for their lord lest to him befell the worse. The swine rushed directly upon the hero, so that man and boar were both in a heap in the wildest of the water; but the boar had the worse, for the man marked him well as they first met and skilfully set his point exactly in the slot,3 pierced him up to the hilt so that his heart split, and he gave way squealing and went quickly down the water. A hundred hounds seized him and fiercely bit on him. Men brought him to land and the dogs finished

19. There was blowing of the prize 2 on many a loud horn, high halloing aloft by mighty hunters; brachets bayed the beast as the masters bade who were the chief huntsmen of that swift chase. Then a wight that was wise in woodcraft begins skilfully to unlace 3 this boar. First he hews off its head and sets it on high; and afterwards splits him all down his rough back, and takes out the bowels and singes them on the coals; then with bread mingled with these, he rewards his hounds. Afterwards he cuts the brawn in fine broad shields, and has out the hastlets 4 in the proper manner. And now they bind the halves all whole together, and afterwards stoutly hang them on a stiff staff. Now with this same swine they take their way home. The boar's head was borne before the warrior who slew him at the stream through the force of his own strong hand. It seemed long to him until he saw Sir Gawain in the hall; then he called, and Gawain came promptly to take his fees there.

20. The lord jested 5 full loudly, and merrily he laughed when he saw Sir Gawain; with pleasure he spoke. The good ladies were called and the household gathered. He showed them the shields and told them the tale of the girth 6 and length of the wild swine; and also of his viciousness in the wood where he fled. That other knight full comely commended his deeds, and praised it as a great bag that he had made; for such a brawn of a beast, the bold man said, nor such sides of a swine, saw he never before. Then they handled the huge head; the courteous man praised it and made much of it to honour the lord.

"Now Gawain," quoth the good man, "this game is your own, by fine and fast

foreword, truly ye know."

"It is sooth," quoth the hero; "and as truely all my getting I shall give you in turn, by my troth." He took the warrior about the neck and courteously kissed him, and another time he served him the same.

"Now we are even," quoth the warrior, "tonight of all the covenants that we knit by law since I came hither."

Said the lord, "By St. Giles, ye are the best that I know! Ye will be rich in a short time, if ye drive such chaffer!"

21. Then they raised tables aloft on trestles, and cast cloths upon them. The clear light then appeared along the walls, as men set and distributed waxen torches all about the hall. Much mirth and glee rose up therein, about the fire on the hearth, and in various wise at the supper and after. Many noble songs they sang, as Christmas carols and new dance tunes, with all the mannerly mirth that a man can tell of. And ever our lovely knight sat beside the lady. Such seemly cheer she made to the hero, sought with such sly stolen 7 glances to please the stalwart one, that the wight was all amazed, and wroth with himself. But he would not on account of his breeding reprove her, but responded in all courtesy, howsoever outrageous she might be. When they had played in the hall as long as their will lasted, the lord called to bedwards, and to the room with a fireplace they passed.

22. And there they drank and talked. and the lord proposed again to make the same arrangement for New Year's Eve. But the knight craved leave to depart on the morn, for it was nigh at the term that he must keep. The lord hindered him from that, persuaded him to linger, and said, "As I am true man, I pledge my troth thou shalt reach the green chapel to do thy tasks, sir, by New Year's light, long before prime. Therefore lie in thy loft and take thine ease; and I shall hunt in this holt and keep the covenant - change merchandise with thee when I return hither: for I have tried thee twice, and faithful I find thee; now, 'third time, best time.' 8 Think on the morrow. Make we merry while we may, and be joyful; for a man can catch trouble whensoever he likes."

This was readily granted and Gawain stayed. Drink was quickly brought to them, and to bed they went with lights. Sir Gawain lay and slept full still and soft all night; the lord, mindful of his hunting, was dight full early.

23. After mass he and his men took a morsel. Merry was the morning. He asks for his mount, and all the sportsmen who should accompany him on horse were ready mounted on their steeds before the hall gates. Wondrous fair was the field, for the frost still lingered. The sun rose in a rack of ruddy red, and drove all the clouds from the welkin. The hunters uncoupled by a holt side, and the rocks in the forest rang for the noise of their horns. Some dogs fell on a scent where the fox had loitered; followed it oft obliquely 1 through the cunning of their wiles. A kennet2 cried upon it; the huntsman encouraged him, and his fellows hastened after, panting thickly. They ran forth in a rabble on Reynard's very track, and he hurried before them. Soon they found him; and when they actually saw him they chased him fast, baying him full fiercely with a huge noise. And he trants 3 and turns through many a rough grove; doubles and hearkens by hedges full often. At the last by a little ditch he leaps over a spinny, and steals out full stilly by a rough rand.4 Half escaped from the wood he turns with wiles from the hounds; but then he arrived. ere he knew it, at a chosen stand, where in an instant three stout hunters in grav threatened him at once. He blenched again quickly, and bravely started off; with all the woe in the world, he turned away to the wood.

24. Then was it a pure joy to listen to the hounds, when all the gathered mute 6 got view of him. The cry they set on his head at the sight was as if all the resounding cliffs had clattered down in a heap. Here he was halloed when the hunters met him, loudly cried upon with noisy calls; there he was threatened and often called thief; and ever the ticklers were at his tail so that he could not tarry. Oft he was run at when he raked out, and oft he reeled in again, so wily was Reynard. And ever he led the bespattered lord and his troop in this manner among the hills, now in them, now over, now under, while the courteous knight at home slept wholesomely within the comely curtains on the cold morn.

But the lady for love cared not to sleep nor to give up the purpose that bode in her heart; but up she rose quickly and took her way thither in a gay mantle meetly reaching to the earth, and furred full fine with skins of the best. No ornaments of gold on her head; but only the bright stones set about her tressour in clusters of twenty. With her fair face and her lovely throat all naked, her breast bare before and behind too, she comes within the chamber door and closes it after her, throws up a window and calls on the wight, and smartly thus stirred him with her fair cheery words. "Ah man, how can you sleep, this morning is so clear!" Though he was drowsing deep, yet could he hear her.

25. In the dreary depths of a dream the noble was sunk, like a man suffering from many sad thoughts, how destiny should dight him his weird at the green chapel that day when he met the man, and had to abide his buffet without more debate. But when he had fairly recovered his wits, he emerged from his dreams and answered with haste. The lovely lady came laughing sweetly, stooped over his fair face and courteously kissed him. He welcomed her worthily with choice cheer. To see her so glorious, and so gaily attired, so faultless of feature, and so lovely of colour, warmed his heart with welling joy. With smooth and gracious smiling they straightway waxed mirthful. All was bliss and good cheer that passed between them. They exchanged goodly words; much happiness they

26. For that beauteous princess constrained him so sorely, and the danger pressed him so nigh, that of necessity it behooved him either accept her love or rudely refuse it. He thought much of his courtesy, lest he should prove a clown; and more on his villainy if he should do sin, and be traitor to the hero who owned the castle. firmly to that gentle one that ye care not to loosen it. — Verily now that is what I believe, and I pray you that you tell me truly; for all the loves in the world deny not the truth with guile."

"By St. John!" said the knight, and courteously he smiled, "I have none, and none will I have."

27. "That is the worst of all!" quoth the lady. "I am answered indeed, to my sorrow. Kiss me now comely and I shall go hence. I can only mourn in the world as a maid that loved much."

Sighing she stooped down and kissed him seemly; and then she severed from him, and said as she stood, "Now, dear, at this departing do me this comfort; give me somewhat of thy gift, thy glove if it might be, that I may think on thee, sir, to lessen my mourning."

"Now in truth," quoth that man, "I would I had here for thy love, the dearest thing that I wield; for truly ye have right oft in reason deserved a greater reward than I could reekon. But to exchange with you love-tokens, that would profit but little. It is not for your honor to have at this time a glove of Gawain's gift for a keepsake; and I am here on an errand in lands uncouth, and have no men with mails full of precious things for remembrances at this moment; and that mislikes me, lady. But every man must act according to his circumstances, and none should take it ill or repine."

"Now, courteous and honourable one," quoth that lovesome lady, "though I shall have nothing of yours, yet shall ye have of mine."

28. She reached him a rich ring of red gold work with a gleaming stone standing aloft, that shed blushing beams like the bright sun; know ye well it was worth wealth full huge. But the man refused it, and readily he said: "I desire no great gifts, my gay one, at this time. I have naught to give you, and naught will I take."

She offered it him full pressingly, and he refused her offer, and swore swiftly on his sooth that he would not take it. And she sorrowed that he refused, and said thereafter, "If ye refuse my ring, since it seems too rich, and ye would not be so highly beholden to me, I shall give you my girdle, that will enrich you less."

She lightly caught a lace that went about her sides, knit upon her kirtle under the bright mantle. It was adorned with green silk, and ornamented with gold, broidered all around, decked with fringes;1 and that she offered to the hero, and gaily besought that, though it were unworthy, he would take it. And he denied that he would in any wise take either gold or present ere God sent him grace to achieve the chance that he had chosen there. "And therefore, I pray you, be not displeased, and give over your attempt; for I intend never to consent. I am dearly beholden to you because of your entertainment; and ever in hot and in cold I will be your true servant."

29. "Now refuse ye this silk," said the lady then, "because it is simple in itself, as it certainly seems to be? Lo! little it is, and less it is worth; but whoso knew the virtues that are knit therein, he would esteem it at a greater price peradventure; for whatsoever man is girt with this green lace, while he has it fittingly wrapped about him, there is no warrior under heaven than can wound him; for he could not be slain by any device in the world."

Then the knight paused, and it came to his heart that it would be a jewel for the peril that awaited him when he arrived at the chapel to undergo his ordeal. Could he manage to be unslain, that were a noble device. Then he indulged her entreaties and suffered her to speak; and she pressed the belt on him and offered it to him eagerly. And he accepted it, and she gave it him with a good will, and besought him for her sake never to discover it, but to conceal it loyally from her lord. The man agreed that never person should know it indeed but they twain. Full oft he thanked her, right glad in heart and thought. By that she had kissed the stout knight three times.

30. Then she takes her leave and leaves him there, for more entertainment she could not get from that man. When she was gone Sir Gawain bestirs himself, rises and dresses in noble array. He lays up the love-lace the lady had given him, hides it full cleverly where he can find it again. Then promptly he takes his way to the chapel; quietly approaches to the priest and prays him there that he would elevate his life, and teach him better how his soul should be saved when he should go hence. Then he shrives him cleanly and shows his misdeeds, both the more and the less, beseeches mercy, and begs for absolution. And the priest assoils him thoroughly and set him as clean as if doomsday had been due on the morrow. And afterwards Gawain makes more mirth among the fair ladies that day with comely carols and all kinds of joy than ever he did before, till the dark night. Everyone had pleasure of him there, and said indeed that he had never been so merry since he came hither.

31. Now let him linger in that place, where may love betide him. The lord is still in the field leading his men. He has overtaken this fox that he followed so long, as he sprinted over a spinny to spy the rascal, where he heard the hounds that hastened fast after him. Reynard came running through a rough grove, and all the rabble in a rout right at his heels. The man was ware of the game, and warily abode; pulled out his bright brand and struck at the beast; and he dodged from the sharp weapon and would have turned; but a dog seized him ere he could, and right before the horse's feet they all fell on him and worried this wilv one with a great noise. The lord lighted quickly, and caught him forthwith; pulled him full hastily out of the dogs' mouths, and holding him high over his head, halloed fast; and there many fierce hounds bayed him. Hunters hied them thither with horns full many, ever blowing the recheat 1 till they saw the hero. As soon as his noble company was come, all that bare bugle blew at once, and all the others that had no horns halloed. It was the merriest mute2 that ever men heard - the rich riot that there was raised for Revnard's soul. They rewarded the hounds there, stroked them and rubbed their heads; and afterwards they took Reynard and turned off his coat.

32. And then they hastened home, for it was nigh night, blowing full stoutly in their great horns. The lord alighted at last at his dear home, found fire on the floor, and the hero beside it, Sir Gawain the good, that glad was withal among the ladies; in their love he had much joy. He wore a mantle of blue that reached to the earth; his surcoat, that was softly furred, became him well; and his hood of the same hung on his shoulder. Trimmed all about with fine fur were both. He met this good man in the middle of the floor, and all joyfully he greeted him, and goodly he said: "Now I shall fulfill our covenant, that we have just made, where no driuk was spared." Then he embraces the knight and kisses him thrice with as much gusto and as soberly as he could give them.

"By Christ!" quoth the other knight, "ye get much bliss in the profits of this business — if ye drive good bargains!"

"Of the bargain, no matter," quoth curtly that other, "so long as the debts that I owed are properly paid."

"Mary!" quoth the other man, "my offering is the worse, for I have hunted all this day, and naught have I got but this foul fox-fell; the flend have the good ones! And that is full poor to pay for such fine things as ye have given me here, three such rare kisses."

"It is enough," quoth Sir Gawain; "I thank you, by the rood." And as they stood there the lord told him how the fox was slain.

33. With mirth and minstrelsy, with meats at their will, they made as merry as any men could. With laughing of ladies, with merry jests, Gawain and the good man were both as glad as if the court were mad, or else drunk. Both the man and his retinue made many jokes till the season arrived when they must sever; the men had to go to their beds at last. Then humbly this gentle man takes his leave of the lord first: and fairly he thanks him. "For such a joyous sojourn as I have had here, for the honor you have shown me at this high feast, the high king reward you! I can only give you myself to be one of your men, if that pleases you. For I must needs, as ye know, proceed, tomorrow, if ye will grant me some man to show, as you promised, the way to the green chapel, as God will suffer me to take on New Year's day the doom of my fate."

"In good faith," quoth the good man, with a good will! All that ever I promised you, I will perform." Therewith he assigns a servant to set him in the way, and conduct him by the downs, that he should without hesitation travel through the forest and fare at the best in the woods. The lord thanked Gawain for the worship he had been willing to show him. Then the knight took his leave of the beautiful ladies.

34. With care and with kissing he speaks to them, and many earnest thanks he presses upon them. And they returned him the same again promptly; they entrusted him to Christ with sighings full sad. Afterwards he graciously departs from the household; each man that he met he thanked him for his service and his solace, and the various pains with which they had been busy to serve him. And each man was as sad to sever from him there as if they had ever dwelt worthily with that hero. Then with people and with light he was led to his chamber and blithely brought to bed to be at his rest. Whether he slept soundly I dare not say, for he had much to think of on the morrow if he would. Let him lie there; he was near what he sought. If ve will be still a while I shall tell you how they fared.

FYTTE THE FOURTH

1. Now nighs the New Year, and the night passes. The day drives on to the dark, as God bids; but outside wild storms wakened in the world; clouds cast the cold keenly to the earth; with discomfort enough to the naked, the snow from the north flew sharply, and nipped the game. The blustering wind blew from the heights, and drove each dale full of great drifts. The man who lay in his bed heard it right well; though he locks his lids, full little he sleeps. By each cock that crew he knew well the hour. Promptly he leaped up ere the day sprang, for there was the light of a lamp that gleamed in his chamber. He called to his chamberlain, who quickly answered him, and bade him bring his burnie and saddle his horse. The chamberlain gets up and fetches him his weeds, and arrays Sir Gawain in proper fashion. First he dressed him in his clothes to keep out the cold, and then he put on the rest of his harness, that had been well kept, both mail and plate, and brightly polished. The rings of his rich burnie had been rocked from the rust,1 and all was fresh as at first; and Gawain was

1 That is, in a barrel of sand.

fain to give thanks for it. The attendant had wiped each piece well and often. Then the noblest man betwixt here and Greece bade his steed be brought.

2. Meanwhile, he threw upon himself his finest weeds; his surcoat with its cognisance of excellent work, virtuous stones set upon velvet, all wrought about and bound with embroidered seams, and fairly furred within with rare skins. Yet left he not the lace, the lady's gift, - that forgot not Gawain for his own good. When he had belted his brand upon his broad haunches, he dressed his love-token double about him, the knight swathed sweetly about his waist the girdle of green silk, which became him well, upon the royal red cloth that was fair to see. But this hero wore not the girdle for its wealth, for pride of the pendants, though they were polished, and though the glittering gold gleamed on the ends; but to save himself when it behoved him to suffer, to await his doom without resistance, with no brand or knife to defend him. By this the good man is ready and goes out quickly. Full often he thanks the distinguished com-

3. Gringolet the huge and strong was ready, who had been kept skilfully in the safest manner. The proud horse in his splendid condition longed for spurring. The hero approached him, noticed his coat, and said soberly, and by his sooth swore -"Here, in this castle, is a company that are mindful of courtesy. The man who maintains them, joy may he have; the dear lady, love betide her in this life, since they for charity cherish a guest and uphold honor in their hand. May the Being reward them who holds the heaven on high - and also you all. And if I might live any longer in the world I should give you some reward if I could." Then he stepped into stirrup and strode aloft. His servant offered him his shield; he put it on his shoulder. He spurred Gringolet with his gilt heels, and the steed jumped on the stone; no longer he stood still, but pranced. Gawain's servant, who bore his lance and helm, was by then on the horse. "This castle I entrust to Christ; may he give it aye good chance!"

4. The bridge was let down, and the broad gates unbarred and borne open on both sides. The hero crossed himself quickly and passed the boards, praised the porter, who knelt before him giving good day and praying God that he save Gawain. And so he went on his way with his one man that should teach him how to find that dismal place where he should receive the rueful blow. They rode by banks where boughs are bare; they climbed by cliffs where the cold clings; the sky was upheld, but it was ugly beneath; mist hung on the moor and melted on the mount; each hill had a hat, a huge mist-cloak. Brooks boiled and broke from the banks about, shattering sheer on their shores where they showered down. Dreary was the way, where they should travel by the wood, till soon came the season when the sun rises at that time. They were on a hill full high, the white snow about them, when the man that rode beside him bade his master abide.

5. "I have brought you hither, sir, at this time; and now ye are not far from that famous spot that ye have asked and inquired so specially after. But I shall say to you forsooth, since I know you, and ye are a man that I love well, if ye would work by my wit ye should be the better for it. The place that ye press to is held full perilous. There dwells in that waste a wight the worst upon earth; for he is stiff and stern and loves to strike; and greater he is than any man in the world, and his body bigger than the four best that are in Arthur's house, and bigger than Hector or any other. He maintains that adventure at the green chapel. There passes by that place none so proud in arms but he dins him to death with dint of his hand. For he is a man withont measure and uses no mercy; for be it churl or chaplain that rides by the chapel, monk or mass-priest, or any man else, he likes as well to kill him as to go alive himself. Therefore I tell ye as truly as ye sit in the saddle, come ye there ye shall be killed - trust me well - though ye had twenty lives to spend. He has dwelt here full long and caused much strife in the land. Against his sore dints ye cannot defend vourself.

6. "Therefore, good Sir Gawain, let the fellow alone, and go away some other road, for God's sake. Repair to some other country, where Christ may speed you; and I shall hie me home again, and promise you further — which I will swear by God and all his good saints, so help me God and the halidom and oaths enough—that I will loyally conceal you, and never tell tale that ever ye fled for any man that I know of."

"Gramercy," quoth Gawain. And sternly he added. "Well worth thee, man, who wishes my good; and I well believe thou wouldst loyally conceal me. But if thou wouldst loyally conceal me. But if thou well being the promise never so faithfully, and I gave up here, sought for fear to fly as you advise, I were a knight coward; I could not be excused. But I will go to the chapel whatever chance may fall, and talk with that same man the tale that I like, be it good or evil, as it pleases fate to have it. Though he be a stern champion to cope with, and armed with a club, full well can God manage to save his servants."

7. "Mary!" quoth that other man, "now thou sayest as much as that thou wilt take upon thyself thine own destruction; if it pleases thee to lose thy life, I shall not let nor hinder thee. Have here thy helm on thy head, thy spear in thy hand; and ride down this same lane by you rock-side till thou be brought to the bottom of the rugged valley; then look a little up the grassy slope on thy left hand, and thou shalt see in that ravine the chapel itself, and the burly man on the field who keeps it. Now farewell in God's name, Gawain the noble, for all the gold in the world I would not go with thee nor bear thee fellowship through this wood a foot further."

At that the man turned his bridle in the wood, hit the horse with the heels as hard as he could; leaped over the land, and left the knight there all alone.

"By God's self," quoth Gawain, "I will neither grieve nor groan. To God's will I am full obedient, and to him I have entrusted myself."

8. Then he spurs Gringolet and follows the path; pushes in by a hollow beside a thicket; rides through the rough slope right to the dale; and then he looked about him, and wild it seemed to him. He saw no sign of dwelling anywhere around, but on both sides high steep banks, and rough hunched crags with projecting stones; the shadows of the cliffs seemed to him terrible. Then he paused and held back his horse, and oft changed his cheer while seeking the chapel. He saw none such on any side, and strange it seemed to him. But soon, a little distance off on a grassy spot he descried a mound as it were, a smooth hill by the bank of the stream near a ford of the flood that ran there. The burn bubbled there as if it were boiling. The knight urges his steed, and comes to the bill; lights nimbly down, and ties the rein and his rich bridle to a tree by a rough branch; then he turns to the hill and walks about it, debating with himself what it might be. It had a hole at the end and on either side, and was overgrown with grass in clumps everywhere, and was all hollow within -nothing but an old cave or a crevice of an old crag. He could not understand it at all. " Alas, Lord," quoth the gentle knight, "can this be the green chapel? Here about midnight the devil might tell his matins."

9. "Now," quoth Gawain, "it certainly is mysterious here; this oratory is ugly, overgrown with herbs. Well it beseems the wight clad in green here to do his devotions in the devil's wise. Now I feel in my five wits it is the fiend that has made this bargain with me, to destroy me here. This is a chapel of mischance; may ill fortune betide it! It is the cursedest kirk that ever I came in!"

With high helm on his head, his lance in his hand, he strides up to the rock of the rude dwelling. Then he heard from that high hill, in a rough cave, on a bank beyond the brook, a marvellously savage noise. Lo, the cliff clattered as though it would split, as if one were grinding a scythe on a grindstone. It whirred and screeched like water at a mill; it rushed and rang that it was ruth to hear.

"By God," quoth Gawain then, "that gear, I fancy, is being prepared to give me a good reception. Yet though I must lose my life, fear shall never make me change colour."

10. Then the knight called full high: "Who dwells in this place to keep covenant with me? For now the good Gawain is passing right here. If any wight wishes ought, let him come hither fast, now or never, to fulfill his need!"

"Abide!" quoth one on the bank over his head. "Thou shalt have in all haste that which I promised thee once."

Yet he kept on with that noise sharply for a while, turning and whetting, ere he would come down. And then he crossed by a crag and came from a hole, whirling out of a dark place with a fell weapon - a Danish axe new dight, to give the blow with. It had fast to the helve a great head, sharpened on the stone. Four feet long was the weapon - no less, by that lace that gleamed full bright. And the man in the green was arrayed as before - both his skin and his limbs, locks, and beard; save that on foot he strides fairly on the earth. He set the steel shaft to the stone and stalked beside it. When he came to the water, where he did not wish to wade, he hopped over on his axe, and fiercely advanced, with savage ferocity pacing the broad snow-covered glade. Sir Gawain met the knight and bowed to him, not at all low. The other said, "Now, sweet sir, in a covenant a man can trust thee."

11. "Gawain," quoth the green warrior, "may God preserve thee. Indeed thou art welcome, hero, to my place; and thou hast timed thy travel as a true man should. And thou knowest the covenants made between us; at this time twelve month, thou tookest what fell to thee, —and I at this New Year was to repay you handsomely. And now we are in this valley entirely alone; here are no men to part us, however we may behave. Have thy helm off thy head, and have here thy pay. Make no more debate than I offered thee then, when thou whipped off my head at one blow."

"Nay," quoth Gawain, "by God that lent me life, I shall grudge thee not a whit whatever misfortune falls. But arrange thee for thy one stroke, and I shall stand still and hinder thee not the least from doing the work as you like."

He bent the neck and bowed down, showing the flesh all bare; and behaved as if he cared not. For no dread would he flinch.

12. Then the man in the green got ready quickly, gathered up his grim tool to smite Gawain. With all the might in his body he bare it aloft, and aimed a savage blow as though he wished to kill him. Had it driven down as earnestly as he feinted, the ever doughty one would have been dead of his dint. But Gawain glanced to one side on the gisarm as it came gliding down to slay him there in the glade, and shrank a little with the shoulders from the sharp iron. The other warrior with a quick motion withheld the bright weapon, and then he reproved the prince with many proud words.

"Thou art not Gawain," said the man, "who is held so good, who never flinched for any army by bill nor by vale; and now thou fleest for fear before thou feelest any harm. Such cowardice I never heard of that knight. I neither winced nor fled, sir, when thou didst strike, nor tried any tricks in King Arthur's house. My head flew to my foot, and yet I never budged; and thou, ere any harm taken, art fearful in heart. Wherefore the better man I ought to be called for it."

"I flinched once," quoth Gawain, "and will do so no more. Yet if my head should fall on the stones, I cannot restore it.

13. "But make ready, sir, by thy faith, and bring me to the point. Deal to me my destiny, and do it promptly; for I shall stand thee a stroke, and not start again till thine axe has hit me — have here my troth."

"Have at thee then!" quoth the other, and heaves it aloft, and aims as savagely as if he were mad. He strikes at him mightily, but touches the man not; for he withheld his hand cleverly ere it could hurt. Gawain awaits it properly and flinches with no member, but stands still as a stone, or a stump that is twisted into the rocky ground with a hundred roots.

Then merrily spoke the man in the green: "So, now thou hast thy heart whole it behoves me to hit. Now keep back the fine hood that Arthur gave thee, and see if thou canst keep thy neck whole from this stroke."

Said Gawain in great anger: "Why, thrash on, thou wild man! Thou threatenest too long. I guess that thine own heart is timid!"

"Forsooth," quoth the other warrior, "thou speakest so fiercely that I will not delay thine errand a bit longer." Then he takes his stride to strike and knits both brow and lip. No wonder Gawain mislikes it and gives up all thought of escape.

14. Lightly he lifts his axe and lets the edge come down fairly on the bare neck. Yet though he smote rudely, it hurt him but little; only cut him on one side so that it severed the skin. The sharp bit reached the flesh through the fair fat, so that the bright blood shot over his shoulders to the earth. And when the hero saw the blood glint on the snow, he leaped forth more than a spear's length, eagerly seized his helm, cast it on his head, threw his shoulders under his fair shield, pulled out a bright sword and fiercely spoke. Never in this world since he was born of his mother was he half so blithe.

"Cease, sir, of thy blow! Offer me no more. I have without strife taken a stroke in this place; and if thou givest me more, I shall promptly repay and yield quickly again, trust thou that! Only one stroke falls to me here. The covenant which we made in Arthur's halls provided just that; and therefore, courteous sir, now hold!"

15. The warrior turned from him and rested on his axe. He set the shaft on the ground, leaned on the head, and beheld how the doughty hero stood his ground grimly, fully armed and devoid of fear. In his heart it pleased him. Then with a great voice, and a huge laugh, he spoke merrily to the hero: "Bold sir, in this place be not so savage. Nobody has here unmanuerly mishandled thee, nor done but according to covenant made at the king's court. I promised thee a stroke and thou hast it: hold thee well paid. I release thee of the remnant, of all other rights. If I had been skilful peradventure I could have given you a worse buffet. First I menaced you merrily with a pure feint, and gave thee no blow; which was but justice, considering the covenant which we made on the first night, and which thou held with me trustily; for truly all the gain thou gave me as a good man should. The second feint this morning, sir, I proffered thee, because thou didst kiss my fair wife and didst hand the kisses over to me; for these two occasions I gave thee here but two bare feints without harm. A true man truly restores; such an one need dread no harm. At the third time thou didst fail; and so take thee that tap.

16. "For it is my weed that thou wearest, that same woven girdle. Mine own wife gave it thee, I know well, forsooth. Now know I well thy kisses, and thy virtues also. And as for the wooing of my wife, I managed it myself. I sent her to try thee, and truly it seems to me thou art the most faultless hero that ever went on foot. As a pearl is of greater price than white peas, so is Gawain, in good faith, compared with other gay knights. But in this case, sir, you lacked a little, and loyalty failed you. But that was for no amorous work, nor wooing either, but because ye loved your life, — the less I blame you."

That other brave man stood a great while in a study; so stricken was he for grief that he groaned within. All the blood of his breast rushed to his face; and he shrank for shame when the warrior talked. This was the first word that the man spoke — "Cursed be cowardice and covetousness both! In you is villainy and vice, that destroy virtue." Then he caught at the knot and loosed the fastening; fiercely reached the belt to the warrior himself. "Lo! there is the deception, foul may it fall! For fear of thy knock cowardice taught me to make a truce with covetousness, to forsake my nature, which is generosity and loyalty, that belong to knights. Now am I faulty and false, and a coward have ever been. From treachery and untruth ever come sorrow and care. Here I confess to you, knight, that my conduct is all faulty. Let me but please you now, and after I shall beware."

17. Then the other laughed and said courteously: "I hold it quite remedied, the harm that I had. Thou hast made a clean confession, acknowledging all thy misdeeds, and hast received the penance openly from the point of my edge. I hold thee quit of that plight, and purified as clean as if thou hadst never forfeited since thou was first born. And I give thee, sir, the girdle that is gold hemmed. Since it is green, as is my gown, Sir Gawain, ye may think upon this same adventure where thou goest forth among great princes; and this shall be a genuine token among chivalrous knights of the adventure of the green chapel, and ye shall come again this New Year to my dwelling, and we shall revel the remnant of this rich feast full well." The lord pressed the invitation and said, "With my wife, who was your great enemy, I think we shall reconcile you."

18. "Nay, forsooth," quoth the hero; and seizing his helm, he took it off quickly and thanked the warrior. "I have had a good visit, bliss betide you; and may He pav you well who directs all mercies. Commend me to that courteous one, your comely mate; both the one and the other, my honoured ladies, who have thus with their craft quaintly beguiled their knight. But it is no wonder that a fool should rave, and through wiles of women be won to sorrow. For so was Adam beguiled by one, and Solomon by many, indeed; and Samson also,

Delilah dealt him his weird; and David thereafter was deceived by Bethsheba, who suffered much sorrow. Since these men were plagued by their wiles, it were a huge gain to love them well and believe them not - if a person but could; for these men were of old the best, and the most fortunate, excellent above all others under the heavens; and all they were beguiled by women whom they had to do with.1 If I be now deceived, meseems I might be excused.

19. "But your girdle," quoth Gawain. "God reward you for it! That will I keep with good will; not for the precious gold, nor the samite nor the silk, nor the wide pendants, for its wealth nor for its beauty nor for its fine work; but in sign of my fault I shall behold it oft; when I ride in renown I shall lament to myself the fault and the deceit of the crabbed flesh, how tender it is to catch stains of filth; and thus when pride shall prick me for prowess of arms, a look on this love-lace shall moderate my heart. But one thing I would pray you - may it displease you not since ye are lord of the land yonder where I have stayed worshipfully with you may the Being who upholds the heaven and sits on high repay you for it! - how name ye your right name? and then no more."

"That shall I tell thee truly," quoth the other then. "Bernlak de Hautdesert I am called in this land through the might of Morgen la Fay, who dwells in my house. She has acquired deep learning, hard-won skill, many of the masteries of Merlin; for she has at times dealt in rare magic with that renowned clerk, who knows all your knights at home. Morgan the Goddess is therefore her name; no person is so haughty but she can tame him.

20. "She sent me in this wise to your rich hall to assay its pride and try if it were true that circulates about the great renown of the Round Table. She prepared for me this wonder to take away your wits, to have grieved Guinevere and caused her to die through fright of that same man, that ghostly speaker with his head in his hand before the high table. That is she, the ancient lady at home. She is even thine aunt, Arthur's half-sister, the daughter of that Duchess of Tintagel upon whom dear Uther afterwards begot Arthur, that is now king. Therefore, I beg you, sir, to come to thine aunt; make merry in my house; my people love thee, and I like thee as well, sir, by my faith as I do any man under God for thy great truth."

But he answered him nay, he would in no wise. They embraced and kissed, each entrusted other to the Prince of Paradise, and they parted right there in the cold. Gawain on horse full fair rides boldly to the king's court, and the knight all in green whithersoever he would.

21. Wild ways in the world Gawain now rides on Gringolet, he who had got the boon of his life. Oft he harboured in houses, and oft without; and many an adventure in vale he had, and won oft; but that I care not at this time to mention in my tale. The hurt was whole that he had got in his neck; and he bare the glistening belt about him, crossed obliquely like a baldric, the lace fastened under his left arm with a knot, in token that he was taken in a fault. And thus he comes to the court, the knight all sound. There wakened joy in that dwelling when the great ones knew that good Gawain had come; joyous it seemed to them. The king kisses the knight, and the queen also; and afterwards many a sure knight, who sought to embrace him and asked him of his journey. And wondrously he tells it, confessing all the trials that he had, the adventure of the chapel, the behavior of the knight, the love of the lady - and, at the last, the lace. He showed them the nick in his neck that he caught at the lord's hands for his unloyalty. He grieved when he had to tell it; he groaned for sorrow, and the blood rushed to his face for shame when he declared it.

22. "Lo! lord," quoth the hero, as he handled the lace, "this that I bear in my neck is the badge of this blame. This is the evil and the loss that I have got from the cowardice and covetousness that I showed there. This is the token of untruth that I am taken in, and I must needs wear it while I may last; for none may hide his shame without mishap, for where it once is incurred, depart will it never."

The king and all the court comfort the knight. They laugh loud at his tale, and lovingly agree that the lords and ladies that belong to the Table, each knight of the brotherhood, should have a baldrie, an oblique band about him of a bright green, and wear that for the sake of the hero. And that emblem was accorded the renown of the Round Table, and he was ever after honoured that had it.

As it is told in the best book of romance, thus in Arthur's day this adventure betid, which the Brutus books bear witness of. After Brutus the bold hero first came hither, when the siege and the assault had ceased at Troy, many adventures of this sort happened. Now may He that bore the crown of thorns bring us to his bliss. AMEN.

THE VISION OF WILLIAM CON-CERNING PIERS THE PLOUGHMAN

VERSION A

PROLOGUE

In a summer season, when soft was the sun,

I clad me in rough clothing, a shepherd as

I were;

In habit of a hermit, unholy of works,
Went I wide in this world, wonders to hear.
But on a May morning on Malvern Hills
To me befell a marvel, a fairy thing methought.

I was weary of wandering and went me to

Under a broad bank by a burn side;

And as I lay and leaned and looked on the waters,

I slumbered in a sleep, it sounded so pleasant.

Then did I dream a marvellous dream,
That I was in a wilderness, wist I not where;

And as I beheld into the east, on high to

I saw a tower on a hill-top, splendidly fashioned:

A deep dale beneath, a dungeon therein, With a deep ditch and dark, and dreadful to see.

A fair field full of folk found I there between,

Of all manner of men, the mean and the rich,

Working and wandering, as the world requireth.

Some put them to the plow, and played full seldom,

In plowing and sowing produced they full hardly

What many of these wasters in gluttony destroy.

And some gave themselves to pride, appareled them accordingly, In fashion of clothing strangely disguised.

To prayer and to penance put themselves many.

For love of our Lord lived they full hard, In hope to have the bliss of heaven's king-

As anchorites and hermits that hold themselves in cells,

Covet not in the country to gad all about, With luxurious living their body to please.

And some chose trade, to prosper the better,

As it seems to our sight that such men should:

And some mirth to make, as minstrels can, And get gold with their glee, guiltless, I trow.

But jesters and buffoons, Judas's children,

Found for themselves fantasies and of themselves fools made,

Yet have their wits at command, to work if they will. What Paul preached of them I dare not prove here;

Qui loquitur turpiloquium, he is Lucifer's servant.

Askers and beggars fast about flitted, 40 Till their bags and their bellies brimful were crammed:

Feigned for their food, fought at the alehouse:

In gluttony, God wot, go they to bed

And rise up with ribaldry, these bullying beggar-knaves;

Sleep and sloth follow them ever.

Pilgrims and palmers pledge themselves together

To seek the shrine of St. James and saints at Rome;

Went forth in their way with many wise tales.

And had leave to lie all their life after.

Hermits in a band with hooked staves 50 Went to Walsingham, and their wenches after.

Great lubbers and long, that loath were to work,

Clothed themselves in capes to be known for brethren.

And some dressed as hermits their ease to have.

I found there friars, all the four orders, Preaching to the people for profit of their bellies.

Interpreting the gospel as they well please, For covetousness of capes construes it ill; For many of these masters may clothe themselves at will,

For money and their merchandise meet oft together.

Since Charity hath turned trader, and shriven chiefly lords,

Many wonders have befallen in these few years.

Unless Holy Church now be better held together

The most mischief on earth will mount up fast.

There preached a pardoner, as he a priest

And brought up a bull with bishop's seals, And said he himself would absolve them all From breach of fasting and broken yows. The laymen liked him well, believed his speech,

And came up kneeling and kissed his

He banged them with his brevet, and

bleared their eyes,
And purchased with his parchment rings and brooches.

Thus ye give your gold gluttony to help,
And grant it to rascals that run after lechery.

Were the bishop holy and worth both his ears.

They should not be so brazen to deceive so the people.

Yet it is not against the bishop that the knave preacheth;

But the parish priest and pardoner share the silver

That the poor parishioners should have but for them.

Parsons and parish priests complain to their bishops 80

That their parish hath been poor since the pestilence 2 time,

And ask leave and licence at London to dwell

To sing there for simony, for silver is sweet.

There hang about a hundred in hoods of silk,

Sergeants, it seems, to serve at the bar; Plead at the law for pence and for pounds, Not for love of our Lord unloose their lips

Thou mightest better measure the mist on Malvern hills

Than get a mum of their mouth till money be shown.

I saw there bishops bold and bachelors of divinity

Become clerks of account, the king to Archdeacons and deacons, that dignity

To preach to the people and poor men to feed,

Have leapt to London, by leave of their bishops,

To be clerks of the King's Bench, to the country's hurt.

Barons and burgesses, and husbandmen also,

I saw in that assembly, as ye shall hear hereafter.

Bakers, butchers, and brewers many,
Woollen weavers, and weavers of linen,
Tailors, tanners, and fullers also,
Masons, miners, and many other crafts,
Ditchers and delvers, that do their work ill,
And drive forth the long day with "Dien vous sauve, dame Emma."

Cooks and their boys cry "Hot pies, hot! Good geese and pigs, go dine, go dine!"
Taverners to them told the same tale

With good wine of Gascony and wine of Alsace,

Of Rhine and of Rochelle, the roast to di-

All this I saw sleeping, and seven times more.

PASSUS I

What this mountain meaneth, and this dark dale,

And this fair field full of folk, fairly I shall you show.

4 "God save you, dame Emma"—apparently a popular song.

Probably the great plague of 1348-1349.

A lady lovely in face, in linen clothed, Came down from the cliff, and called me gently,

And said, "Son, sleepest thou? Seest thou

these people

All how busy they be about vanity?

The most part of the people that pass now on earth,

If they have honour in this world, they care for nothing better;

Of other heaven than here they have no regard."

I was afraid of her face, though she fair were,

And said, "Pardon, madame, what does this mean?"

"This tower and this hill," quoth she, "Truth is therein,

And would that ye wrought as his word teacheth,

For he is Father of faith, that formed you all Both with skin and with face, and gave you five senses

For to worship him therewith, while ye be

And because he commanded the earth to serve you each one

With woollen, with linen, with livelihood at need,

In moderate manner, to put you at ease,
And commanded of his courtesy in common three things,

Their names are needful and to name them I propose

By rule and by reason, to rehearse them as follows:

The one clothing is, from chill you to save.

And the second meat at meals, against discomfort of thyself;

And drink when thou art dry, but do it not out of reason

So that thou be the worse when thou work shouldest.

Dread delightful drink, and thou shalt do the better:

Moderation is medicine, though you crave much.

All is not good for the soul that pleaseth the body,

Nor all food to the body that is dear to the

Believe not thy body, for a liar him teach-

For the fiend and thy flesh follow together And injure thy soul — set it in thy heart; And that thou shouldest beware, I teach thee the better."

"Ah, madame, merci," quoth I, "thy words please me well.

But the money on this earth, that men so fast hold,

Tell me to whom that treasure belongeth."
"Go to the Gospel," quoth she, "that

When the people asked him about a penny in the temple,

And he asked of them of whom spake the

And whom the image was like that thereon stood.

'Then render,' quoth Christ, 'what to Caesar belongeth,

And what is God's to God, or else ye do ill.'

For Right Reason should rule you all, And Common Sense be warden, our wealth to guard,

And tower of our treasure to give it you at need;

For husbandry and he hold well together."

Then I asked her fairly, for [the sake of] him that made her,

"That dungeon in that deep vale, that dreadful is to see,

What may it mean, madame, I thee beseech."

"That is the Castle of Care," quoth she; "whoso cometh therein

May curse that he was born to body or to soul.

Therein dwelleth a wight that Wrong is called,

Father of falseness, — he founded it himself.

Adam and Eve he egged on to do ill; Counselled Cain to kill his brother; Judas he cheated with the Jews' silver,

And on an elder tree hanged him after.

He is a hinderer of love, and lieth to all

That trust in their treasure, wherein is no truth."

Then had I wonder in my wits what woman it might be

That such wise words of Holy Writ me showed; 70

And I greeted her in the High Name, ere she thence went,

What she might be indeed that taught me so fairly.

"Holy Church I am," quoth she, "thou oughtest to know me,

I received thee first, and thy faith taught thee.

Thou broughtest me pledges my bidding to do,

And loyally to love me, while thy life lasted."

Then kneeled I on my knees and cried to her for grace,

And prayed her piteously to pray for our sins,

And eke to teach me kindly on Christ to believe,

That I might work the will of Him that made me a man. 80

"Show me no treasure, but tell me this

How I may save my soul, thou that holy art held."

"When all treasure is tested, truth is the

I appeal to 'God is Love' to judge the truth. It is as precious a jewel as dear God himself.

For whose is true of his tongue, and telleth naught else,

Doth his work with truth, and doth no man ill;

He is accounted of the Gospel, on earth and above,

And also likened to our Lord, by Saint Luke's words.

Clerks that know it should teach it about, 90 For Christians and non-Christians, each claims it for himself.

Kings and knights should conduct themselves reasonably,

And rightly roam the realms about,

And take trespassers and tie them fast Till truth had determined the trespass to the end.

For David, in his days, he dubbed knights,

Made them swear on their sword to serve truth ever,

That is plainly the profession that pertaineth to knights,

And not to fast one Friday in five score years,

But to hold with men and women that seek the truth,

And leave off for no love nor grasping of gifts;

And he that oversteps that point is apostate of the order,

For Christ, king of kings, knighted ten, Cherubim and Seraphim, seven such and another,1

And gave them mastery and might, in his majesty,

And over his army made them archangels, And taught them through the Trinity truth to know,

And to be obedient to his bidding, he bade them naught else.

Lucifer with legions learned it in heaven. He was loveliest to see, after our Lord, 110 Till he broke obedience through boast of himself.

Then fell be with his fellows, and fiends they became,

Out of heaven into bell hobbled fast,

Some into the air, and some to the earth, and some into hell deep;

But Lucifer lieth lowest of them all;

For pride that he put on, his pain hath no end.

And all that work wrong, wend they shall, After their death day, and with that devil

But they that work that word that Holy Writ teacheth,

And end, as I said before, in profitable works,

May be sure that their souls shall to heaven, Where Truth is in Trinity and crowneth them all.

For I say certainly, in view of the texts,

When all treasure is tried, Truth is the best.

Teach it to the ignorant, for the lettered know it,

That Truth is a treasure, the finest on earth."

"Yet have I no natural knowledge," quoth I, "thou must teach me better,

By what power in my body it beginneth, and where."

"Thou dotest, dolt," quoth she, "dull are thy wits.

It is a natural knowledge that tells thee in the heart 130

For to love thy lord liefer than thyself; No deadly sin to do, die though thou shouldest.

This, I trow, is Truth! Whose can teach

See that thou suffer him to say it, and then teach it further!

For thus teacheth us His Word — work thou thereafter —

That Love is the liefest thing that our Lord asketh,

And eke the plant of peace. Preach it to thy harp

Where thou art merry at thy meat, when men bid thee sing;

For from the heart's own wisdom springeth the song.

That belongs to the Father that formed us all.

He looked on us with love, and let His

Meekly for our misdeeds, to amend us all.

And yet wished He no woe to them that wrought Him that pain,

But meekly with mouth mercy He besought,

To have pity on that people that tortured Him to death.

Here thon mightest see example, in Himself alone,

How He was mighty and meek, that merey did grant

To them that hanged him high, and his heart pierced.

Therefore I recommend the rich to have ruth on the poor,

Though ye be mighty at law, be meek in your works.

Eadem mensura qua mensi fueritis, remecietur vohis.¹

For the same measure that ye mete, amiss or otherwise,

Ye shall be weighed therewith, when ye wend hence.

For though ye be true of tongue, and honestly win,

And eke as chaste as a child that in church weepeth,

Unless ye live truly and also love the poor, And such good as God sent truly share,

Ye have no more merit in mass nor in hours

Than Mawkin of her maidenhood that no man desireth.

For James the gentle bound it in his book, That faith without works is feebler than nothing,

And dead as a doornail unless the deed follow.

Chastity without charity - know thou in truth -

Is as useless as a lamp that no light is in.

Many charleins are cheste, who charity

Many chaplains are chaste, who charity have none;

No men than they are harder when they are advanced;

Unkind to their kin and to all Christians; They devour their own alms and demand ever more.

Such chastity without charity will be claimed 2 in hell.

Curates that should keep themselves clean in their bodies,

They are cumbered with care and cannot escape it,

So hard are they with avarice clamped to-

That is no truth of the Trinity, but treachery of hell,

And a teaching of laymen more grudgingly to give.

For these are words written in the evangel, Date et dabitur vobis, 8 for I deal to you all

Your grace and your good hap, your wealth to win,

And therewith acknowledge me naturally for what I send you.

This is the lock of Love that letteth out my grace

To comfort the careworn, cumbered with sin.

Love is the liefest thing that our Lord asketh, 180 And eke the straight way that goeth into

And eke the straight way that goeth into heaven.

Therefore I say as I said before, in view of these texts,

I may no longer linger; now our Lord keep thee!"

PASSUS II

Yet kneeled I on my knees, and cried to her for grace.

And said, "Mercy, madame, for the love of Mary of heaven,

That bore the blessed babe, that bought us on the cross,

Teach me the natural skill to know the False."

"Look on the left hand," quoth she, "and see where he standeth, Both False and Flattery, and all his whole following!"

I looked on the left side, as the lady me taught;

Then was I ware of a woman, wonderfully clothed.

simmed with

Trimmed with fur, the richest upon earth, Crowned with a crown, the king hath no better.

All her five fingers were furnished with rings

Of the preciousest jewelry that prince ever wore.

In red scarlet she rode, ribboned with gold, There is no queen more gorgeous that on earth quick is and alive.

"What is this woman," quoth I, "thus wonderfully attired?"

"That is Meed, the maiden," quoth she, "that hath me marred oft,

And lied about my lore to lords about.

In the Pope's palace she is as privy as myself; And so should she not be, for Wrong was her sire.

Out of Wrong she sprang to misfortune of many.

I ought to be higher than she, for I am better born.

Tomorrow is the marriage made of Meed and False;

Flattery, with fair speech, bath brought them together,

And Guile hath persuaded her to grant all his will.

And all is by Liar's leading that they live together.

Tomorrow is the marriage made, true as I tell thee,

That thou might'st know, if thou wilt, what they all are 1 Meed is properly reward; but the signification here varies from legitimate payment to gross bribery. It is often best translated by "graft." That belong to that lordship, the great and the small.

Know them there if thou canst, and keep thee from them all,

If thou desirest to dwell with Truth in his bliss;

Learn His law that is so level, and then

Learn His law that is so loyal, and then teach it further.

I may no longer linger, to our Lord I commend thee.

And become a good man, spite of greed, I advise."

When she was gone from me, I looked and beheld

All this rich retinue that reigned with False

Were bid to the bridal on both of the sides. Sir Simony is sent for, to seal the charters That False or Flattery at any price had

And dower Meed therewith, in marriage for ever.

But there was neither hall nor house that might harbour the people

That each field was not full of folk al about.

In midst of a mountain, at the hour of mid-morning

Was pitched a pavilion, a proud one for the nonce;

And ten thousand of tents spread out besides,

For knights from the country and strangers about,

For assizers, for summoners, for sellers, for buyers,

For ignorant, for learned, for laborers in villages,

And for the flattering friars, all the four orders,

All to witness well what the deed desired, In what manner Meed in marriage was endowed:

To be fastened with False, the fee was levied.

Then Flattery fetched her forth, and to False gave her

On condition that False shall sustain her forever.

She to be obedient and ready his bidding to fulfil,

In bed and at board, obedient and courteous,

And as Sir Simony shall say, to follow his will.

Now Simony and Civil Law stand forth both,

Unfolding the dowry that Falseness made, And thus began these men and bellowed full loud:

"This know and witness, all that dwell on earth.

That I, Flattery, endow False with that maiden Meed,

To be present in pride, for poor or for rich,1

With the Earldom of Envy ever to last, With all the Lordship [of Lechery]² in length and in breadth;

With the Kingdom of Covetousness I crown them together,

With the Isle of Usury and Avarice the false,

Gluttony and great oaths I give them together,

With all delights and lusts the devil to

With all the service of Sloth I endow them together;

To have and to hold, and all their heirs after, 70

With the appurtenances of purgatory, into the pains of hell:

Yielding for this thing, at the year's end, Their souls to Satan, to send into pain, There to dwell with Wrong, while God is in heaven."

In witness of which thing Wrong was the first,

Pierce the pardoner, a Pauline doctor,
Bett the beadle of Buckinghamshire,
Randolph the reeve of the Rutland district,
Taborers and tumblers and tapsters many,
Mund the miller and many more besides.
In the date of the devil³ the deed was sealed,

In sight of Sir Simony and by notaries'

Then tormented was Theology when he this tale heard,

And said to Civil Law, "Sorrow on thy

Such a wedding to make to render Truth wroth;

And ere this wedding be wrought, woe thee betide!

For Meed is a wealthy one, a maiden with goods;

1 B To be prynces in pryde and pouerte to despise.
2 B C. Presumably, in parody of Anno Domini.

God grant us to give her where Truth will assign!

And thou hast given her to a trickster, God give thee sorrow!

The text telleth not so, Truth knows the sooth:

Dignus est operarius mercede sua; 4

'Worthy is the workman his hire to have;'
And thou hast bestowed her on False, fie on thy law!

For lechers and liars lightly thou trustest, Simony and thyself injure Holy Church; Ye shall abide it both, by God that me made,

At one year's end when ye reckon shall; He and these notaries annoy the people.

For well ye know, deceivers, unless your wits fail,

That False is a schemer, a shirker of work, And a bastard born of Beelzebub's kin. 100 And Meed is a jewelled one, a maiden of gentry,

She might kiss the king for cousin, if she would.

Work by wisdom and then by wit,

Lead her to London, where law is handled, See if legally it be allowed that they lie together,

And if the justice will adjudge her to be joined with False.

Yet beware of the wedding, for wise is Truth,

For Conscience is of his council, and knoweth you each one;

And if he find such defect that ye with False hold

It shall oppress your souls sorely at last."

To this Civil Law assented, but Simony would not Till he had silver for his advice and his seal. Then fetched Flattery forth florins enough, And bade Guile go and give gold about,

And especially to these notaries that they have no lack;

And fee False Witness with florins enough, For he can master Meed and make her do his will;

For where falseness is often found, there faith faileth.

When the gold was given, great were the

To False and to Flattery, for their fair gifts. 120

4 Luke, x, 7.

Many came to comfort False against care, And swore on holy relics, "Cease shall we never Ere Meed be thy wedded wife, through wisdom of us all.

For we have so mastered Meed with our smooth words

That she agrees to go with a good will

To London to look if the law will Judge you jointly to be joined for ever."

Then was False fain, and Flattery blithe,

And had all men called from the country about

To array them ready, both burgesses and sheriffs,

To wend with them to Westminster, to witness the deed.

Then hunted they for horses to carry them thither:

But Flattery fetched forth foals of the best, And set Meed on the back of a sheriff newly shod,

And False on a juror that softly trotted,

(For Falseness against the faith jurors seduceth,

Through cumbering of covetousness, to climb over truth,

That the faith is down trodden and falsely defamed,

And Falseness is become a lord, and lives as he likes):

Flattery on a fair speech, full finely attired:

For fair speech without faith is brother to Falseness;

And thus jurors are summoned to serve the false,

And fair speech for Flattery who many deceives.

Then notaries who had no horses, annoyed they were

That Simony and Civil Law should go on foot.

Then said Civil Law, and swore by the rood, That summoners should be saddled and serve them each one;

"And have provisors appareled, in palfrey wise.

Sir Simony himself shall sit on their backs, And all deans and sub-deans as prancers prepare

For they shall bear bishops and bring them to rest.

The people of the Paulines, for pleas in the consistory,

Shall serve myself, who Civil Law am called;

Put a cart saddle on our commissary, our cart he shall draw,

And fetch our victuals from the fornicators; And make of Liar a long cart, to draw all these others,

Story-tellers and frauds that on foot remain."

Now False and Flattery fare forth together,

And Meed in the midst, and all the crowd after.

Leisure I lack to tell the train that follows them,

Of as many manners of men as on earth live.

But Guile was leader and guided them all.
Soothness saw them well and said but little,
But pricked on his palfrey, and passed them all,

And came to the king's court, and Conscience told,

And Conscience to the king repeated it again.

"Now, by Christ," quoth the king, "if I might catch

False or Flattery, or any of his fellows,

I would be wreaked on these wretches that work so ill,

And have them hanged by the neck, and all that maintain them;

No man on earth shall bail out 1 the least of them,

But right as the law decides, let it fall on them all.

And command the constable, that came at the first,

To attack the traitors, in spite of any bribe; I order you to fetter False fast, in spite of any kind of gifts,

And to cut off Guile's head, let him go no further;

And bring Meed to me, in spite of them all.
To Simony and Civil Law I send a warning
That Holy Church for them is harmed for ever.

And if ye catch Liar, let him not escape 180 Being set on the pillory, in spite of any prayer;

I bid thee watch for them well, let none of them escape."

Dread at the door stood, and the din heard,

1 B C. meynprise. A meyntene.

And quickly went he to warn the False, And bade him flee fast, and his fellows too. Then False for fear fled to the friars,

And Guile took to flight, in fear of death; But merchants met him, and made him abide.

Besought him in their shops to sell their ware,

Apparelled him as a 'prentice, the people to serve.

Lightly Liar leapt away thence,

Lurked through lanes, lugged about by many.

He was nowhere welcome, spite of his many tales,

But hunted out everywhere, and ordered to pack.

to pack

Pardoners had pity, and took him indoors, Washed him and wrung [his clothes], and wound him in clouts,

And sent him on Sundays with seals to

And for pence gave pardon, pounds at a time.
This learned the leeches, and letters to him sent.

To dwell with them, diagnoses to make. 200 Grocers spake with him to look after their wares.

For he had skill in their craft, and knew many gums.

Minstrels and messengers met with him once,

And held him back half a year and eleven weeks.

Friars, with fair speeches, fetched him thence;

That visitors might know him not, kept him like a friar;

But he hath leave to leap out, as often as he liketh,

And is welcome when he will, and dwells with them oft.

And all fled for fear and flew into corners;

Save Meed the maiden, no man dared abide;

But, truly to tell, she trembled for fear, And wept, too, and wrung her hands, when she was arrested.

PASSUS III

Now is Meed the maiden taken, and no more of them all,

By beadles and bailiffs, brought to the king.

The king called a clerk, I know not his name,

To take Meed the maiden, and make her at ease.

"I shall try her myself, and truly inquire What man in this world would be dearest to her.

And if she work by my wit, and my will follow,

I shall forgive her the guilt, so help me God!"

Courteously the clerk then, as the king commanded,

Took the maiden by the middle, and brought her to the chamber. 10

There was mirth and minstrelsy to please

Meed withal.

Those that dwell at Westminster worship her all.

Gently, with joy, the Justice soon

Repaired to the chamber where the lady was,

Comforted her kindly, and made her good cheer,

And said, "Mourn thou not, Meed, nor be thou sorrowful,

For we will guide the king and thy way shape,

For all the craft of Conscience, and scheme, as I trow,

That thou shalt have both might and mastery, and do what thou likest

With the king and the commons, and the

Mildly then Meed thanked them all For their great goodness, and gave them

Goblets of pure gold, and pieces of silver,

Rings with rubies, and riches enough,
The least of their company a mutton 1 of gold.

Then took they their leave, these lordings, of Meed.

With that there came clerks to comfort the same:

"We bid thee be blithe, for we be thine

To work thy will, while our life lasteth."

Courteously then she promised them the same.

To love them loyally and make them lords,

And in consistory at court to tell their names.

1 A gold coin.

"No ignorance shall hinder them, the most ignorant that I love,

From being advanced; for I am known Where learned clerks are left in the lurch."

Then came there a confessor, caped like a friar:

To Meed the maiden full meekly he bowed, And said full softly, as if it were in shrift, "Though learned and lay had all by thee lain,

And though False had followed thee these fifteen winters.

I shall absolve thee myself, for a load of wheat.

And also be thy bawd, and bear well thy errand

Among clerks and knights, to bring down Conscience."

Then Meed, for her misdeeds, to that man kneeled,

And shrove her of her sins, shamefully, I

She told him a tale, and gave him a noble -To be her bedesman, and her bawd after.

Then he absolved her soon, and next to her

"We have a window a-making, will cost us full dear:

If thou wouldst glaze the gable, and grave therein thy name,

Secure should thy soul be to dwell in heaven."

"Knew I that," quoth the woman, "there is neither window nor altar,

That I would n't make or mend, and my name write thereon,

That each man should say, I should be sister of your house." But God to all good folk such graving forbids.

And saith, Nesciat sinistra quid faciat dextra:1

Let not thy left hand, late nor early, Be aware what thy right hand works or bestows.'

But share it so secretly that pride be not

Neither in sight nor in soul; for God himself knoweth

Who is courteous or kind, covetous or the contrary.

Therefore, I teach you, lords, such writing to leave.

The king came from council, and called for Meed.

And sent off quickly servants to fetch her,

And brought her to the presence, with bliss and with joy;

With mirth and with minstrelsy they pleased her each one.

Courteously the king commenceth to tell,
To Meed the maiden speaketh those words:
"Unwisely, I wis, wrought hast thou oft; 101
But worse wroughtest thou never than when thou False took.

But I forgive thee this guilt, and grant thee-my grace;

Henceforth to thy deathday do so no more.

I have a knight called Conscience, come lately from far,

If he wish thee to wife, wilt thou him have?"

"Yea, lord," quoth that lady, "Lord forbid I should other!

Unless I bow to your bidding, hang me at once!"

Then was Conscience called to come and appear

Before the king and his council, clerks and others

Kneeling, Conscience to the king made obeisance,

To know what his will was, and what he would do.

"Wilt thou wed this woman," quoth the king, "if I will assent?

She is fain of thy fellowship, and would be thy mate."

"Nay," quoth Conscience to the king, "Christ forbid it me!

Ere I wed such a wife, woe me betide!

She is frail of her flesh, fickle of her tongue,

She maketh men misdo many score times; Trusting to her treasure, find sorrow full many.

To wives and widows wantonness she teacheth;

Learneth them lechery that love her gifts;

Our father Adam 1 she brought down with fair promise:

Poisoned popes, and impaireth Holy Church. There is no better bawd, by Him that me made!

Between heaven and hell, in earth though men sought.

She is wanton in her wishes, tale-bearing with her tongue,

Common as the cart-road to knaves and to all;

To priests, to minstrels, to lepers in hedges, Jurors and summoners, such men her praise; Sheriffs of shires were lost but for her. 130 She causeth men to lose their land, and their lives after.

And letteth prisoners go, and payeth for them oft.

She giveth the jailer gold and groats together,

To unfetter the false, to flee where they like.

She taketh the true by the top, and tieth him fast,

And for hate hangeth him that harm did never.

They that are curst in consistory count it not at a rush, For she gives capes to the commissary, and coats to the clerks; She is absolved as soon as herself it pleas-

She may as much do in space of one month As your secret seal in seven score days. 141 She is privy with the pope, as provisors know:

Sir Simony and she put seals on the bulls; She blesseth the bishops, though ignorant they be.

Prebendaries, parsons, priests, she maintaineth,

To keep lemans and concubines all their life days,

And bring forth children against the laws forbidding it.

Where she stands well with the king, woe to the realm!

For she is favorable to False who tramples Truth oft.

Barons and burgesses she brings into servitude,

She bribes with her jewels, our justices she ruins.

¹ So Vernon MS. All others read Your father; i.e. Edward II.

She lieth against the law, and hindereth it so hard

That faith may make no headway, her floring go so thick.

She leadeth the law as she liketh, and lovedays maketh,

Bewilderment for a poor man, though he plead ever.

Law is so lordly and loath to make an end Without presents or pence, it pleaseth full few.

Learning and covetousness she coupleth together.

This is the life of the lady, our Lord give her sorrow!

And all that maintain her, mischance them betide! 160

For the poor may have no power to complain though they suffer,

Such a master is Meed among men of goods."

Then mourned Meed, and made her moan to the king

To have space to speak, hoping to succeed.

Then the king granted her grace with a good will:

"Excuse thyself if thou canst, I can say no more:

For Conscience hath accused thee, to dismiss thee for ever."

"Nay, lord," quoth that lady, "believe him the worse

When ye know verily where the wrong lieth.

Where mischief is great, lord, Meed may help, 170

And thou knowest, Conscience, I came not to chide

Nor to defame thy person with a proud heart.

Well thou wittest, Conscience, unless thou wilt lie,

Thou hast hung on my neck eleven times,

And also grasped my gold, and given it where thou likedst.

Why thou art wroth now, seems to me a wonder,

For yet I can, as before, honor thee with gifts,

And maintain thy manhood, more than thou knowest,

And thou hast foully defamed me, before the king here.

For never killed I a king, nor counselled thereto; 180

Nor did I ever as thou thinkest, I appeal to the king.

In Normandy was he not annoyed for my sake;

But thou thyself, in truth, didst shame him there,

Creptest into a cabin, to keep thy nails from cold,

Thoughtest that winter would have lasted ever,

And dreadedst to have been dead for a dim cloud,

And hastedst homeward for thy bellyhunger.

Without pity, pillager, poor men thou robbedest,

And bore their brass on thy back to Calais to sell.

There I stayed with my lord, his life to save,

Made him mirth full much, to leave off mourning,

Clapped them on the backs, their hearts to embolden,

Made them leap for, hope to have me at demand:

Had I been marshal of his men, by Mary of heaven!

I durst have laid my life, and no less bet, He'd have been lord of that land, in length and in breadth;

And also king of that kith, his kin to help; The least bairn of his blood a baron's peer. Truly, thou Conscience, thou didst counsel him thence,

To leave that lordship for a little silver, 200 That is the richest realm that the rain falls upon!

It becometh a king who keepeth a realm To give meed to men that meekly him serve;

To aliens, to all men, to honor them with gifts.

Meed maketh him beloved and held to be

Emperors and earls, and all manner of lords, Through gifts get young men to run and to ride.

The pope and his prelates presents receive, And give men meed to maintain their laws. Servants for their service — ye see well the truth —

Get meed from their masters as they may agree.

Beggars for their prayers beg men for meed.

Minstrels for their mirth ask for meed.

The king gives meed to his men to make peace in the land;

Men that teach children 1 meed from them

Priests that preach to the people to be

Ask meed and mass-pence and their meat

All kinds of craftsmen crave meed for their 'prentices;

Meed and merchandise must needs go together.

There may no wight, as I ween, without meed live."

"Now," quoth the king to Conscience, "by Christ, as methinks, Meed is worthy much mastery to have!" "Nay," quoth Conscience to the king, and kneeled to the ground;

"There be two kinds of meed, my lord, by thy leave.

The one good God of His grace giveth, in His bliss,

To them that work well while they are here.

The prophet preached it, and put in the Psalter.

Qui pecuniam suam non dedit ad usuram,

Take no meed, my lord, from men that are true:

Love them, believe them, for our Lord of heaven's love.

God's meed and His mercy therewith thou mayst win.

But there is a meed without measure that desireth mastery,

To maintain misdoers meed do they take: And thereof saith the Psalter in the end of the Psalms.

In quorum manibus iniquitates sunt; dextra eorum repleta est muneribus; 8

That their right hand is heaped full of gifts,

And they that grasp their gifts, so help me

They shall abide it bitterly, or the Book lieth.

It is a permutation, one penny for another. But didst thou never read Kings, thou recreant Meed.

God sent to say, by Samuel's mouth,

That Agag and Amalek, and all his people after.

Should die for a deed that his ancestors had done,

Against Israel, and Aaron, and Moses his brother.

Samuel said to Saul, 'God sendeth thee commandment To be obedient and ready his bidding to

"Wend thither with thy host women to kill, Children and churls, chop them to death; Look thou kill the king, covet not his goods For millions of money: murder them each Men and beasts, burn them all to ashes." And because he killed not the king, as Christ himself commanded,

Coveted fair cattle, and killed not his beasts,

But brought with him the beasts, as the Bible telleth,

God sent to say that Saul should die. And all his seed for that sin shamefully

1 Samuel, xv.

Samuel will slay him, and Saul will be blamed,

David shall be diademed and daunt them all, And one Christian king keep us each one. Conscience knoweth this, for common sense me taught

That Reason shall reign, and realms govern; Meed shall no more be master on earth, But Love and Lowness and Loyalty together.

And on him that trespasseth against Truth, or doth against his will.

Loyalty shall execute the law, or he shall lose his life.

Shall no sergeant for that service wear a silk hood,

Nor any striped robe with rich fur.

Meed, from the misdoers, maketh men so

That Law is become a lord, and Loyalty is Unkindness is commander, and Kindness is banished. 280

But Common Sense shall come yet, and Conscience together,

And make of Law a laborer, such Love shall arise."

PASSUS IV

"Cease," said the king, "I suffer you no more.

Ye shall be reconciled in truth, and serve me both.

Kiss her," quoth the king, "Conscience, I command."

"Nay, by Christ," quoth Conscience, "I take my leave rather!

Unless Reason advise me thereto, first will I die!"

"And I command thee," quoth the king to Conscience then,

"That thou haste thee to ride, and Reason thou fetch;

Command him that he come, my counsel to hear.

For he shall rule my realm, and advise me the best

About Meed and others, and what man shall wed her;

And take care, Conscience, so help me Christ!

How thou leadest my people, learned and lay."

"I am pleased with that promise," said the fellow then,

And rode right to Reason, and whispered in his ear,

Said as the king sent, and then took his leave.

"I shall array me to ride," quoth Reason, "rest thee awhile,"—

And called Cato his servant, courteous of speech —

"Set my saddle upon Suffer-till-I-see-mytime,

And look thou girth him well with very many girths;

Hang on him a heavy bridle to bear his head low;

Yet will he make many a neigh, ere he come there."

Then Conscience on his steed rideth forth fast,

And Reason with him rideth, hurrying hard, But on a wain Witty and Wisdom together Followed them fast, for they had to do

In Exchequer and Chancery, to be discharged of things;

And rode fast, for Reason must advise them how best

To save themselves from shame and from harm.

But Conscience came first to court by a mile,
And ran forward with Reason, right to the king.

Court by a the bine they came to R.

Courteously the king then came to Reason,

Between himself and his son set him on the bench,

And consulted a great while wisely together.

Then Peace came to parliament, put up petition,

How that Wrong against his will his wife had taken,

And how he ravished Rose, Reynald's love, And Margaret of her maidenhood, for all she could do.

"Both my geese and my pigs his fellows fetched away;

I dare not for dread of them fight nor chide.

He borrowed of me Bayard, and brought him again never,

Nor any farthing for him, for aught that I could plead.

He maintaineth his men to murder mine own,

Forestalleth me at fairs, brawleth at my bargainings,

Breaketh in my barn-door, and beareth away my wheat,

And giveth me but a tally for ten quarter of oats.

And yet he beat me besides, and lieth by my maiden:

I am not so hardy to look him in the face."
The king knew he said sooth, for Conscience him told.

Wrong was a-feared then, and Wisdom sought

To make his peace with pence, and proffered forth money, 50

And said, "Had I love from the king, little would I reck

Though Peace and his power complained on me ever."

Wisdom went then, and so did Wit,

Because Wrong had done so wicked a deed, And warned Wrong then, with such a wise tale:—

"Whose worketh wilfully maketh wrath oft:
I say it about thyself, thou shalt it soon find.
Unless Meed make it right, thy ill-luck is on thee,

For both thy life and thy land lie in the king's grace."

Wrong then to Wisdom wept for help, 60 Him for his handy-dandy ¹ readily he paid. Then Wisdom and Wit went together And took Meed with them, mercy to win. Peace put forth his head, showed his bloody

"Without guilt, God wot, got I this harm."
Conscience and the king knew the truth,
Knew well that Wrong was a wicked one

But Wisdom and Wit were zealous and

To overcome the king with money if they might.

The king swore then, by Christ, and by his crown both,

That Wrong for his works should woe suffer, And commanded a constable to cast him in irons:

"He shall not these seven years see his feet

"God wot," quoth Wisdom, "that were not the best;

If he amends make, let him give surety; To be a pledge for his bale,² and buy him boot.³

² Injury, harm done. ³ Redress.

And amend his misdeed, and be always the better."

Wit accorded herewith and said to him the same;

"It is better that Boot should bring down Bale

Than that Bale be beaten and Boot be ne'er the better." 80

Then Meed humbled herself and mercy besought,

And proffered Peace a present all of pure red gold:

"Have this from me," quoth she, "to amend thy harm with,

For I will wager for Wrong, he will do so no more."

Peace then pitifully prayed the king

To have mercy on that man, that harmed him oft;

"Because he hath pledged me amends, as Wisdom him taught,

I forgive him that guilt, with a good-will; So that ye assent thereto, I can no more say,

For Meed hath made me amends, I may no more ask." 90

"Nay," quoth the king then, "so God give me bliss!

Wrong wendeth not so away, till I wot more;

Leapt he so lightly away, laugh he would And again be the bolder to beat my servants;

Unless Reason have ruth on him, he remaineth in the stocks

As long as I live, unless more love change it."

Then some advised Reason to have ruth of that raseal,

And to counsel the king and Conscience both;

That Meed might be surety, Reason they besought.

"Advise me not," quoth Reason, "ruth to have,

Till lords and ladies all love truth,

Till Peronelle's fur be put in her box,

Till over-cherished children be chastened with rods,

Till the holiness of ribalds be held [common] as a hind;

Till clerks and knights be courteous with their mouths

And hate to do their ribaldry, and use it no more;

Till priests their preaching prove in themselves.

And do it in deed, to draw us to God;

Till Saint James be sought where I shall ordain,

And no man go to Galicia, unless he go for ever;

And no Rome-runners for robbers abroad Bear over sea silver that beareth the king's stamp,

Neither groats nor gold graven with the king's crown,

Upon forfeit of that fee, whoever finds it at Dover,

Unless it be a merchant or his men, or messenger with letters,

Or provisors or priests that popes advance.

"And yet," quoth Reason, "by the rood,
I shall no ruth have,

While Meed hath any mastery to plead in this hall;

But I may show you examples, I say it of myself.

For I say it for my soul's sake, if it so

That I were king with crown, to keep a realm.

Should never Wrong in this world, that I might know of,

Be unpunished by my power, on peril of my soul!

Nor get grace through gift, so help me God! Nor for meed get mercy, unless meekness cause it.

For Nullum Malum, the man, met with Impunitum.

And bade Nullum Bonum be irremuneratum.

Let thy clerk, sir king, construe this in English:

And if thou workest it wisely I wager both my ears

That Law shall be a laborer and cart dung a-field,

And Love shall lead thy land, as it dearly pleaseth thee."

Clerks that were confessors got together in couples

For to construe this clause, and explain it after.

When Reason to these men rehearsed these words,

Was none in that courtroom, great or small, That held not Reason a master there, and Meed a great wretch.

1 No evil unpunished; no good unrewarded.

Love made light of Meed, and laughed her to scorn,

And said it so foud that Soothness it heard:
"Whose wisheth her to wife, for wealth of her goods,

Unless he be picked for a cuckold, cut off both mine ears!"

Was neither Wisdom then, nor Witty his fellow,

That could utter a word, to gainsay Reason; But stared in a brown study and stood as beasts.

The king accorded, by Christ, to Reason's cunning,

And repeated what Reason had rightly shown:

"But it is hard, by mine head, to bring it hereto,

All my lieges to lead in this level way."
"By Him that was stretched on the rood," quoth Reason to the king,

"Unless I rule thus thy realm, rend out my ribs!

If it be so that obedience be at my command."

"I assent," quoth the king, "by Saint Mary, my lady,

When my council is come, of clerks and of earls.

But readily, Reason, thou ridest not hence, For as long as I live, let thee go will I not." "I am ready," quoth Reason, "to remain with thee ever;

So that Conscience be our counsellor, care I for no better."

"I grant gladly," quoth the king, "God forbid he fail us,

And as long as I live, live we together."

PASSUS V

The king and his knights to the church went

To hear matins and mass, and to the meat after

Then waked I from my winking, I was woful withal

That I had not heavier slept and seen more. Ere I a furlong had fared, a faintness me

That further might I not a-foot, for default of sleep.

I sat softly adown, and said my creed,
And so I babbled on my beads that it brought me asleep.

Then saw I much more than I before told,

For I saw the field full of folk that I before showed,

And Conscience with a cross came to preach.

He prayed the people to have pity on themselves,

And proved that these pestilences were for pure sin,

And this southwestern wind on a Saturday

Was clearly for pride, and for no cause else,

Peartrees and plumtrees were dashed to the ground,

In ensample to men that we should do the better.

Beeches and broad oaks were blown to the earth.

And turned the tail upward in token of dread

That deadly sin ere Doomsday should destroy them all.

On this matter I might mumble full long, But I say as I saw, so help me God!

How Conscience with a cross commenced to preach.

He bade wasters go work at what they best could,

And win what they wasted with some sort of craft.

He prayed Peronelle her fur-trimming to leave.

And keep it in her coffer for capital at need. Thomas he taught to take two staves,

And fetch home Felice from the cuckingstool.

He warned Wat his wife was to blame, 30 That her head-dress was worth a mark and his hood worth a great.

He charged merchants to chasten their children,

Let them lack no respect, while they are young.

He prayed priests and prelates together, What they preach to the people to prove it in themselves —

"And live as ye teach us, we will love you the better."

And then he advised the orders their rule to obey—

"Lest the king and his council abridge your supplies,

And be steward in your stead, till ye be better ordered.

And ye that seek St. James, and saints at Rome,

Seek me Saint Truth, for He can save you all;

Qui cum patre et filio, fare you well!"

Then ran Repentance and rehearsed this theme,

And made William to weep water with his eyes.

Pride Pernel Proud-heart flung herself on the ground,

And lay long ere she looked up, and to Our Lady cried,

And promised to Him who all of us made She would unsew her smock, and wear instead a hair shirt

To tame her flesh with, that frail was to sin:

"Shall never light heart seize me, but I shall hold me down 50

And endure to be slandered as I never did before.

And now I can put on meekness, and mercy beseech

Of all of whom I have had envy in my heart."

Lust Lecher said "Alas!" and to Our Lady cried
To win for him mercy for his misdeeds,

Between God himself and his poor soul, Provided that he should on Saturday, for seven years,

Drink but with the duck and dine but once.

Envy Envy, with heavy heart, asketh after shrift,

And greatly his guiltiness beginneth to show.

Pale as a pellet, in a palsy he seemed, Clothed in a coarse cloth, I could him not describe:

A kirtle and a short cloak, a knife by his side:

Of a friar's frock were the fronts of his sleeves.

As a leek that had lain long in the sun So looked he with lean cheeks; foully he frowned.

His body was swollen; for wrath he bit his lips.

Wrathfully he clenched his fist, he thought to avenge himself

With works or with words, when he saw his

"Venom, or varnish, or vinegar, I trow, 70 Boils in my belly, or grows there, I ween. Many a day could I not do as a man ought, Such wind in my belly welleth ere I dine.

I have a neighbor nigh me, I have annoyed him oft,

Blamed him behind his back, to bring him in disgrace.

Injured him by my power, punished him full

Belied him to lords, to make him lose silver, Turned his friends to foes, with my false tongue;

His grace and his good luck grieve me full

Between him and his household I have made wrath: Both his life and his limb were lost through my tongue.

When I met in the market him I most hate, I hailed him as courteously as if I were his friend.

He is doughtier than I, I dare do him no

But had I mastery and might, I had murdered him for ever!

When I come to the church, and kneel before the rood,

And should pray for the people, as the priest teacheth us,

Then I cry upon my knees that Christ give them sorrow

That have borne away my bowl and my broad sheet.

From the altar I turn mine eye and be-How Henry hath a new coat, and his wife

another; Then I wish it were mine, and all the web with it. At his losing I laugh, in my heart I like

But at his winning I weep, and bewail the occasion. I deem that men do ill, yet I do much worse, For I would that every wight in this world were my servant, And whoso hath more than I, maketh my heart angry. Thus I live loveless, like an ill-tempered

That all my breast swelleth with the bitterness of my gall; No sugar is sweet enough to assuage it at

Nor no remedy drive it from my heart;

If shrift then should sweep it out, a great wonder it were."

"Yes, surely," quoth Repentance, and advised him to good,

"Sorrow for their sins saveth full many." "I am sorry," quoth Envy, "I am seldom other,

And that maketh me so mad, for I may not avenge me."

Then came Covetousness, I Covetousness could not describe him, So hungry and so hollow Sir Harvey looked. He was beetle-browed with two bleared eves,

And like a leathern purse flapped his cheeks: In a torn tabard of twelve winters' age; III Unless a louse could leap, I can not believe That she could wander on that walk, it was so threadbare.

"I have been covetous," quoth this Caitiff, "I admit it here;

For some time I served Sim at 'The Oak' And was his pledged apprentice, his profit to watch.

First I learned to lie, in a lesson or two, And wickedly to weigh was my second les-

Pierced them with a pack-needle, and pleated them together,

Put them in a press, and fastened them

Till ten vards or twelve were drawn out to thirteen.

And my wife at Westminster, that woollen cloth made,

Spake to the spinners to spin it soft. The pound that she weighed by, weighed a quarter more Than my balance did, when I weighed true. I bought her barley, she brewed it to sell:

Penny-ale and white perry, she poured it together,

Now beginneth the Glutton to go to the shrift,

And wanders churchwards, his shrift to tell, Then Bet the brewster bade him good mor-

And then she asked him whither he would

"To holy church," quoth he, "to hear mass, Since I shall be shriven, and sin no more." "I have good ale, gossip," quoth she;

"Glutton, what say you?"

"Hast aught in thy purse," quoth he, "any hot spices?"

"Yea, Glutton, gossip," quoth she, "God

wot, full good;

I have pepper and peony-seeds, and a pound of garlick,

A farthing worth of fennel-seed, for these fasting days."

Then goeth Glutton in, and great oaths

Then were chapmen chosen, the articles to value: Whose had the hood should have something

There were oaths a-plenty, whose might hear them.

They could not, in conscience, accord together,

And to lift him up he laid him on his knees; And Glutton was a great churl, and grim in the lifting,

And coughed up a caudle in Clement's lap, That the hungriest hound in Hertfordshire Durst not lap that loathsomeness, so unlovely it smacketh;

So that, with all the woe in the world, his wife and his wench

Bore him home to his bed, and brought him therein.

And after all this surfeit, a sickness he had,

That he slept Saturday and Sunday, till sun went to rest.

Then he waked from his winking, and wiped his eyes;

The first word that he spake was, "Where is the cup?"

His wife warned him then, of wickedness and sin.

Then was he ashamed, that wretch, and scratched his ears,

And 'gan to cry grievously, and great dole to make

For his wicked life, that he had lived.

"For hunger or for thirst, I make my vow, Shall never fish on Friday digest in my maw, Till Abstinence, my aunt, have given me leave:

And yet I have hated her all my life-time."

Sloth for sorrow fell down swooning,

Till Vigilate, the watcher, fetched water to his eyes,

Let it flow on his face, and fast to him cried,

And said, "Beware of despair, that will thee betray.

'I am sorry for my sins,' say to thyself,

And beat thyself on the breast, and pray God for grace,

For there is no guilt so great that His mercy is not more."

Then Sloth sat up and sighed sore,

And made a vow before God, for his foul sloth,

"There shall be no Sunday this seven year (save sickness it cause)

That I shall not bring myself ere day to the dear church,

And hear matins and mass, as I a monk were.

No ale after meat shall withhold me thence, Till I have heard evensong, I promise by the rood.

And 1 yet I shall yield again — if I have so much —

All that I wickedly won, since I had wit.

And though I lack a livelihood I will not

Till each man shall have his own, ere I hence wend:

And with the residue and the remnant, by the rood of Chester,

I shall seek Saint Truth, ere I see Rome!"
Robert the robber, on Reddite 2 he looked,
And because there was not wherewith, he

And because there was not wherewith, he wept full sore.

But yet the sinful wretch said to himself: "Christ, that upon Calvary on the cross died'st.

Though Dismas 8 my brother besought grace of thee,

And thou hadst mercy on that man for memento 4 sake,

Thy will be done upon me, as I have well deserved

To have hell for ever if no hope there were. So rue on me, Robert, that no counsel have,

Nor ever ween to win by any craft that I know.

But, for thy much mercy, mitigation I beseech;

Damn me not on Doomsday because I did so ill."

But what befell this felon, I cannot well show,

But well I know he wept hard, water with his eyes,

And acknowledged his guilt to Christ again thereafter,

That the pikestaff of Penitence he should polish anew,

And leap with it o'er the land, all his lifetime,

Remember me, Luke, xxiii, 42.

For he hath lain by Latro, Lucifer's brother.

A thousand of men then throng together,

Weeping and wailing for their wicked deeds, 261

Crying up to Christ, and to His clean Mother, To give grace to seek Saint Truth, God grant they so might!

PASSUS VI

Now ride these folk, and walk on foot To seek that saint in strange lands.

But there were few men so wise that knew the way thither,

But they bustled forth like beasts, over valleys and hills,

For while they went after their own will, they went all amiss;

Till it was late and long, when they a man

met,

Apparelled as a palmer, in pilgrim's weeds. He bore a staff bound round with a broad list ²

In woodbine wise twisted around.

A bag and a bowl he bore by his side;

A hundred vials on his hat were set, Signs of Sinai and shells of Galicia;

Many a cross on his cloak, and the keys of Rome,

And the vernigle in front, that men should him know,

And see by his signs whom he had sought.³
These folk asked him fairly from whence he came.

"From Sinai," he said, "and from the Sepulchre;

From Bethlehem and Babylon, I have been in both;

In India and in Assisi, and in many other places.

Ye may see by my signs that sit on my

That I have walked full wide, in wet and in dry,

And sought good saints for my soul's health."

"Knowest thou a holy one men call Saint Truth?

Canst thou show us the way to where he dwelleth?"

2 Edge of cloth.

² The references here are to the badges showing the shrines a pilgrim had visited: the vial or ampulla for Thomas of Canterbury; the scallop shell for St. James of Compostella in Galicia; the cross for Falestine; the keys and the handkerchief of St. Veronica for Rome. ³⁴ Sinai? refers to the shrine of St. Catharine there.

"Nay, so God gladden me," said the man then,

"Saw I never palmer, with pikestaff nor with scrip,

Such a saint seek, save now in this place."
"Peter!" quoth a Plowman, and put forth his head,

"I know bim as naturally as a scholar doth his books;

Clean Conscience and Wit showed me to his place, 30

And pledged me then to serve him for ever. Both in sowing and in setting, while I work might,

I have been his fellow these fifteen winters; Have both sowed his seed and tended his beasts,

And also cared for his corn and carried it to house,

Ditched and delved, and done what he ordered,

Within and without watched his interests; Among these people is no laborer whom he loves more,

For though I say it myself, my service him pleases.

I have my hire of him well, and sometimes

more; 40
He is the promptest payer that poor men have; He withholds from no kind his hire that he hath it not at even. He is as lowly as a lamb, lovely of speech;

And if ye will wit where he dwelleth

I will show you the way home to his place."

"Yea, dear Piers," said these palmers, and proffered him hire.

"Nay, by the peril of my soul," quoth Piers, and began to swear,

"I would not finger a farthing, for St. Thomas's shrine!

Truth would love me the less for a great while after!

But, ye that wend to him, this is the way thither:

Ye must go through Meekness, both man and wife,

Till ye come to Conscience, that Christ may know the truth

That ye love him dearer than the life in your hearts,

And then your neighbors next in no wise injure

Otherwise than thou wouldest that men should do to thee.

So bend your way by a brook, Be-obedient-in-speech,

Forth till ye find a ford Honor-your-fathers; Wade in that water, wash yourselves well there,

And ye shall leap the lightlier all your lifetime.

Soon shalt thou then see Swear-not-butthou-have-need —

And-specially-not-in-vain-take-the-nameof-God-Almighty.

Then will ye come by a croft, but go ye not therein,

The croft called Covet-not-men's-cattlenor-their-wives-

Nor-none-of-their-servants-that-theymight-be-hurt;

See thou break no bough there, unless it be thine own.

Two stocks there stand, but stay thou not there.

They are called Slay-not, Nor-steal-not; strike forth by them both;

Leave them on thy left hand, look thou not after them,

And hold well thy holy-day ever till even.

Then shalt thou turn aside at a brook, Bearno-false-witness,

It is furnished within with florins, and with many oaths;

See thou pluck no plant there, for peril of thy soul.

Then shalt thou see Say-sooth, so-it-is-tobe-done-

And-look-that-thou-lie-not-for-any-man's - bidding.

Then shall thou come to a court, clear as the sun,

The most is of Mercy, surrounding the manor, And all the walls are of Wit to hold Will outside;

The battlements are of Christendom, mankind to save,

Buttressed 1 with the Belief wherethrough we must be saved.

All the houses are roofed, hall and chambers,

With no lead but Love-as-brethren-of-onemother.

The tower wherein is Truth is set above the sun,

He may do with the daystar whatever he pleaseth.

Grace is called the gate-guard, a good man in truth,

His man is called Amend-thou, for many men know him;

Tell him this as a token, for truth knows the sooth:

'I performed the penance that the priest enjoined me;

I am sorry for my sins, and so shall I ever be

When I think thereon, though I were a pope.'

Bid Amend-thou humble himself to his master once,

To lift up the wicket gate that the way

When Adam and Eve ate their bane;2

For he hath the key of the catch, though the king sleep.

And if Grace thee grant to go in in this wise,

Thou shalt see Truth himself sit in thy heart.

Then look that thou love Him well, and His law hold;

But be well aware of Wrath, that wicked wretch,

For he hath envy of Him that in thine heart sitteth,

And putteth forth Pride to praise thyself.

Boldness in thy good deeds blindeth thine eyes; And so art thou driven out and the door closed, Locked and fastened to keep thee there-

But get it again by Grace and by no gift else.

And there are seven sisters that serve Truth ever,

And are porters at posterns that to the place belong.

Largess the lady leadeth in full many. But whose is sib to these sisters, so help me God !

Is wonderfully welcome and fairly received.

And, but ye be sib to some of these seven, It is full hard, by my head, any of you all To get entrance at that gate unless greater be the grace."

"By Christ," quoth a cut-purse, "I have no kin there!"

"Nor I," quoth an ape-warden, "for aught

that I know!"

"Certain," quoth a waferseller, "knew I this for truth. I should go no foot further, for any friar's preaching."

"Yes," quoth Piers the Plowman, and preached for their good,

"Mercy is a maiden there and hath might over all;

She is sib to all sinful men and her son also; And through the help of these two (no other hope have thou,)

Thou mightest get grace there, so thou go betimes."

PASSUS VII

"This would be a wicked way, unless one had a guide

Who might follow us each step, that there we may come."

Quoth Perkin the plowman, "By Peter the apostle.

I have a half-acre to plow, by the high-

"That would be a long delay," quoth a lady in a veil;

"What shall we women work at the while?" "Some shall sew sacks, that the wheat spill

And ye wives that have wool, work on it fast,

Spin it speedily, spare not your fingers, Unless it be a holy day, or else a holy eve. Look out your linen, and labor thereon

"By Christ," quoth a knight then, "thou knowest us best!

Save one time truly, thus taught was I never!

But teach me," quoth the knight; "if I can plow,

I will help thee to labor while my life lasteth."

"By Saint Peter," quoth Piers, "since thou profferest so humbly

I shall work and sweat and sow for us both, And also labor for thy love all my lifetime. On condition that thou keep Holy Church and myself

From wasters and wicked men that would us destroy.

And go thou and hunt hardily hares and

Bears and bucks that break men's hedges. And fetch thee home falcons fowls to kill: For they come into my croft and crop my wheat."

Full courteously the knight conceived these words;

"By my power, Piers, I plight thee my troth,

To fulfill the bargain, while I may stand!" "But yet one point," quoth Piers, "I shall pray thee no more;

Look thou trouble no tenant, unless Truth will assent:

And if poor men proffer you presents or gifts,

Take them not; peradventure you may them not deserve;

For thou shalt give them back again at one year's end,

In a place of sore peril that purgatory is called.

And beat thou not thy bondman, the better thou shalt speed,

(And be thyself true of tongue, and lying tales hate:)

Unless it be wisdom or wit thy workmen to chastise.

Revel not with ribalds, hear not their tales.

And especially at meat such men eschew, For they are the devil's Tale-Tellers, I let thee understand."

"I assent, by Saint James," said the knight

"To work by thy word, while my life endureth."

"And I shall apparel me," quoth Perkin, "in pilgrim's wise,

And wend with you the right way, till ye Truth find."

He cast on his clothes, clouted and mended, His garters and his cuffs, to keep his nails from cold:

He hung a basket on his back, in stead of a scrip:

A bushel of bread-corn he bringeth therein: "For I will sow it myself, and then with you wend.

For whose helpeth me to plow, or do any sort of labor.

He shall have, by our Lord, the more hire in harvest.

And shall make merry with the corn, whoever begrudgeth.

And all kinds of craftsmen that can live with Truth,

I shall find them their food, if they faithfully live,

For now I am old and gray, and have of my own,

Therefore I will, ere I wend, write my testament.

In Dei nomine, amen. I make it myself. He shall have my soul that best hath deserved it. And defend it from the fiend, for so I believe,

Till I come to my account, as my creed me telleth.

To have release and remission on that rental I expect.

The church shall have my corpse, and keep my bones;

For of my corn and capital she craveth the tenth.

I paid her promptly, to save my soul from peril,

She is bound, I hope, to bear me in mind, And remember me in her memory among all Christians.

My wife shall have what I won with truth, and no more,

And divide with my friends and my dear children;

For though I die this day my debts are cleared:

I bare home what I borrowed ere I to bed

And with the residue and the remnant, by the rood of Chester!

I will worship therewith Truth in my life, And be his pilgrim at the plow, for poor men's sake.

My plough-foot 4 shall be my pikestaff and push at the roots,

And help my coulter to carve and close the furrows."

Now have Piers and the pilgrims to the plow gone, To plow this half-acre help him full many. Ditchers and delvers dug up the ridges; 5 100 Therewith was Perkin pleased, and praised them gladly.

4 A plouh-pote (pote = pusher). B plow-fote; C plouh-fote, plough-foot.

Other workmen there were that wrought full many,

Each man in his manner made himself work;

And sum, to please Perkin, picked up the weeds.

At high prime 1 Perkin let the plough stand,

While he himself oversaw who had best wrought;

He should be hired thereafter, when harvest-time came.

Then sat some, and sang at the ale,

And helped him to plow with "Hey, trolly-lolly!"

"Now, by the Prince of Paradise," quoth Piers then in wrath,

"Unless ye rise the sooner and haste ye to work,

Shall no grain that here groweth gladden you at need,

And though ye die for lack of it, the devil take him that cares!"

Then were the rogues afraid and feigned themselves blind.

Some laid their legs across as such scoundrels can,

And complained to Piers, with such piteous words:

"For we have no limbs to labor with, our Lord we thank for it;

But we pray for you, Piers, and for your plow too,

That God of his grace our grain multiply,
And reward you for your alms that ye give us here!

For we may neither work nor sweat, such sickness us aileth."

"If it be truth that ye say," quoth Piers, "soon I shall spy it!

Ye be wasters, I wot, and Truth knows the sooth!

I am his old servant, and ought him to warn What wasters in the world his workmen destroy.

Ye eat what they should eat that plough for us all;

But Truth shall teach you his team to drive, Both to sow and to set, and save his produce,

Seare crows from his corn, and keep his beasts,

Or ye shall eat barley bread, and of the brook drink.

1 Nine o'clock in the morning.

But if they be blind or broken-shanked, or bedridden lie,

They shall have as good as I, so help me God,

Till God of his grace cause them to arise.

Anchorites and hermits that keep to their cells

Shall have of my alms, all the while I live,

Enough each day at noon, but no more till tomorrow,

Lest the fiend and their flesh should defile their souls;

Once at noon is enough for him that no work doeth,

He abides in better state that tastes not too often."

Then wasters arose, and would have fought;

To Piers the Plowman one proffered his glove,

A Breton, a braggart, boasted himself also, And bade him go hang with his plow, baldheaded wretch!

"For we will have of thy flour, willy nilly,
And take of thy meat when that us pleaseth,
And make us merry therewith, spite of thy face!"

Then Piers Plowman complained to the knight,

To guard him as agreed from cursed wretches,

From wasters that lie in wait winners to rob.

Courteously the knight, as his nature was,

Warned wasters and taught them to do better;
"Or ye shall pay dearly by the law, by the order that I bear!"

"I was not wont to work," quoth the waster,
"I will not begin now!"

And recked little of the law, and less of the knight,

And counted Piers worth a pea, and his plow too,

And menaced him and his men, when they should next meet.

"Now by the peril of my soul," quoth Piers

the Plowman,
"I shall punish you all for your proud words!"

And whooped after Hunger then, that heard him at once:

"Wreak me on these wasters," quoth Piers,
that this world rob!"

Hunger in haste seized waster by the maw, And wrung him so by the belly that both his eyes watered,

And buffeted the Breton on both his cheeks;

He looked like a lantern all his life after. He so beat the boys he nigh burst their ribs,

Had not Piers with a pease-loaf prayed him to cease;

And with a bag ¹ of beans beat them both, And hit Hunger therewith between his lips, And he bled inwards a bowlful of gruel; Had not the physician first forbidden him water

To moisten the barley-bread and the ground

beans

They had been dead by this day, and buried all warm.

Then rogues for fear flew to barns,
And laid on with flails, from morn till even,
So that Hunger was not hardy enough even to look up

For a potful of pease that Piers had made. A band of hermits seized hold of spades, And delved in dirt and dung to drive Hunger out.

Blind and bedridden were cured a thou-

Hunger killed them with a hot cake. Lame men's limbs were rendered lithe that

And they became herds, to keep Piers's beasts.

And prayed, for charity, with Piers to dwell,

All for eraving of his corn, to cast out Hunger.

Piers was proud thereof, and put them in office,

And gave them meat and money, as they might deserve.

Then had Piers pity, and prayed Hunger to wend

Home to his own hearth,² and hold himself there forever.

"And yet I pray thee," quoth Piers, "ere thou pass hence, With vagabonds and beggars what is best to do?

I wot well, when thou art gone, they will work full ill;

A bat.

A hurde, earth; B erde; C erthe.

It is misfortune maketh them to be now so meek,

And for lack of food thus fast do they work; And they are my blood brethren, for God bought us all.

Truth taught me once to love them each one,

And help them in all things, according as they need.

Yet would I know if thou knewest what were the best,

And how I might master them, and make them work."

"Hear now," quoth Hunger, "and hold it for wisdom.

Bold beggars and rascals that may earn their meal by work,

With hound-bread and horse-bread hold up their hearts,

And cheat them with bones 3 against swelling of their bellies;

And if the fellows grumble bid them go work,

And they shall sup the sweeter when they have it deserved.

And if thou find any fellow that fortune hath harmed

With fire or with false folk, try such to know;

Comfort them with thy means, for Christ of heaven's love.

Love them and lend to them, so the law of nature wills.

And all manner of men, that thou mayest

That are needy, or naked, and nought have to spend.

With meat or with money make them fare the better,

With word or with work while thou art here.

Make friends with such, for so Saint Matthew teacheth.

Facite vobis amicos de mammona iniquitatis." 4
"I would not grieve God," quoth Piers,
"for all the gold on ground:

"for all the gold on ground;
Might I do as thou sayest without sin?"
said Piers then.

"Yea, I promise thee," quoth Hunger, "or else the Bible lieth;

Go to Genesis the giant, the engenderer of us alle;

A bamme hem with bones; B abate him with benes;
 C a-bane hem with benes.
 Make for yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness, Luke, xvi, 9.

'In sweat and swink thou shalt earn thy meat,¹ 220 And labor for thy livelihood,' for so our lord ordered.

And Sapience said the same, I saw it in the Bible.

· Piger propter frigus,2 no field he till,

He shall crave and beg, and no man abate his hunger.'

Matthew of the man's face 3 uttereth these words,

'The unprofitable servant had a talent, and because he would not use it

He had ill-will of his master evermore after';

Auferte ab illo unam, et date illi, etc.,4
He took from him his talent, for he would not work, And gave it in haste to him that had ten

And afterwards he thus said, his servants it heard.

He that hath shall have, to help where need is,

And he that hath not, nought shall have, nor no man help him;

And he that hopeth to have, from him it shall be taken away.'

For Common Sense would that each man should work,

By teaching or by tillage, or travailing with hands,

Active life or contemplative; Christ would so also.

For so saith the Psalter, in the psalm beginning, 'Blessed is everyone,'

Labores manum tuarum quia manducabis,

To him that gets his food here, with travailing in truth,

God gives his blessing, for his livelihood that laboreth."

"Yet I pray thee," quoth Piers, "for charity, if thou knowest

⁵ For thou shalt eat the labor of thine hands, Psalms, cxxviii, 2.

Work not for a week, so acheth their belly."
"I wot well," quoth Hunger, "what siekness aileth them;

They have eaten in excess, that maketh them groan oft.

But I command thee," quoth Hunger, " if health thou desirest,

That on no day thou drink till thou hast had some dinner;

Eat not, I command thee, till Hunger take thee

And send thee some of his sauce, the better to savor;

Keep some till supper-time, and sit not too long,

Arise up ere appetite have eaten his fill. Let not Sir Surfeit sit at thy board;

Love him not, for he is a lecher, and lewd of tongue,

And after many meats his maw is a longing.

And if thou diet thyself thus, I dare bet
both mine ears

That Physic shall his furred hood for his food sell.

And eke his Calabrian 6 cloak with buttons of gold,

And be fain, by my faith, his physic to leave,

And learn to labor on the land, lest livelihood fail.

There are more liars than leeches, our Lord

them amend! 260
They do men to death by their drink, ere destiny would."

"By Saint Paul," quoth Piers, "these be profitable words!

This is a lovely lesson; our Lord reward

thee for it!

Away now when thou wilt; be it well with thee ever!"

"I promise thee," quoth Hunger, "hence will I not wend Ere I have dined this day, and drunk too."

"I have no penny," quoth Piers, "pullets to buy,

Neither geese nor pigs, but two green 7 cheeses.

And a little curds and cream, and unleavened cake,

And a loaf of beans and bran, baked for my children.

And I say, by my soul, I have no salt bacon, Nor any cook-boys, by Christ, collops to make.

⁶ Trimmed with grey Calabrian fur. ⁷ Fresh made.

But I have onions and parsley, and many cabbages,

And eke a cow and a calf, and a cart-mare To draw a-field my dung, while the drought lasteth.

By these means must I live till Lammas time:

By that time I hope to have harvest in my croft;

Then may I prepare thee dinner as thou dearly likest it."

All the poor people pease-cods fetched, Beans baked into bread they brought in their laps, 280 Little onions their chief meat, and ripe cherries many,

And proffered Piers this present, to please his hunger with.

Hunger ate this in haste, and asked after more.

Then these folk for fear fetched him many Onions and pease, for they him would please; After these were eaten, he must take his leave

Till it was near to harvest, when new corn came to market.

Then were these folk fain, and fed Hunger eagerly

With good ale and gluttony, and caused him to sleep.

And then would not the waster work, but wandered about.

Nor any beggar eat bread that had beans in it.

But cocket and clearmatin, and of clean wheat;

Nor any halfpenny ale in any wise drink, But of the best and the brownest that brewers sell.

Laborers that have no land to live by, but only their hands,

Deign not to dine today on yesterday's vegetables.

No penny-ale may please them, nor a piece of bacon,

Unless it were fresh flesh, or else fried fish, Hot and very hot, lest they chill their stomachs.

And curse the king hard, and all his council after

For enforcing such laws as chastise laborers.

But while Hunger was master here there would none chide

Nor strive against the statutes, so stern they looked.

I warn you all, workmen, win while ye may;

Hunger hitherward again hieth him in haste. He will awake with high-waters 2 the wasters all:

Ere five years are fulfilled, such famine shall arise,

Through floods and foul weather fruits shall fail;

And so saith Saturn, and sendeth us warning.

Because he copied thus their clause, they gave him great thanks.

Men of law had least, for they are loath
To plead for mean men, unless they get money;

So saith the Psalter and Sapience also.

Super innocentes munera non accipiunt. A

From princes and prelates their pension should come,

And from the poor people no pennyworth should they take.

Psalms, xv, 9.

But he that spendeth his speech, and speaketh for the poor man, 50

Who is innocent and needy, and no man hath harmed,

That comforteth him in misfortune, coveteth not his goods,

But, for our Lord's love, law for him showeth,

No devil, at his death-day, shall harm him a mite,

That he be not secure and safe; and so saith the Psalter.

Qui facit hace, non movebitur in eternum.⁴
But to buy water, or wind, or wit (the third thing),

Holy Writ would never grant, God knows the truth!

These three as thralls have grown among us all,

To wax or to wane, whichever God liketh. His pardon in purgatory is petty, I trow, 60 Who any pay from poor men for pleading receiveth.

Ye lawmakers and lawyers, ye know whether I lie:

Since ye see that it is so, serve at your best.
Living laborers, that live by their hands,
That truly give and truly pay their tithes
And live in love and in law for their lowly

Had the same absolution that sent was to Piers.

Askers and beggars are not in the bull, Unless the suggestion be sound that causes them to beg.

For he that beggeth or asketh, unless he have need,

He is false as the fiend, and defraudeth the needy,

And also beguileth the giver, all against his will.

They live not in love, nor any law keep;
They wed no women that they have to do with:

But as wild beasts wickedly work together, And bring forth bairns that bastards are held.

Either their backs or their bones they break in their youth,

And go begging with their children evermore after.

Have as full pardon as the Plowman himself;

For love of their humble hearts our Lord hath them granted

Their penance and their purgatory to have here upon earth.

"Piers," quoth a priest then, "thy pardon must I read,

For I will construe every clause, and know it in English."

And Piers, at his prayer, the pardon unfoldeth,

And I, behind them both, beheld all the bull.

In two lines it lay, and not a letter more, And was written right thus, in witness of

Et qui bona egerunt, ibunt in viam eternam; Qui vero mala, in ignem eternum.1 "Peter!" quoth the priest then, "I can no pardon find, But 'Do well and have well, and God shall have thy soul; And do evil and have evil, hope thou none

But that after thy death-day to hell shalt thou wend!"," And Piers, for pure vexation, pulled it asunder.

And then he said to them these seemly savings:

"Si ambulavero in medio umbrae mortis, non timebo mala, quoniam tu mecum es.2

I shall cease from my sowing," said Piers, "and work not so hard,

Nor about my livelihood so busy be more! In prayer and in penance my plowing shall be hereafter,

2 Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me, Psalms, xxiii, 4.

And lower where I laughed, ere my life fail. The prophet his bread ate in penance and weeping;

As the Psalter says to us, so did many others:

Who loveth God loyally, his livelihood is plentiful:

Fuerunt mihi lacrimae meae panes, die ac nocte.8

And, unless Luke lies, he teacheth us another.

That too busy we should not be, here upon earth.

While we dwell in this world, to make glad the belly.

Ne soliciti sitis,4 he saith in his gospel,

And showeth it by example our souls to guide.

The fowls in the firmament, who feedeth them in winter?

When the frost freezeth, food they require: They have no granary to go to, yet God gives them all."

"What?" quoth the priest to Perkin, "by Peter! as methinketh, Thou art lettered a little; who taught thee to read?"

"Abstinence the abbess mine A B C me taught,

And Conscience came after and showed me better."

"Were thou a priest," quoth he, "thou mightest preach when thou couldst;

'Quoniam literaturam non cognovi,' 5 might be thy theme!"

"Lewd losel!" quoth he, "little lookest thou on the Bible,

Solomon's sayings seldom thou beholdest; 'Sling away these scorners,' he saith, 'with their vile scolding,

For with them readily I care not to rest;' Ejice derisores et jurgia cum eis, ne crescant."6

The priest and Perkin then disputed together,

And through their words I awoke, and waited about.

But Cato constructh it nay, and the canonlawyers too,

And say themselves, "Somnia ne cures." 1 But as for the Bible, bear witness how Daniel divined the dreams of a king, Whom Nebuchadnezzar2 these clerks name. Daniel said, "Sir King, thy dream means That strange knights shall come thy kingdom to claim;

Among lower lords thy land shall be divided."

As Daniel divined, it fell out indeed after. The king lost his lordship, and lesser men

On Piers the plowman, and what sort of pardon he had,

And how the priest impugned it, all by pure reason.

And divined that Do-well surpassed an indulgence,

Bienals and trienals and bishops' letters. Do-well on doomsday is worthily praised, He surpasseth all the pardons of St. Peter's church.

Now hath the Pope power pardon to grant, The people without penance to pass into on earth. Trusting by your treasure trienals to have, Be ye none the bolder to break the ten commandments.

And especially ve mayors, and ve master judges,

That have the wealth of this world, and for wise men are held,

To purchase pardon and the Pope's bulls, At the dreadful day of doom, when the dead shall arise

And come all before Christ, and accounts vield

How thou leddest thy life, and his law kept-What thou didst day by day, the doom will rehearse:

A pouchful of pardon there, with provincial letters,

Though thou be found in fraternity among the four orders,

And have indulgence doubled, unless Dowell thee help,

I would not give for thy pardon one pie-heel! Therefore I counsel all Christians to cry Christ mercy,

And Mary his mother to be their intercessor. That God give us grace, ere we go hence, Such works to work, while we are here,

That after our death-day, Do-well rehearse. At the day of doom, that we did as he us told.

THE TALE OF FLORENT'

(Confessio Amantis, bk. 1, l. 1407)

THER was whilom be daies olde A worthi knyht, and as men tolde He was nevoeu to themperour And of his court a courteour: Wifles he was, Florent he hihte; He was a man that mochel myhte:2 Of armes he was desirous, Chivalerous and amorous; And for the fame of worldes speche, Strange aventures forto seche, 10 He rod the Marches al aboute. And fell a time, as he was oute, Fortune, which may every thred Tobreke and knette of mannes sped,3 Schop,4 as this knyht rod in a pas,5 That he be strengthe take was, And to a castell thei him ladde. Wher that he fewe frendes hadde: For so it fell that ilke stounde That he hath with a dedly wounde 20 Feihtende 6 his oghne hondes slain Branchus, which to the Capitain Was sone and heir, wherof ben wrothe The fader and the moder bothe. That knyht Branchus was of his hond The worthieste of al his lond, And fain thei wolden do vengance Upon Florent; bot remembrance That thei toke of his worthinesse Of knyhthod and of gentilesse, 30 And how he stod of cousinage To themperour, made hem assuage, And dorsten noght slen him for fere: In gret desputeisoun thei were Among hemself, what was the beste. Ther was a lady, the slyheste Of alle that men knewe tho, So old sche myhte unethes go,7

And was grantdame unto the dede:8

THE TALE OF CONSTANTINE AND SILVESTER

(Confessio Amantis, bk. 11, 1. 3187)

Among the bokes of Latin⁸ I finde write of Constantin The worthi Emperour of Rome, Suche infortunes to him come, Whan he was in his lusti age. The lepre 9 cawhte in his visage And so forth overal aboute, That he ne mihte ryden oute: So lefte he bothe schield and spere, As he that mihte him noght bestere, And hield him in his chambre clos. Thurgh al the world the fame aros, The grete clerkes ben asent And come at his comandement To trete upon this lordes hele.10 So longe thei togedre dele, That thei upon this medicine Apointen hem, and determine That in the maner as it stod Thei wolde him bathe in childes blod Withinne sevene wynter age: For, as thei sein, that scholde assuage The lepre and al the violence, Which that thei knewe of accidence And noght be weie of kinde 11 is falle. And therto thei acorden alle As for final conclusioun, And tolden here opinioun To themperour: and he anon His conseil tok, and therupon 30 With lettres and with seales oute Thei sende in every lond aboute The yonge children forto seche, Whos blod, thei seiden, schal be leche For themperoures maladie. Ther was vnowh to wepe and crie Among the modres, whan thei herde Hou wofully this cause ferde, Bot natheles thei moten bowe; And thus wommen ther come ynowhe 7 key.

With children soukende on the tete. Tho was ther manye teres lete; Bot were hem lieve or were hem lothe, The wommen and the children bothe Into the paleis forth he broght With many a sory hertes thoght Of hem whiche of here bodi bore The children hadde, and so forlore Withinne a while scholden se. The modres wepe in here degre, And manye of hem aswoune falle, The yonge babes criden alle: This novse aros, the lord it herde, And loked out, and how it ferde He sih, and as who seith 1 abreide 2 Out of his slep, and thus he seide:

'O thou divine pourveance, Which every man in the balance Of kinde hast formed to be liche, The povere is bore as is the riche 60 And deieth in the same wise: Upon the fol, upon the wise Siknesse and hele entrecomune; 8 Mai non eschuie that fortune Which kinde hath in hire lawe set: Hire strengthe and beaute ben beset To every man aliche fre, That sche preferreth no degre As in the disposicioun Of bodili complexioun: And ek of soule resonable The povere child is bore als able To vertu as the kinges sone: For every man his oghne wone 4 After the lust of his assay The vice or vertu chese may. Thus stonden alle men franchised, Bot in astat thei ben divised; To some worschipe and richesse. To some poverte and distresse, On lordeth and an other serveth; Bot yit as every man deserveth The world yifth night his yiftes hiere. Bot certes he hath gret matiere To ben of good condicioun, Which hath in his subjectioun The men that ben of his semblance.' And ek he tok a remembrance Howe he that made lawe of kinde Wolde every man to lawe binde, And bad a man, such as he wolde Toward himself, riht such he scholde Toward an other don also. And thus this worthi lord as tho

Sette in balance his oghne astat And with himself stod in debat, And thoghte hou that it was night good To se so mochel mannes blod Be spilt for cause of him alone. He sih also the grete mone, TOO Of that the modres were unglade, And of the wo the children made, Wherof that al his herte tendreth. And such pite withinne engendreth, That him was levere forto chese His oghne bodi forto lese, Than se so gret a moerdre wroght Upon the blod which gulteth noght.5 Thus for the pite which he tok Alle othre leches he forsok. And put him out of aventure Al only into Goddes cure; And seith, 'Who that woll maister be, He mot be servant to pite.' So ferforth he was overcome With charite, that he hath nome 6 His conseil and hise officers. And bad unto hise tresorers That thei his tresour al aboute Departe among that povere route 120 Of wommen and of children bothe. Wherof thei mihte hem fede and clothe And saufli tornen hom ayein Withoute lost of eny grein. Thurgh charite thus he despendeth His good, wherof that he amendeth The povere poeple, and contrevaileth The harm, that he hem so travaileth: And thus the woful nyhtes sorwe To joie is torned on the morwe; 130 Al was thonkinge, al was blessinge, Which erst was wepinge and cursinge; Thes wommen gon hom glade ynowh, Echon for joie on other lowh,7 And preiden for this lordes hele, Which hath relessed the querele, And hath his oghne will forsake In charite for Goddes sake. Bot now hierafter thou schalt hiere What God hath wroght in this matiere, 140 As he which doth al equite. To him that wroghte charite He was ayeinward 8 charitous,

And to pite he was pitous:

That charite goth unaquit.

For it was nevere knowe yit

The nyht, whan he was leid to slepe,

The hihe God, which wolde him kepe,

5 is not guilty, 6 taken. 7 laughed. 8 in return.

Seint Peter and seint Poul him sende, Be whom he wolde his lepre amende. 150 Thei tuo to him slepende appiere Fro God, and seide in this manere: O Constantin, for thou hast served Pite, thou hast pite deserved: Forthi thou schalt such pite have That God thurgh pite woll thee save. So schalt thou double hele finde. Ferst for thi bodiliche kinde. And for thi wofull soule also. Thou schalt ben hol of bothe tuo. 160 And for thou schalt thee noght despeire, Thi lepre schal nomore empeire 1 Til thou wolt sende therupon Unto the Mont of Celion. Wher that Silvestre and his clergie Togedre duelle in compaignie For drede of thee, which many day Hast ben a fo to Cristes lav.2 And hast destruid to mochel schame The prechours of his holy name. 170 Bot now thou hast somdiel appesed Thi God, and with good dede plesed, That thou thi pite hast bewared 3 Upon the blod which thou hast spared. Forthi to thi salvacion Thou schalt have enformacioun, Such as Silvestre schal the teche: The nedeth of non other leche.' This Emperour, which al this herde, 'Grant merci, lordes,' he ansuerde, 180 'I wol do so as ye me seie. Bot of o thing I wolde preie: What schal I telle unto Silvestre Or of youre name or of youre estre?' And thei him tolden what thei hihte, And forth withal out of his sibte Thei passen up into the hevene. And he awok out of his swevene,5 And clepeth, and men come anon: He tolde his drem, and therupon 190 In such a wise as he hem telleth The mont wher that Silvestre duelleth Thei have in alle haste soght, And founde he was and with hem broght To themperour, which to him tolde His swevene and elles that he wolde. And whan Silvestre hath herd the king,

And how the hihe God therfore His Sone sende from above, Which bore was for mannes love. And after of his oghne chois He tok his deth upon the crois; And how in grave he was beloke.6 And how that he hath helle broke. And tok hem out that were him lieve;7 And forto make ous full believe That he was verrai Goddes Sone. A vein the kinde of mannes wone 8 Fro dethe he ros the thridde day. And whanne he wolde, as he wel may, He styh 9 up to his fader evene With fleissh and blod into the hevene: And riht so in the same forme In fleissh and blod he schal reforme. Whan time comth, the qwike and dede At thilke woful dai of drede, 220 Where every man schal take his dom, Als wel the maister as the grom. The militi kinges retenue That dai may stonde of no value With worldes strengthe to defende: For every man mot thanne entende To stonde upon his oghne dedes And leve all othre mennes nedes. That dai mai no consail availe, The pledour and the plee schal faile, The sentence of that ilke day Mai non appell sette in delay: Ther mai no gold the jugge plie,10 That he ne schal the sothe trie And setten every man upriht. Als wel the plowman as the kniht: The lewed man, the grete clerk Schal stonde upon his oghne werk. And such as he is founde tho, Such schal he be for evermo. 240 Ther mai no peine be relessed, Ther mai no joie ben encressed, Bot endeles, as thei have do. He schal receive on of the tuo. And thus Silvestre with his sawe The ground of al the newe lawe With gret devocion he precheth, Fro point to point and pleinly techeth Unto this hethen Emperour; And seith, the hihe creatour 250 Hath underfonge 11 his charite, Of that he wroghte such pite, Whan he the children hadde on honde. (Confessio Amantis, bk. IV, l. 1245)

Or Armenye, I rede thus, Ther was a king, which Herupus Was hote,7 and he a lusti maide To dowhter hadde, and as man saide Hire name was Rosiphelee; Which tho was of gret renomee, For sche was bothe wvs and fair And scholde ben hire fader hair.8 Bot sche hadde o defalte of slowthe Towardes love, and that was rowthe;9 For so wel cowde noman seie. Which milite sette hire in the weie Of loves occupacioun Thurgh non ymaginacion; That scole wolde sche noght knowe. And thus sche was on of the slowe As of such hertes besinesse. Til whanne Venus the goddesse, Which loves court hath forto reule, Hath broght hire into betre reule, 20 Forth with Cupide and with his miht: For thei merveille how such a wiht, Which the was in hir lusti age. Desireth nother mariage Ne yit the love of paramours, Which evere hath be the comun cours Amonges hem that lusti were. So was it schewed after there: For he that hihe hertes loweth With fyri dartes whiche he throweth, Cupide, which of love is godd, In chastisinge hath mad a rodd To dryve awei hir wantonnesse; 10 So that withinne a while, I gesse, Sche hadde on such a chance sporned,11 That al hire mod was overtorned, Which ferst sche hadde of slow manere: For thus it fell, as thou schalt hiere. Whan come was the monthe of Maii, Sche wolde walke upon a dai, And that was er the sonne ariste; 12 Of wommen bot a fewe it wiste,

THE TALE OF CEYX AND ALCEONE 8

(Confessio Amantis, bk. IV, 1. 2917)

MI sone, and for thou tellest so, A man mai finde of time ago That many a swevene 9 hath be certein, Al be it so that som men sein That swevenes ben of no credence. Bot forto schewe in evidence That thei fulofte sothe thinges Betokene, I thenke in my wrytinges To telle a tale therupon. Which fell be olde daies gon.

This finde I write in poesie: Ceix the king of Trocinie Hadde Alceone to his wif, Which as hire oghne hertes lif Him loveth; and he hadde also A brother, which was cleped tho Dedalion, and he per cas Fro kinde of man forschape was Into a goshank of likenesse; Wherof the king gret hevynesse Hath take, and thoghte in his corage To gon upon a pelrinage Into a strange regioun, Wher he hath his devocioun To don his sacrifice and preie. If that he mihte in eny weie Toward the goddes finde grace His brother hele 10 to pourchace, So that he milte be reformed Of that he hadde be transformed. To this pourpos and to this ende This king was redy forto wende, As he which wolde go be schipe; And forto don him felaschipe His wif unto the see him broghte, With al hire herte and him besoghte. That he the time hire wolde sein, Whan that he thoughte come ayein: 'Withinne,' he seith, 'tuo monthe day.' And thus in al the haste he may He tok his leve, and forth he seileth Wepende, and sche hirself beweileth, 8 Gower's source is Ovid's Metamorphoses, XI, 266 f. And torneth hom, ther sche cam fro. But whan the monthes were ago, The whiche he sette of his comvnge. And that sche herde no tydinge, Ther was no care forto seche: Wherof the goddes to beseche Tho sche began in many wise, And to Juno hire sacrifise Above alle othre most sche dede. And for hir lord sche hath so bede 1 To wite and knowe hou that he ferde, That Juno the goddesse hire herde Anon and upon this matiere Sche bad Yris hir messagere To Slepes hous that sche schal wende. And bidde him that he make an ende Be swevene and schewen al the cas Unto this ladi, hou it was.

This Yris, fro the hihe stage Which undertake hath the message, Hire reyny cope 2 dede upon, The which was wonderli begon With colours of diverse hewe, An hundred mo than men it knewe: The hevene lich unto a bowe Sche bende, and so she cam down lowe, The god of slep wher that sche fond. And that was in a strange lond, 70 Which marcheth 8 upon Chymerie: For ther, as seith the poesie, The god of slep hath mad his hous, Which of entaille 4 is merveilous. Under an hell 5 ther is a cave. To speke of an unkinde 11 man, I finde hou whilom Adrian. Of Rome which a gret lord was, Upon a day as he per cas 12 To wode in his huntinge wente, It hapneth at a soudein wente,18 After his chace as he poursuieth, Thurgh happ, the which noman eschuieth. He fell unwar into a pet,14 Wher that it mihte noght be let. The pet was dep and he fell lowe. That of his men non myhte knowe Wher he becam, for non was nyh, Which of his fall the meschief syh. And thus al one ther he lay Clepende 15 and criende al the day For socour and deliverance, Til ayein eve it fell per chance, A while er it began to nyhte, A povere man, which Bardus hihte, Cam forth walkende with his asse, And hadde gadred him a tasse 16 Of grene stickes and of dreie To selle, who that wolde hem beie, As he which hadde no liflode, 17 Bot whanne he myhte such a lode To toune with his asse carie. And as it fell him forto tarie That ilke time nyh the pet, And hath the trusse faste knet. He herde a vois, which cride dimme, And he his ere to the brimme Hath leid, and herde it was a man, Which seide, 'Ha, help hier Adrian, And I wol viven half mi good.'

The povere man this understod, As he that wolde gladly winne, And to this lord which was withinne He spak and seide, 'If I thee save, What sikernesse ¹⁸ schal I have

Of covenant, that afterward Thou wolt me vive such reward As thou behiltest nou tofore?'

The other bath his othes swore By hevene and be the goddes alle. If that it myghte so befalle That he out of the pet him broghte, Of all the goodes whiche he oghte 1 He schal have evene halvendel.

This Bardus seide he wolde wel: And with this word his asse anon He let untrusse, and therupon Doun goth the corde into the pet, To which he hath at ende knet A staf, wherby, he seide, he wolde That Adrian him scholde holde. Bot it was the per chance falle, Into that pet was also falle An ape, which at thilke throwe, Whan that the corde cam down lowe. Al sodeinli therto he skipte And it in bothe hise armes clipte.2 And Bardus with his asse anon Him hath updrawe, and he is gon. But whan he sih it was an ape, He wende al hadde ben a jape 3 Of faierie, and sore him dradde: 4 And Adrian eftsone gradde 5 For help, and cride and preide faste, And he eftsone his corde caste; Bot whan it cam unto the grounde, A gret serpent it hath bewounde, The which Bardus anon up drouh. And thanne him thoghte wel ynouh It was fantosme, bot yit he herde The vois, and he therto ansuerde, 'What wiht art thou in Goddes name?'

'I am,' quod Adrian, 'the same, Whos good thou schalt have evene half.' Quod Bardus, 'Thanne a Goddes half The thridde time assaie I schal': And caste his corde forth withal Into the pet, and whan it cam To him, this lord of Rome it nam, And therupon him hath adresced, And with his hand fulofte blessed. And thanne he bad to Bardus hale. And he, which understod his tale, Betwen him and his asse al softe Hath drawe and set him up alofte 90 Withouten harm al esely.

He seith noght ones 'Grant merci,' 6

Bot strauhte 7 him forth to the cite, And let this povere Bardus be. And natheles this simple man His covenant, so as he can, Hath axed; and that other seide, If so be that he him umbreide 8 Of oght that hath be speke or do, It schal ben venged on him so, 700 That him were betre to be ded. And he can tho non other red.9 But on his asse avein he caste His trusse, and heith homward faste: And whan that he cam hom to bedde. He tolde his wif hou that he spedde. Bot finaly to speke oght more Unto this lord he dradde him sore, So that a word ne dorste he sein: And thus upon the morwe ayein, 110 In the manere as I recorde. Forth with his asse and with his corde To gadre wode, as he dede er, He goth; and whan that he cam ner Unto the place where he wolde, He hath his ape anon beholde, Which hadde gadred al aboute Of stickes hiere and there a route, 10 And leide hem redy to his hond, Wherof he made his trosse and bond. Fro dai to dai and in this wise This ape profreth his servise, So that he hadde of wode ynouh. Upon a time and as he drouh Toward the wode, he sih besyde The grete gastli serpent glyde. Til that sche cam in his presence, And in hir kinde a reverence Sche hath him do, and forth withal A ston mor briht than a cristall 130 Out of hir mouth tofore his weie Sche let doun falle, and wente aweie. For that he schal noght ben adrad. Tho was this povere Bardus glad, Thonkende God, and to the ston He goth and takth it up anon, And hath gret wonder in his wit Hou that the beste him hath aguit, Wher that the mannes sone hath failed, For whom he hadde most travailed. Bot al he putte in Goddes hond, And torneth hom, and what he fond Unto his wif he hath it schewed; And thei, that wern bothe lewed,11 Acorden that he scholde it selle.

And he no lengere wolde duelle, Bot forth anon upon the tale The ston he profreth to the sale; And riht as he himself it sette, The jueler auon forth fette The gold and made his paiement, Therof was no delaiement.

Thus whan this ston was boght and sold, Homward with joie manyfold This Bardus goth; and whan he cam Home to his hous and that he nam His gold out of his purs, withinn He fond his ston also therinne, Wherof for joie his herte pleide, Unto his wif and thus he seide, 'Lo, hier my gold, lo, hier mi ston!' His wif hath wonder therupon, And axeth him hou that mai be. 'Nou be mi trouthe I not,' 1 quod he, 'Bot I dar swere upon a bok, That to my marchant I it tok,2 And he it hadde whan I wente: So knowe I noght to what entente It is nou hier, bot it be grace. Forthi tomorwe in other place 170 I wole it fonde 3 forto selle, And if it wol noght with him duelle. Bot crepe into mi purs ayein, Than dar I saufly 4 swere and sein. It is the vertu of the ston.'

The morwe cam, and he is gon To seche aboute in other stede His ston to selle, and he so dede, And lefte it with his chapman there. Bot whan that he cam elleswhere, In presence of his wif at hom, Out of his purs and that he nom 5 His gold, he foud his ston withal: And thus it fell him overal,6 Where he it solde in sondri place,

That it nvs ate laste kidd:7 This fame goth aboute Rome So ferforth, that the wordes come To themperour Justinian: And he let sende for the man, And axede him hou that it was. And Bardus tolde him al the cas, Hou that the worm and ek the beste, Althogh thei maden no beheste,8 His travail hadden wel aquit; Bot he which hadde a mannes wit, And made his covenant be mouthe And swor therto al that he couthe To parte and viven half his good, Hath nou forvete hou that it stod. To telle yow hir wordes and hir chere; Ne thogh I speke hir wordes properly. For this ye knowen al-so wel as I,

Who-so shal telle a tale after a man, He moot reherce, as ny as ever he can, Everich a word, if it be in his charge, Al speke he never so rudeliche and large;9 Or elles he moot telle his tale untrewe. Or feyne thing, or finde wordes newe. He may nat spare, al-thogh he were his brother:

He moot as wel seve o word as another. Crist spak him-self ful brode in holy writ, And wel ye woot, no vileinye is it. Eek Plato seith. 10 who-so that can him rede.

The wordes mote be cosin to the dede. Also I prev yow to forveve it me, Al have I nat set folk in hir degree 11 Here in this tale, as that they sholde stonde; My wit is short, ye may wel understonde.

Greet chere made our hoste us everichon.

THE KNIGHT'S TALE

Jamque domos patrias, Scithice post aspera gentis Prelia, laurigero, etc. [Statius, Theb. XII, 519.]1

Whylom, as olde stories tellen us,
Ther was a duk that highte Theseus;
Of Athenes he was lord and governour,
And in his tyme swich a conquerour
That gretter was ther noon under the sonne.
Ful many a riche contree hadde he wonne;
What with his wisdom and his chivalrye,
He conquered al the regne ² of Femenye,
That whylom was y-cleped Scithia;
And weddede the quene Ipolita,

And broghte hir hoom with him in his con-

With muchel glorie and greet solempnitee, And eek hir yonge suster Emelye. And thus with victorie and with melodye Lete I this noble duk to Athenes ryde, And al his hoost in armes him bisyde.

And certes, if it nere to long to here, I wolde han told yow fully the manere How wonnen was the regne of Femenye By Theseus, and by his chivalrye; And of the grete bataille for the nones 8 Bitwixen Athenës and Amazones; And how asseged was Ipolita, The faire, hardy quene of Scithia; And of the feste that was at his weddinge, And of the tempest at his hoom-cominge; But al that thing I moot 4 as now forbere. I have, God woot, a large field to ere,5 And wayke been the oxen in my plough. The remenant of the tale is long y-nough. 30 I wol nat letten 6 eek noon of this route; Lat every felawe telle his tale aboute, And lat see now who shal the soper winne; And ther I lefte, I wol ageyn biginne.

This duk, of whom I make mencioun, When he was come almost unto the toun, In al his wele ⁷ and in his moste pryde, He was war, as he caste his eye asyde, Wher that ther kneled in the hye weye A companye of ladies, tweye and tweye, 40 Ech after other, clad in clothes blake; But swich a cry and swich a wo they make.

If that I hadde leyser for to seye;
But to th'effect. It happed on a day,
(To telle it yow as shortly as I may)
A worthy duk that highte Perotheus,
That felawe was un-to duk Theseus
Sin thilke day that they were children

Was come to Athenes, his felawe to visyte,
And for to pleye, as he was wont to do,
For in this world he loved no man so:
And he loved him as tendrely ageyn.

His felawe wente and soghte him down in helle;

But of that story list me nat to wryte.

Duk Perotheus loved wel Arcite,

And hadde him knowe at Thebes yeer by

And fynally, at requeste and preyere
Of Perotheus, with-onte any raunsoun,
Duk Theseus him leet out of prisoun,
Freely to goon, wher that him liste over-al,
In swich a gyse, as I you tellen shal.

And with his stremes dryeth in the greves The silver dropes, hanging on the leves. And Arcite, that is in the court royal With Theseus, his squyer principal, Is risen, and loketh on the myrie day. And, for to doon his observaunce to May, Remembring on the poynt of his desyr, He on a courser, startlynge 2 as the fyr, Is riden in-to the feeldes, him to pleve, Out of the court, were it a myle or tweve: And to the grove, of which that I yow tolde, By aventure, his wey he gan to holde, To maken him a gerland of the greves, Were it of wodebinde or hawethorn-leves, And loude he song ageyn the sonne shene: 'May, with alle thy floures and thy grene, Wel-come be thou, faire fresshe May, I hope that I som grene gete may.' And from his courser, with a lusty herte, In-to the grove ful hastily he sterte. And in a path he rometh up and doun, Ther-as, by aventure, this Palamoun Was in a bush, that no man mighte him see, For sore afered of his deeth was he. No-thing ne knew he that it was Arcite: God wot he wolde have trowed it ful lyte. But sooth is seyd, gon sithen many veres, That 'feeld hath eyen, and the wode hath eres.'

It is ful fair a man to bere him evene,³ For al-day meteth men at unset stevene.⁴ Ful litel woot Arcite of his felawe,
That was so ny to herknen al his sawe,

I trowe men wolde deme it necligence. If I foryete to tellen the dispence Of Theseus, that goth so bisily To maken up the listes royally: That swich a noble theatre as it was, I dar wel seyn that in this world ther nas. The circuit a myle was aboute, Walled of stoon, and diched al with-oute. Round was the shap, in maner of compas, Ful of degrees,4 the heighte of sixty pas, That, whan a man was set on o degree, He letted 5 nat his felawe for to see.

Est-ward ther stood a gate of marbel whyt.

West-ward, right swich another in the opposit.

And shortly to concluden, swich a place Was noon in erthe, as in so litel space; For in the lond ther nas no crafty man, That geometrie or ars-metrik 6 can. Ne purtreyour, ne kerver of images, That Theseus ne vaf him mete and wages The theatre for to maken and devvse. And for to doon his ryte and sacrifyse, He est-ward hath, up-on the gate above. In worship of Venus, goddesse of love, Don make 7 an auter and an oratorie; And west-ward, in the minde and in mem-

In thilke colde frosty regioun,

Ther-as Mars hath his sovereyn mansioun. First on the wal was psynted a foreste,

In which ther dwelleth neither man ne beste,

With knotty knarry 5 bareyn treës olde
Of stubbes sharpe and hidous to biholde;

In which ther ran a rumbel and a swough,⁶

Ther were also, of Martes divisioun,1 The barbour, and the bocher, and the smith That forgeth sharpe swerdes on his stith.2 And al above, depeynted in a tour, Saw I Conquest sittinge in greet honour. With the sharpe swerde over his heed Hanginge by a sotil twynes threed. Depeynted was the slaughtre of Julius. Of grete Nero, and of Antonius; Al be that thilke tyme they were unborn, Yet was hir deeth depeynted ther-biforn, By manasinge of Mars, right by figure; So was it shewed in that portreiture As is depeynted in the sterres above, Who shal be slayn or elles deed for love. Suffyceth oon ensample in stories olde, I may not rekne hem alle, thogh I wolde.

The statue of Mars up-on a carte ³ stood, Armed, and loked grim as he were wood; And over his heed ther shynen two figures Of sterres, that been cleped ⁴ in scriptures That oon Puella, that other Rubeus.

This god of armes was arrayed thus:

A wolf ther stood biforn him at his feet With eyen rede, and of a man he eet; 1190 With sotil pencel was depeynt this storie, In redoutinge ⁵ of Mars and of his glorie.

THE PRIORESSES TALE

THER was in Asie, in a greet citee,
Amonges Cristen folk, a Jewerye,
Sustened by a lord of that contree
For foule usure and lucre of vilanye,
Hateful to Crist and to his companye;
And thurgh the strete men mighte ryde or wende,

For it was free, and open at either ende.

A litel scole of Cristen folk ther stood Doun at the ferther ende, in which ther

Children an heep, y-comen of Cristen blood,

That lerned in that scole yeer by yere Swich maner doctrine as men used there, This is to seyn, to singen and to rede, As smale children doon in hir childhede.

Among thise children was a widwes sone, A litel elergeon, seven yeer of age, That day by day to scole was his wone, And eck also, wher-as he saugh th'image Of Cristes moder, hadde he in usage, As him was taught, to knele adoun and

His Ave Marie, as he goth by the weye.

Thus hath this widwe hir litel sone y-taught Our blisful lady, Cristes moder dere, To worshipe ay, and he forgat it naught, For sely ⁴ child wol alday sone lere; ⁶ But ay, whan I remembre on this matere, Seint Nicholas stant ever in my presence, For he so yong to Crist did reverence.⁶

This litel child, his litel book lerninge,
As he sat in the scole at his prymer,
He Alma redemptoris herde singe,
As children lerned hir antiphoner;
And, as he dorste, he drough him ner and

And herkned ay the wordes and the note, Til he the firste vers coude al by rote.

Noght wiste he what this Latin was to seye, For he so yong and tendre was of age; But on a day his felaw gan he preye T'expounden him this song in his langage, Or telle him why this song was in usage; 40 This preyde he him to construe and declare Ful ofte tyme upon his knowes bare.

His felaw, which that elder was than he, Answerde him thus: 'This song, I have herd seve.

Was maked of our blisful lady free, Hir to salue, 10 and eek hir for to preye To been our help and socour whan we deye. I can no more expounde in this matere; I lerne song, I can but smal grammere.'

'And is this song maked in reverence of Of Cristes moder?' seyde this innocent; 'Now certes, I wol do my diligence To conne it al, er Cristemasse is went; Though that I for my prymer shal be shent, 11

And shal be beten thryës in an houre, I wol it conne, our lady for to honoure.'

His felaw taughte him homward prively, Fro day to day, til he coude it by rote, And than he song it wel and boldely Fro word to word, acording with the note; Twyës a day it passed thurgh his throte, or To scoleward and homward whan he wente; On Cristes moder set was his entente.

SIR THOPAS

Here biginneth Chaucers Tale of Thopas

LISTETH, lordes, in good entent, And I wol telle verrayment Of mirthe and of solas; Al of a knyght was fair and gent In bataille and in tourneyment, His name was sir Thopas.

Y-born he was in fer contree, In Flaundres, al biyonde the see, At Popering, in the place; His fader was a man ful free, And lord he was of that contree, As it was Goddes grace

Sir Thopas wex 1 a doghty swayn, Whyt was his face as payndemayn,2 His lippes rede as rose; His rode 8 is lyk scarlet in grayn,4 And I yow telle in good certayn, He hadde a semely nose.

His heer, his berd was lyk saffroun, That to his girdle raughte 5 adoun; His shoon of Cordewane.6 Of Brugges 7 were his hosen broun, His robe was of ciclatoun,8 That coste many a jane.9

He coude 10 hunte at wilde deer, And ryde an hauking for riveer,11 With grey goshauk on honde; Ther-to he was a good archeer, Of wrastling was ther noon his peer, Ther any ram shal stonde. 12

Ful many a mayde, bright in bour, They moorne for him, paramour, Whan hem were bet 18 to slepe; But he was chast and no lechour. And sweet as is the bremble-flour That bereth the rede hepe.14

And so bifel up-on a day, For sothe, as I yow telle may, Sir Thopas wolde out ryde;

Here is ended the Nonne Preestes Tale. THE PROLOGUE OF THE PARDONERS TALE

For seint Paul seith, that al that writen is,

Taketh the fruyt, and lat the chaf be stille. Now, gode God, if that it be thy wille, As seith my lord, so make us alle good men;

And bringe us to his heighe blisse. Amen.

As of a fox, or of a cok and hen,

Taketh the moralitee, good men.

To our doctryne it is y-write, y-wis.7

Here folweth the Prologe of the Pardoners Tale Radix malorum est Cupiditas: Ad Thimotheum,

'LORDINGS,' quod he, 'in chirches whan I preche, I peyne me to han an hauteyn speche,8 And ringe it out as round as gooth a belle,

For I can al by rote 9 that I telle. My theme is alwey oon, and ever was-"Radix malorum est Cupiditas." 10

Our lige lordes seel on my patente,11

Me to destourbe of Cristes holy werk:

First I pronounce whennes that I come. And than my bulles shewe I, alle and somme.

That shewe I first, my body to warente, to

That no man be so bold, ne preest ne clerk,

And after that than telle I forth my tales.

And it is hool anon; and forthermore,
Of pokkes and of scabbe, and every sore 30
Shal every sheep be hool, that of this welle Drinketh a draughte; tak kepe eek what I telle.

If that the good-man, that the bestes oweth,1

Wol every wike,2 er that the cok him croweth.

Fastinge, drinken of this welle a draughte, As thilke holy Jewe our eldres taughte, His bestes and his stoor shal multiplye. And, sirs, also it heleth jalousye; For, though a man be falle in jalous rage, Let maken with this water his potage. 40 And never shal he more his wyf mistriste, Though he the sooth of hir defaute wiste; Al had she taken preestes two or three.

Heer is a miteyn eek, that ye may see. He that his hond wol putte in this miteyn, He shal have multiplying of his greyn, Whan he hath sowen, be it whete or otes, So that he offre pens, or elles grotes.

Good men and wommen, o thing warne

If any wight be in this chirche now,
That hath doon sinne horrible, that he
Dar nat, for shame, of it y-shriven be,
Or any womman, be she yong or old,
That hath y-mand hir housbond cokewold,
Swich folk shul have no power ne no grace
To offren to my reliks in this place.
And who-so findeth him out of swich blame,
He wol com up and offre in Goddes name,
And I assoille him by the auctoritee
Which that by bulle y-graunted was to
me."

By this gaude s have I wonne, yeer by yeer,
An hundred mark sith I was Pardoner.
I stonde lyk a clerk in my pulpet,
And whan the lewed peple is down y-set,
I preche, so as ye han herd bifore,
And telle an hundred false japes more.
Than peyne I me to streeche forth the nekke,

And est and west upon the peple I bekke,⁴
As doth a dowve sitting on a berne.
Myn hondes and my tonge goon so yerne,⁵
That it is joye to see my bisinesse.
Of avaryce and of swich cursednesse
Is al my preching, for to make hem free
To yeve her pens, and namely ⁶ un-to me.

1 "Own" and "owe" are the same word.
2 apparently "week."
3 trifle. 4 nod. 5 actively. 6 especially.

For my entente is nat but for to winne, And no-thing for correccioun of sinne. I rekke never, whan that they ben beried, Though that her soules goon a-blakeberied!

For certes, many a predicacioun
Comth ofte tyme of yvel entencioun; 80
Som for plesaunce of folk and flaterye,
To been avaunced by ipocrisye,
And som for veyne glorie, and som for hate.
For, whan I dar non other weyes debate,
Than wol I stinge him with my tonge
smerte

In preching, so that he shal nat asterte To been defamed falsly, if that he Hath trespased to my brethren or to me. For, though I telle noght his propre name, Men shal wel knowe that it is the same 90 By signes and by othere circumstances. Thus quyte I folk that doon us displesances; Thus spitte I out my venim under hewe Of holynesse, to seme holy and trewe.

But shortly myn entente I wol devyse; I preche of no-thing but for coveityse. Therfor my theme is yet, and ever was— "Radix malorum est cupiditas."

Thus can I preche agayn that same vyce Which that I use, and that is avaryce.

But, though my-self be gilty in that sinne, Yet can I maken other folk to twinne 8 From avaryce, and sore to repente. But that is nat my principal entente. I preche no-thing but for coveityse; Of this matere it oughte y-nogh suffyse.

Than telle I hem ensamples many oon
Of olde stories, longe tyme agoon:
For lewed peple loven tales olde;
Swich thinges can they wel reporte and holde.

What? trowe ye, the whyles I may preche,
And winne gold and silver for I teche,
That I wol live in povert wilfully?
Nay, nay, I thoghte it never trewely!
For I wol preche and begge in sondry
londes:

I wol not do no labour with myn hondes, Ne make baskettes, and live therby, Because I wol nat beggen ydelly. I wol non of the apostles counterfete; I wol have money, wolle, chese, and whete, Al⁹ were it yeven of the povrest page, 121 Or of the povrest widwe in a village, Al sholde hir children sterve for famyne. Nay! I wol drinke licour of the vyne,

And have a joly wenche in every toun. But herkneth, lordings, in conclusioun; Your lyking is that I shal telle a tale. Now, have I dronke a draughte of corny ale, By God, I hope I shal yow telle a thing That shal, by resoun, been at your lyking. For, though myself be a ful vicious man, 131 A moral tale yet I yow telle can, Which I am wont to preche, for to winne. Now holde your pees, my tale I wol beginne.'

THE TALE OF THE WYF OF BATHE

Here biginneth the Tale of the Wyf of Bathe

In th'olde dayes of the king Arthour, Of which that Britons speken greet honour, Al was this land fulfild of faverye. The elf-queen, with hir joly companye, Daunced ful ofte in many a grene mede: This was the olde opinion, as I rede. I speke of manye hundred yeres ago; But now can no man see none elves mo. For now the grete charitee and prayeres Of limitours and othere holy freres, That serchen every lond and every streem, As thikke as motes in the sonne-beem, Blessinge halles, chambres, kichenes, boures.

Citees, burghes, castels, hye toures, Thropes,4 bernes, shipnes,5 dayeryes, This maketh that ther been no faveryes. For ther as wont to walken was an elf, Ther walketh now the limitour himself In undermeles 6 and in morweninges, And seyth his matins and his holy thinges As he goth in his limitacioun.

Wommen may go saufly up and doun, In every bush, or under every tree;

THE DREAM

Within my twenty yere of age, Whan that Love taketh his corage 7 Of yonge folk, I wente sone To bedde, as I was wont to done, And fast I sleep; and in sleping, Me mette 8 swiche a swevening, That lykede me wonders wel: But in that sweven is never a del That it nis afterward befalle, Right as this dreem wol telle us alle. Now this dreem wol I ryme aright, To make your hertes gave and light; For Love it prayeth, and also Commaundeth me that it be so. And if ther any aske me, Whether that it be he or she. How this booke which is here Shall hatte,9 that I rede you here; It is the Romance of the Rose, In which al the art of love I close.

The mater fair is of to make: God graunte in gree 10 that she it take For whom that it begonnen is! And that is she that hath, y-wis,

1 dreams. 2 lies. 3 surely. 4 explains. 5 The Somnium Scipionis of Cicero, known in the commentary by Macrobius (fl. 400 A.D.). 5 A joke or a silly thing. 7 liking. 6 I dreamed. 9 be called. 10 favor. 7 liking.

So mochel prys; and ther-to she So worthy is biloved be, That she well oughte, of prys and right, Be cleped Rose of every wight.

That it was May me thoughte tho -It is fyve yere or more ago; That it was May, thus dremed me, In tyme of love and jolitee, That al thing ginneth waxen gay, For ther is neither busk nor hay 11 In May, that it nil shrouded been, And it with newe leves wreen.12 These wodes eek recoveren grene, That drye in winter been to sene; And th' erthe wexeth proud withalle, For swote 18 dewes that on it falle, And al the pore estat forget In which that winter hadde it set: And than bicometh the ground so proud That it wol have a newe shroud, And maketh so queynt his robe and favr That it hath hewes an hundred payr Of gras and floures, inde and pers,14 And many hewes ful dyvers: That is the robe I mene, y-wis, Through which the ground to preisen is. 70

The briddes, that han left hir song, Whyl they han suffred cold so strong In wedres 15 grille, 16 and derk to sighte, Ben in May, for the sonne brighte, So glade, that they shewe in singing That in hir herte is swich lyking That they mote singen and be light. Than doth the nightingale hir might To make noyse, and singen blythe. Than is blisful, many a sythe, 17 The chelaundre 18 and the papingay.19 Than yonge folk entenden 20 av For to ben gay and amorous, The tyme is than so savorous.21 Hard is his herte that loveth nought In May, whan al this mirth is wrought; Whan he may on these braunches here The smale briddes singen clere Hir blisful swete song pitous; And in this sesoun delitous,22

Whan love affrayeth 1 alle thing, Me thoughte a-night, in my sleping, Right in my bed, ful redily, That it was by the morowe erly, And up I roos and gan me clothe; Anoon I wissh 2 myn hondes bothe; A sylvre nedle forth I drogh Out of an aguiler 8 queynt y-nogh, And gan this nedle threde anon; For out of toun me list to gon The sowne of briddes for to here, That on thise busshes singen clere. And in the swete sesoun that leef 4 is, With a threde basting my slevis,⁵ Aloon I wente in my playing, The smale foules song harkning; That peyned hem 6 ful many a payre To singe on bowes blosmed fayre. Jolif and gay, ful of gladnesse, Toward a river I gan me dresse, That I herde renne faste by; For fairer playing non saugh I Than playen me by that riveer, For from an hille that stood ther neer Cam down the streem ful stif and bold. Cleer was the water, and as cold As any welle is, sooth to seyne; And somdel lasse it was than Seine, But it was straighter wel away. And never saugh I, er that day, The water that so wel lyked 7 me: And wonder glad was I to see That lusty place, and that riveer; And with that water that ran so cleer My face I wissh. Tho saugh I wel The botme paved everydel With gravel, ful of stones shene. The medewe softe, swote, and grene, Beet 8 right on the water-syde. Ful cleer was than the morow-tyde, And ful attempre, out of drede. Tho gan I walke through the mede. Dounward ay in my pleying, The river-syde costeying.10

THE GARDEN

And whan I had a whyle goon,
I saugh a GARDIN right anoon,
Ful long and brood, and everydel
Enclosed was, and walled wel,
With hye walles embatailled,
Portrayed without, and wel entailled 11 140

1 distracts, 2 washed. 3 needle-case. 4 dear. 5 They often sewed on the long drooping sleeves each time the garment was donned. 5 took pains. 7 pleased. 8 Impinged. 9 temperate. 10 coasting, following along. 11 decorated.

With many riche portraitures; And bothe images and peyntures Gan I biholde bisily. And I wol telle you, redily, Of thilke images the semblaunce, As fer as I have remembraunce.

HATE

A-midde saugh I HATE stonde,
That for hir wrathe, ire, and onde, ¹²
Semed to been a moveresse, ¹⁸
An angry wight, a chideresse; ¹⁴
And ful of gyle, and fel corage, ¹⁶
By semblaunt was that ilke image.
And she was no-thing wel arrayed,
But lyk a wood ¹⁸ womman afrayed;
Y-frounced ¹⁷ foule was hir visage,
And grenning ¹⁸ for dispitous ¹⁹ rage;
Hir nose snorted up for tene. ²⁰
Ful hidous was she for to sene,
Ful foul and rusty was she, this.
Hir heed y-writhen ²¹ was, y-wis,
Ful grimly with a greet towayle.

FELONYE

An image of another entayle,²² A lift half,²³ was hir faste by: Hir name above hir heed saugh I, And she was called Felonye.

VILANYE

Another image, that VILANYE
Y-cleped was, saugh I and fond
Upon the walle on hir right hond.
Vilanye was lyk somdel 24
That other image; and, trusteth wel,
She semed a wikked creature.
By countenaunce, in portrayture,
She semed be ful despitous,
And eek ful proud and outrageous.
Wel coude he peynte, I undertake,
That swiche image coude make.
Ful foul and cherlish semed she,
And eek vilaynous for to be,
And litel coude of norture,
To worshipe any creature. 25

[The descriptions of Covetousness, Avarice, Envy, and Poverty are omitted.]

The gan I go a ful gret pas Envyroning even in compas ²⁶ The closing of the square wal, Til that I fond a wiket smal 12 malice. 13 fomentress of quarrels. 14 scolder. 15 bad disposition. 16 mad. 17 wrinkled. 18 grinning. 19 spiteful. 20 vexation. 21 encircled. 22 fashion. 23 On the left side. 24 somewhat. 25 knew little of manners to be polite to any. 26 Going quite about the circuit.

So shet, that I ne mighte in goon, And other entree was ther noon.

THE DOOR

Upon this dore I gan to smyte,
That was [so] fetys I and so lyte;
For other wey coude I not seke.
Ful long I shoof, 2 and knokked eke,
And stood ful long and oft herkning
If that I herde a wight coming;
Til that the dore of thilke entree
A mayden curteys opened me.

YDELNESSE

Hir heer was as yelowe of hewe As any basin 8 scoured newe. 540 Hir flesh [as] tendre as is a chike. With bente 4 browes, smothe and slike: And by mesure large were The opening of hir yen clere. Hir nose of good proporcioun. Hir yen greye as a faucoun, With swete breeth and wel savoured. Hir face whyt and wel coloured, With litel mouth, and round to see: A clove 5 chin eek hadde she. 550 Hir nekke was of good fasoun In lengthe and gretnesse, by resoun. Withoute bleyne, scabbe, or royne.6 Fro Jerusalem unto Burgoyne Ther nis a fairer nekke, y-wis, To fele how smothe and softe it is. Hir throte, al-so whyt of hewe As snow on braunche snowed newe. Of body ful wel wrought was she: Men neded not, in no cuntree. 560 A fairer body for to seke. And of fyn orfrays 7 had she eke A chapelet: so semly oon Ne wered never mayde upon; And faire above that chapelet A rose gerland had she set. She hadde [in honde] a gay 8 mirour. And with a riche gold tressour 9 Hir heed was tressed queyntely: Hir sleves sewed fetisly. 570 And for to kepe hir hondes faire Of gloves whyte she hadde a paire. And she hadde on a cote of grene Of cloth of Gaunt; 10 withouten wene, 11 Wel semed by hir apparayle

1 well-made. 2 shoved. 3 The basin would be of latten. 4 arched. 5 cloven, i.e. dimpled. 6 roughness. 7 gold-work. 8 pretty. 9 head-dress, caul. 16 Ghent. 11 beyond doubt.

She was not wont to greet travayle. For whan she kempt ¹² was fetisly, And wel arayed and richely,
Thanne had she doon al hir journee; ¹⁸
For mery and wel bigoon ¹⁴ was she.
She ladde a lusty lyf in May,
She hadde no thought, by night ne day,
Of no-thing, but it were oonly
To graythe ¹⁶ hir wel and uncouthly. ¹⁶

Whan that this dore hadde opened me This mayden, semely for to see, I thanked hir as I best mighte, And axede hir how that she highte,17 And what she was, I axede eke. And she to me was nought unmeke, 590 Ne of hir answer daungerous, 18 But faire answerde, and seide thus: -'Lo, sir, my name is YDELNESSE: So clepe men me, more and lesse. Ful mighty and ful riche am I, And that of oon thing, namely; 19 For I entende 20 to no-thing But to my joye, and my pleying, And for to kembe and tresse 21 me. Aqueynted am I, and privee 600 With Mirthe, lord of this gardyn. That fro the lande Alexandryn Made the trees be hider fet, That in this gardin been v-set. And when the trees were woxen 22 on highte, This wal, that stant here in thy sighte. Dide Mirthe enclosen 23 al aboute: And these images, al withoute, He dide hem bothe entaile 24 and peynte, That neither ben jolyf ne queynte, 610 But they ben ful of sorowe and wo. As thou hast seen a whyle ago.

'And ofte tyme, him to solace,
Sir Mirthe cometh into this place,
And eek with him cometh his meynee,
That liven in lust and jolitee.
And now is Mirthe therin, to here
The briddes, how they singen clere,
The mavis and the nightingale,
And other joly briddes smale.
And thus he walketh to solace
Him and his folk; for swetter place
To pleyen in he may not finde,
Although he soughte oon in-til Inde.
The alther-fairest 25 folk to see
That in this world may founde be

12 combed, dressed. 13 day's work. 14 satisfied.
15 clothe. 16 rarely. 17 was called. 18 haughty.
19 especially. 10 apply myself. 21 do my hair.
22 waxed. 23 had it enclosed. 24 carve. 25 fairest of all.

Hath Mirthe with him in his route, That followen him alwayes aboute.'

When Ydelnesse had told al this. And I hadde herkned wel, y-wis, 630 Than seide I to dame Ydelnesse, 'Now al-so wisly 1 God me blesse. Sith Mirthe, that is so fair and free, Is in this verde with his meynee,2 Fro thilke assemblee, if I may, Shal no man werne 8 me to-day, That I this night ne mote it see. For, wel wene I, ther with him be A fair and joly companye Fulfilled of alle curtesve.' And forth, without wordes mo, In at the wiket wente I tho, That Ydelnesse hadde opened me, Into that gardin fair to see.

THE GARDEN

And whan I was [ther]in, y-wis, Myn herte was ful glad of this. For wel wende I ful sikerly Have been in paradys erth[e]ly: So fair it was, that, trusteth wel, It semed a place espirituel. For certes, as at my devys, Ther is no place in paradys So good in for to dwelle or be As in that GARDIN, thoughte me; For there was many a brid singing, Throughout the yerd al thringing.4 In many places were nightingales, Alpes, finches, and wodewales, 6 That in her swete song delyten In thilke place as they habyten.7 660 Ther mighte men see many flokkes Of turtles and [of] laverokkes. Chalaundres 8 fele saw I there, That wery, nigh forsongen 9 were. And thrustles, terins, 10 and mavys, 11 That songen for to winne hem prys,12 And eek to sormounte in hir song These other briddes hem among. By note made fair servyse These briddes, that I you devyse; 670 They songe hir song as faire and wel As angels doon espirituel. And, trusteth wel, whan I hem herde, Full lustily and wel I ferde: For never yit swich melodye Was herd of man that mighte dye.

Swich swete song was hem among,
That me thoughte it no briddes song,
But it was wonder lyk to be
Song of mermaydens of the see;
That, for her singing is so clere,
Though we mermaydens clepe hem here
In English, as in our usaunce,
Men clepe[n] hem sereyus 18 in Fraunce.

Ententif 14 weren for to singe These briddes that nought unkunninge Were of hir craft, and apprentys. But of [hir] song sotyl and wys. And certes, whan I herde hir song, And saw the grene place among, 690 In herte I wex so wonder gay, That I was never erst, er that day, So jolyf, nor so wel bigo, Ne mery in herte, as I was tho. And than wiste I, and saw ful wel, That Ydelnesse me served wel, That me putte in swich jolitee. Hir freend wel oughte I for to be, Sith she the dore of that gardyn Hadde opened, and me leten in.

From hennesforth how that I wroughte, I shal you tellen, as me thoughte. First, whereof Mirthe served 16 there, And eek what folk ther with him were, Without[e] fable I wol descryve.

Layes of love, ful wel sowning They songen in hir jargoning; Summe highe and summe eek lowe songe Upon the braunches grene y-spronge. The sweetnesse of hir melodye Made al myn herte in reverdye. 17 720 And whan that I hadde herd, I trowe, These briddes singing on a rowe, Than mighte I not withholde me That I ne wente 18 in for to see Sir Mirthe; for my desiring Was him to seen, over alle thing, His countenaunce and his manere: That sighte was to me ful dere.

THE PARLEMENT OF FOULES

THE PROEM

THE lyf so short, the craft so long to

Th'assay so hard, so sharp the conquering, The dredful joye, that alwey slit so yerne,1 Al this mene I by love, that my feling Astonyeth with his wonderful worching So sore y-wis, that whan I on him thinke, Nat wot I wel wher that I wake or winke.

For al be that I knowe not love in dede. Ne wot how that he quyteth folk hir hyre, Yet happeth me ful ofte in bokes rede Of his miracles, and his cruel yre; Ther rede I wel he wol be lord and syre, I dar not seyn, his strokes been so sore, But God save swich a lord! I can no more.

Of usage, what for luste what for lore,2 On bokes rede I ofte, as I vow tolde. But wherfor that I speke al this? Not yore Agon hit happed me for to beholde Upon a boke, was write with lettres olde: And ther-upon, a certevn thing to lerne, 20 The longe day ful faste I radde and yerne.3

For out of olde feldes, as men seith, Cometh al this newe corn fro yeer to yere; And out of olde bokes, in good feith, Cometh al this newe science that men lere.4 But now to purpos as of this matere -To rede forth hit gan me so delyte, That al the day me thoughte but a lyte.

This book of which I make mencioun, Entitled was al thus, as I shal telle, 'Tullius of the dreme of Scipioun';5 Chapitres seven hit hadde, of hevene and helle,

And erthe, and soules that therinne dwelle, Of whiche, as shortly as I can hit trete, Of his sentence I wol you seyn the grete.6

1 slideth, slips away, so soon.

2 Habitually, sometimes for pleasure, sometimes for edification.

3 I read closely and eagerly. 4 learn. ⁵ Cicero's Somnium Scipionis in the commentary of Macrobius. See line 111, below.

⁶ gist. First telleth hit, whan Scipioun was come In Afrik, how he mette Massinisse, That him for joye in armes hath y-nome.7 Than telleth hit hir speche and al the blisse That was betwix hem, till the day gan misse;8

And how his auncestre, African so dere, Gan in his slepe that night to him appere.

Than telleth hit that, fro a sterry place, How African hath him Cartage shewed, And warned him before of al his grace, And seyde him, what man, lered other lewed.

That loveth comun profit, wel y-thewed,9 He shal unto a blisful place wende, Ther as joye is that last withouten ende.

Than asked he if folk that heer be dede so Have lyf and dwelling in another place; And African seyde, 'Ye, withoute drede,' And that our present worldes lyves space Nis but a maner deth, what wey we trace, And rightful folk shal go, after they dve, To heven; and shewed him the galaxye.

Than shewed he him the litel erthe, that heer is.

At regard of 10 the hevenes quantite; And after shewed he him the nyne speres,11 And after that the melodye herde he That cometh of thilke speres three, The welle 12 is of musyke and melodye In this world heer, and cause of armonye.

Than bad he him, sin erthe was so lyte, And ful of torment and of harde grace, That he ne shulde him in the world delyte. Than tolde he him, in certyn yeres space, That every sterre shulde come into his place Ther hit was first; and al shulde 18 out of minde

That in this worlde is don of al mankinde.

Than prayde him Scipioun to telle him al The wey to come un-to that hevene blisse;

7 taken. 8 fail. 9 virtuous. 10 As compared with. 11 spheres. 12 source. 18 Supply "depart." 10 As compared And he seyde, 'Know thy-self first immortal,

And loke ay besily thou werke and wisse ¹ To comun profit, and thou shalt nat misse To comen swiftly to that place dere, That ful of blisse is and of soules clere.

But brekers of the lawe, soth to seyne,
And lecherous folk, after that they be dede,

Shul alwey whirle aboute th'erthe in peyne, Til many a world be passed, out of drede, And than, for-yeven alle hir wikked dede, Than shul they come unto that blisful place,

To which to comen God thee sende his grace!'—

The day gan failen, and the derke night,
That reveth bestes from hir besinesse,
Berafte me my book for lakke of light,
And to my bedde I gan me for to dresse,
Fulfild of thought and besy hevinesse;
For bothe I hadde thing which that I
nolde,

And eek I ne hadde that thing that I wolde.

But fynally my spirit, at the laste,
For-wery of my labour al the day,
Took rest, that made me to slepe faste,
And in my slepe I mette, as I lay,
How African, right in that selfe aray
That Scipioun him saw before that tyde,
Was comen, and stood right at my beddes syde.

The wery hunter, slepinge in his bed,
To wode ayen his minde goth anoon;
The juge dremeth how his plees ben sped;
The carter dremeth how his cartes goon;
The riche, of gold; the knight fight with his foon,⁸

The seke met he drinketh of the tonne; The lover met he hath his lady wonne.

Can I nat seyn if that the cause were
For I had red of African beforn,
That made me to mete that he stood there;
But thus seyde he, 'Thou hast thee so wel
born

In loking of myn olde book to-torn,
Of which Macrobie roghte nat a lyte,
That somdel of thy labour wolde I quyte!'— teach. dreamed. foes. A.S. gefan.

Citherea! thou blisful lady swete,
That with thy fyr-brand dauntest whom thee lest,

And madest me this sweven for to mete, Be thou my help in this, for thou mayst

As wisly as I saw thee north-north-west, When I began my sweven for to wryte, So yif me might to ryme hit and endyte!

THE STORY

This forseid African me hente anoon, 120
And forth with him unto a gate broghte
Right of a parke, walled with grene stoon;
And over the gate, with lettres large ywroghte,

Ther weren vers y-writen, as me thoghte, On eyther halfe, of ful gret difference, Of which I shal yow sey the pleyn sentence.

'Thorgh me men goon in-to that blisful place

Of hertes hele and dedly woundes cure; Thorgh me men goon unto the welle of Grace,

Ther grene and lusty May shal ever endure;

This is the wey to al good aventure;
Be glad, thou reder, and thy sorwe ofcaste;

Al open am I; passe in, and hy the faste!'

'Thorgh me men goon,' than spak that other syde,
'Unto the mortal strokes of the spare

'Unto the mortal strokes of the spere, Of which Disdayn and Daunger is the gyde,

Ther tree shal never fruit ne leves bere.

This streem you ledeth to the sorwful were,⁴

Ther as the fish in prison is al drye; Th'eschewing is only the remedye.'

Thise vers of gold and blak y-writen were, The whiche I gan a stounde to beholde, For with that oon encresed ay my fere, And with that other gan myn herte bolde. That oon me hette, that other did me colde;

No wit had I, for errour, for to chese, To entre or flee, or me to save or lese.

4 fish-weir. 5 a while.

Right as, betwixen adamauntes 1 two Of even might, a pece of iren y-set,
That hath no might to meve to ne fro— 150
For what that on may hale, that other let—2
Ferde I, that niste whether me was bet,3
To entre or leve, til African my gyde
Me hente, and shoof 4 in at the gates wyde,

And seyde, 'Hit stondeth writen in thy face.

Thyn errour, though thou telle it not to

But dred thee nat to come in-to this place, For this wryting is no-thing ment by ⁵ thee, Ne by noon, but he Loves servant be; For thou of love hast lost thy tast, I gesse,

As seek man hath of swete and bitternesse.

But natheles, al-though that thou be dulle, Yit that thou canst not do, yit mayst thou see:

For many a man that may not stonde a pulle,

Yit lyketh him at the wrastling for to be, And demeth yit wher he do bet or he; And if thou haddest cunning for t'endyte, I shal thee shewen mater of to wryte.'

With that my hond in his he took anoon,
Of which I comfort caughte, and wente in faste:

But lord! so I was glad and wel begoon! ⁶
For over-al, wher that I myn eyen caste,
Were treës clad with leves that ay shal

Eche in his kinde, of colour fresh and grene As emeraude, that joye was to sene.

The bilder ook, and eek the hardy asshe;
The piler 7 elm, the cofre unto careyne; 8
The boxtree piper; 9 holm to whippes
lasshe; 10

The sayling 11 firr; the cipres, deth to pleyne;

The sheter 12 ew, the asp for shaftes pleyne; The olyve of pees, and eek the drunken vyne,

The victor palm, the laurer to devyne.18

1 magnets. 2 one pulls, the other hinders. 3 knew not which was better for me. 4 seized and shoved. 5 concerning. 6 situated. 7 for posts. 8 coffins for corpses. 9 for making whistles. 10 Apparently, furnishing handles for lashes. 11 good for masts. 12 "shooter," because used for bows. 13 used in divination.

A garden saw I, ful of blosmy bowes,
Upon a river, in a grene mede,
Ther as that swetnesse evermore y-now is,
With floures whyte, blewe, yelowe, and rede:

And colde welle-stremes, no-thing dede, That swommen ful of smale fisshes lighte, With finnes rede and scales silver-brighte.

On every bough the briddes herde I singe, With voys of aungel in hir armonye, 191 Som besyed hem hir briddes forth to bringe. 14

The litel conyes to hir pley gunne hye;
And further al aboute I gan espye
The dredful ¹⁶ roo, the buk, the hert and hinde,

Squerels, and bestes smale of gentil kinde.

Of instruments of strenges in acord Herde I so pleye a ravisshing swetnesse, That God, that maker is of al and lord, Ne herde never better, as I gesse; 200 Therwith a wind, unnethe 16 hit might be lesse.

Made in the leves grene a noise softe Acordant to the foules songe on-lofte.

The air of that place so attempre ¹⁷ was
That never was grevaunce of hoot ne cold;
Ther wex eek every holsom spyce and gras,
Ne no man may ther wexe seek ne old;
Yet was ther joye more a thousand fold
Then man can telle; ne never wolde it nighte,

But ay cleer day to any mannes sighte. 210

Under a tree, besyde a welle, I say Cupyde our lord his arwes forge and fyle; And at his fete his bowe al redy lay; And wel his doghter tempred al the whyle The hedes in the welle, and with hir wyle ¹⁸ She couched ¹⁹ hem after as they shulde serve,

Som for to slee, and som to wounde and kerve.

The was I war of Plesaunce anon-right,
And of Aray, and Lust, and Curtesye;
And of the Craft that can and hath the might
To don't refere a wight to do folyo

To doon by force a wight to do folye — Disfigurat was she, I nil not lye;

14 to rear their chicks. 15 timid. 16 hardly.
17 temperate. 18 guile, subtlety. 19 arranged.

And by him-self, under an oke, I gesse, Sawe I Delyt, that stood with Gentilnesse.

I saw Beautee, withouten any atyr,
And Youthe, ful of game and Jolyte,
Fool-hardinesse, Flatery, and Desyr,
Messagerye, and Mede, and other three—Hir names shul noght here be told for
me—

And upon pilers grete of jasper longe 230 I saw a temple of bras y-founded stronge.

Aboute the temple daunceden alway Wommen y-nowe, of whiche somme ther were

Faire of hem-self, and somme of hem were

In kirtels, al disshevele, wente they there—
That was hir office alwey, yeer by yere—
And on the temple, of doves whyte and faire

Saw I sittinge many a hundred paire.

Before the temple-dore ful soberly
Dame Pees sat, with a curteyn in hir
hond:

And hir besyde, wonder discretly,
Dame Pacience sitting ther I fond
With face pale, upon an hille of sond;
And alder-next, within and eek withoute,
Behest and Art, and of hir folke a route.

Within the temple, of syghes hote as fyr I herde a swogh 2 that gan aboute renne; Which syghes were engendred with desyr, That maden every auter for to brenne Of newe flaume; and wel aspyed I thenne That al the cause of sorwes that they drye 3

Com of the bitter goddesse Jalousye.

The god Priapus saw I, as I wente,

Within the temple, in soverayn place stonde, In swich aray as whan the asse him sheute With crye by night, and with his ceptre in honde;

Ful besily men gunne assaye and fonde Upon his hede to sette, of sondry hewe, Garlondes ful of fresshe floures newe.

And in a privee corner, in disporte, 260 Fond I Venus and hir porter Richesse, That was ful noble and hauteyn of hir porte.

Derk was that place, but afterward lightnesse

I saw a lyte, unnethe ⁵ hit might be lesse; And on a bed of golde she lay to reste, Til that the hote sonne gan to weste.

Hir gilte heres with a golden threde Y-bounden were, untressed as she lay, And naked fro the breste unto the hede Men might hir see; and, sothly for to say, 270 The remenant wel kevered to my pay ⁶ Right with a subtil kerchef of Valence,⁷ Ther was no thikker cloth of no defence.

The place yaf a thousand savours swote, And Bachus, god of wyn, sat hir besyde, And Ceres next, that doth of hunger bote; ⁸ And, as I seide, amiddes lay Cipryde, To whom on knees two yonge folkes cryde To ben hir help; but thus I leet hir lye, And ferther in the temple I gan espye 280

That, in dispyte of Diane the chaste, Ful many a bowe y-broke heng on the wal Of maydens, suche as gunne hir tymes waste

In hir servyse; and peynted over al Of many a story, of which I touche shal A fewe, as of Calixte ⁹ and Athalaunte ¹⁰ And many a mayde of which the name I wante;

Semyramus, Candace, 11 and Ercules, Biblis, 12 Dido, Tisbe and Piramus, Tristram, Isoude, 18 Paris, and Achilles, 290 Eleyne, 14 Cleopatre, and Troilus, Silla, 15 and eek the moder of Romulus— Alle these were peynted on that other syde, And al hir love, and in what plyte they dyde.

Whan I was come ayen into the place That I of spak, that was so swote and grene, Forth welk I tho, my-selven to solace. Tho was I war wher that ther sat a quene That, as of light the somer-sonne shene Passeth the sterre, right so over mesure 300 She fairer was than any creature.

And in a launde, upon an hille of floures. Was set this noble goddesse Nature; Of braunches were hir halles and hir boures, Y-wrought after hir craft and hir mesure; Ne ther nas foul that cometh of engendrure,1

That they ne were prest 2 in hir presence. To take hir doom and yeve hir audience.

For this was on sevnt Valentynes day, Whan every foul cometh ther to chese his make,

Of every kinde, that men thenke may; And that so huge a noyse gan they make, That erthe and see, and tree, and every lake So ful was, that unnethe was ther space For me to stonde, so ful was al the place.

And right as Aleyn, in the Pleynt of Kinde,3 Devyseth Nature of aray and face, In swich aray men mighte[n] hir ther finde. This noble emperesse, ful of grace, Bad every foul to take his owne place, 320 As they were wont alwey fro yeer to yere, Seynt Valentynes day, to stonden there.

That is to sey, the foules of ravyne 4 Were hyest set; and than the foules smale, That eten as hem nature wolde enclyne, As worm, or thing of whiche I telle no tale; But water-foul sat lowest in the dale; And foul that liveth by seed sat on the grene. And that so fele,5 that wonder was to sene.

Ther mighte men the royal egle finde. That with his sharpe look perceth the sonne; And other egles of a lower kinde, Of which that clerkes wel devysen conne. Ther was the tyraunt with his fethres donne And greye, I mene the goshauk, that doth

THE LEGEND OF GOOD WOMEN

PROLOGUE A

The prologe of .ix. goode Wimmen.

A THOUSAND sythes 1 have I herd men

That ther is jove in heven, and pevne in helle:

And I acorde wel that hit be so; But natheles, this wot I wel also, That ther nis noon that dwelleth in this contree.

That either hath in helle or heven y-be, Ne may of hit non other weyes witen,2 But as he hath herd seyd, or founde hit writen:

For by assay ther may no man hit preve. But Goddes forbode, but men shulde leve4 10 Wel more thing then men han seen with yë!5 Men shal nat wenen every-thing a lyë For that he seigh it nat of yore ago. God wot, a thing is never the lesse so Thogh every wight he may hit nat y-see. Bernard the monk⁶ ne saugh nat al, parde!

Than mote we to bokes that we finde, Through which that olde thinges been in minde.

And to the doctrine of these olde wyse, Yeven credence, in every skilful 7 wyse. 20 And trowen on these olde aproved stories Of holinesse, of regnes,8 of victories, Of love, of hate, of other sundry thinges, Of whiche I may not maken rehersinges. And if that olde bokes were a-weve, Y-loren were of remembraunce the keye. Wel oghte us than on olde bokes leve. Ther-as ther is non other assay by preve.9

And, as for me, though that my wit be lyte. On bokes for to rede I me delyte, And in myn herte have hem in reverence;

And to hem yeve swich lust and swich credence, That ther is wel unethe game noon 10 That from my bokes make me to goon, 10 scarcely any game.

But hit be other up-on the haly-day, Or elles in the joly tyme of May; Whan that I here the smale foules singe, And that the floures ginne for to springe, Farwel my studie, as lasting that sesoun!

Now have I therto this condicioun 11 That, of alle the floures in the mede, Than love I most these floures whyte and rede.

Swiche as men callen daysies in our toun. To hem have I so greet affectioun, As I seyde erst, whan comen is the May, That in my bed ther daweth 12 me no day That I nam up, and walking in the mede To seen these floures agein the sonne sprede. Whan it up-riseth by the morwe shene, 49 The longe day, thus walking in the grene. And whan the some ginneth for to weste, Than closeth hit, and draweth hit to reste, So sore hit is afered of the night, Til on the morwe, that hit is dayes light. MERCILES BEAUTE: A TRIPLE ROUNDEL

I. CAPTIVITY

Your yën two wol slee me sodenly, I may the beaute of hem not sustene, So woundeth hit through-out my herte kene.

And but your word wol helen hastily
My hertes wounde, whyl that hit is grene,
Your yën two wol slee me sodenly,
I may the beaute of hem not sustene.

Upon my trouthe I sey yow feithfully,
That ye ben of my lyf and deeth the quene;
For with my deeth the trouthe shal be sene.
Your yën two wol slee me sodenly,
I may the beaute of hem not sustene,
So woundeth hit through-out my herte kene.

II. REJECTION

So hath your beaute fro your herte chaced Pitee, that me ne availeth not to pleyne; For Daunger halt 7 your mercy in his cheyne.

Giltles my deeth thus han ye me purchaced; I sey yow sooth, me nedeth not to feyne; So hath your heaute fro your herte chaced Pitee, that me ne availeth not to pleyne. 20

LAK OF STEDFASTNESSE

BALADE

Som tyme this world was so stedfast and stable,

That mannes word was obligacioun, And now hit is so fals and deceivable, That word and deed, as in conclusioun; Ben no-thing lyk, for turned up so doun Is al this world for mede and wilfulnesse, That al is lost for lak of stedfastnesse.

What maketh this world to be so variable, But lust that folk have in dissensioun? Among us now a man is holde unable, so But-if he can, by som collusioun, Don his neighbour wrong or oppressioun. What causeth this, but wilful wrecchednesse, That al is lost, for lak of stedfastnesse?

Trouthe is put doun, resoun is holden fable;
Vertu hath now no dominacioun;
Pitee exyled, no man is merciable.
Through covetyse is blent 6 discrecioun;
The world hath mad a permutacioun
Fro right to wrong, fro trouthe to fikelnesse,

That al is lost, for lak of stedfastnesse.

Of making of Adam, may be no way Streeche to so perfyte a goode, I say, As dide the formacioun of Eve;

And that as swithe here I schal it preve. 70

For more have I for hir partye yit:
Making of Eve tokned the makyng
Of holy chirche, and sacramentes of it;
As of the syde of Adam, him sleppng,
Eve was made, so our lorde Crist deyeng

And the sacramentes, made were in that tyde.

From tyme eeke Crist was of xii yere age Unto thritty, he with his modir ay
Was servyng hir with right plesant corage;
To teche humilite, he tooke the way affro Heven hiddir, and mekenesse verray
Taught he, the moste partie of his lyf,
Whil he was with his modir and his wyfe;

For she was bothe two; and syn she had So long of hir housbonde the maystrie, Women, I trowe, be nat now so mad That style to forgo; nay, swich folye, What man that can in a woman espye, Is worthi shryned be; God save hem alle,

And graunt hir hye corage nat to palle!

Holy writ seith, 'If women sovereynte Of hir housbondes have, how that thei Unto housbondes contrarious be:'

The text is such, I woot wel, but what thei? 1

That text I undirstonde thus alwey:

Whan that housbondes hem mystake and erre,

Ageyn that vice wyves maken werre.

Thogh a woman hir housbonde contrarie
In his oppynyoun erroneous, 100
Shul men for that deme hir his adversarie?
Straw! be he never so harrageous,2

If he and she shul dwellen in on house, Goode is he suffre; therby pees may spring;

Housbondes pees is pesible suffryng.

THE COMPLAINT

THE PROLOG

After that hervest inned had his sheves, And that the broune season of Myhelmesse Was come, and gan the trees robbe of ther leves,

That grene had bene and in lusty fresshnesse,

And them in-to colowre of yelownesse Hadd dyen and downe throwne undar foote, That chaunge sank into myne herte roote.

For freshely browght it to my remembraunce,

That stablenes in this worlde is there none; There is no thinge but chaunge and variance:

How welthye a man be, or well begone, ¹⁵ Endure it shall not; he shall it forgon. Deathe under fote shall hym thrist adowne: That is every wites conclusyon. ¹⁶

Whiche for to weyve 17 is in no mannes myght,

How riche he be, stronge, lusty, freshe, and gay.

And in the ende of Novembar, upon a nyght, them again in his poem To Sir John Oldcastle, 1. 417.

Before I toke, sleape came none in myne

So vexyd me the thoughtfull maladye.

I see well, sythen I with sycknes 1 last Was scourged, clowdy hath bene the fayoure

That shone on me full bright in tymes past; The sonne abatid and the derke showre Hildyd² downe right on me; and in langour He made me swyme, so that my wite To lyve no lust hadd, ne no delyte.

The grefe abowte my harte so sore swal,³
And bolned ⁴ ever to and to so sore, ³⁰
That nedes oute I muste there-with-all;
I thought I nolde it kepe closs no more,
Ne lett it in me for to olde and hore;⁵
And for to preve I cam of a woman,
I brast oute on the morowe and thus began.

(Here endythe my prologe and followythe my complaynt.)

Allmyghty God as lykethe his goodnes, Visytethe folks alday as men may se, With lose of good and bodily sikenese, And amonge othar he forgat not me; Witnes upon 6 the wyld infirmytie 40 Which that I had, as many a man well knewe,

And whiche me owt of my selfe cast and threw.

It was so knowen to the people and kouthe, That cownsell ⁸ was it none, ne none be myghte.

How it with me stode was in every mans mowthe,

And that full sore my fryndes affrighte.

They for myne helthe pilgrimages highte,

And sowght them, some on hors and some on foote,—

God yelde it them — to geten me my bote.10

But althoughe the substaunce of my memory 50

Wente to pley as for a certayne space, Yet the Lorde of Vertew, the Kynge of Glory,

1 The insanity spoken of below. 2 Poured.
3 swelled. 4 raged. 5 grow old and hoary.
6 As is shown by. 7 His insane fit.

Of his highe myght and his benynge grace,

Made it to returne into the place Whennes it cam; whiche at all-hallwemesse,

Was five yeere, neyther more ne lesse.

And evere sythen — thanked be God owr
Lord

Of his good reconsiliacion, —

My wyt and I have bene of such accorde
As we were or 11 the alteracion
Of it was. But by my savacion,
Sith that tyme have I be sore sett on fire,
And lyved in great torment and martire;

For though that my wit were home come agavne.

Men wolde it not so understond or take;
With me to deale hadden they dysdayne;
A ryotows person I was and forsake;
Myn olde frindshipe was all ovarshake;
No wyte withe me lyst make daliance;
The worlde me made a straunge continance.¹²

JOHN LYDGATE

THE CHURL AND THE BIRD'

PROBLEMYS of olde likenesse and figures, Whiche proved been fructuous of sentence,² And hath auctorite grownded in scriptures, By resemblaunces of nobille apparence, Withe moralites concluding of prudence, Like as the Bibylle rehersithe by writing, How trees somtyme chase³ hemself a kyng.

First in their choise thay named the olive, To reigne amonge hem, Judicum⁴ dothe expresse,

But he hym dide excuse blyve,⁵
He myght not forsake his fatnesse,
Ner the figge tree his amorows swettnes,
Ner the vyne his holsom fressh tarage,⁶
Whiche yeveth comforte to al maner age.

And semlably 7 poetis laureate,
By dyrke parables ful convenient,
Feyne that birddis and bests of estate,
As royalle egles and lyons be assent,
Sent out writtes to olde 8 a parliament,
And made decres brefly for to saye,
Some for to have lordshippe and some for obeye.

Egles in the heyre highest to take hir flighte,

Power of lyouns on the grounde is sene,
Cedre among trees highest of sight,
And the laurealle of nature is ay grene;

Of flowres also Flora goddes and quene; Thus of al thing ther beene diversites, Some of estate and some of lowe degres.

Poetes writin wonderfulle liknesses, And under covert kepe hemself ful closse; They take bestis and fowles to witnesse, 31 Of whos feyninges fabilles first arosse. And here I cast unto my purpose,

¹ A favorite Old-French tale, perhaps of oriental origin. See J. O. Halliwell's remarks in his edition of Lydgate's Minor Poems, Percy So., vol. II, p. 179, whence our text.

2 fruitful in teaching. 3 chose. 4 Judges, ix. 5 at mce. 6 flavor. 7 similarly. 8 hold. 9 air.

Out of the Frenssh a tale to translate, Whiche in a paunflet I redde and saw but late.

This tale whiche I make of mencioun,
In gros reherseth playnly to declare,
Thre proverbis payed for raunsoun,
Of a faire birdde that was take out of a snare.

Wondir desirons to scape out of hir care, 40 Of my autour folwyng the processe, So as it fel, in order I shal expresse.

Whilom ther was in a smal village, As myn autor makethe rehersayle, A chorle ¹⁰ whiche hadde lust and a grete corage, ¹¹

Within hymself be diligent travayle
To array his gardeyn withe notable appar-

Of lengthe and brede yeliche 12 square and longe,

Hegged and dyked to make it sure and strong.

Alle the aleis were made playne with sond, The benches turned with newe turvis

Sote herbers, ¹³ withe condite ¹⁴ at the honde, That wellid up agayne the sonne shene, Lyke silver stremes as any cristale clene, The burbly wawes in up boyling, Rounde as byralle ther beamys outshynynge.

Amyddisthe gardeyn stode a fressh lawrer, 15 Theron a bird syngyng bothe day and nyghte,

With shynnyng fedres brightar than the golde weere, 16

Whiche with hir song made hevy hertes lighte, 60

That to beholde it was an hevenly sighte, How toward evyn and in the daw[e]nyng, She ded her payne most amourously to synge.

10 churl, boor. 11 inclination. 12 alike. 13 Sweet arbors. 14 fountain. 15 laurel. 16 wire.

Esperus enforced hir corage,¹
Toward evyn whan Phebus gan to west,
Amid² the braunches to hir avauntage
To syng hir complyn³ and than go to rest;
And at the rysing of the quene Alcest,⁴
To synge agayne, as was hir due,
Erly on morowe the day sterre to salue. 70

It was a verray hevenly melodye, Evyne and morowe to here the byrddis songe,

And the soote sugred armonye, Of uncouthe warblys and tunys drawen on longe.

That al the gardeyne of the noyse rong, Til on a morwe, whan Tytan shone ful clere, The birdd was trapped and kaute with a pantere.⁶

The chorle was gladde that he this birdde hadde take,

Mery of chere, of looke, and of visage; And in al haste he cast for to make, Within his house a pratie litelle cage, And with hir songe to rejoise his corage, Til at the last the sely birdde abrayed,⁷ And sobirly unto the chorle she sayde.

'I am now take and stand undir daunger, Belode straite that I may not fle.
Adieu, my songe and alle notes clere,
Now that I have lost my liberte;
Now am I thralle that somtyme was fre,
And trust while I stand in distresse,
I canne not synge ner make gladnesse.

And thowe my cage forged were with golde,

And the pynacles of birrale and cristale, I remembre a proverd said of olde, "Who lesethe his fredam, in faith! he loseth all;"

For I hadd levyr upon a braunche smale, Mekely to singe amonge the wodes grene, Than in a cage of silver brighte and shene.

Songe and prison have noon accordance; Trowest thou I wolle syng in prisoun? 100

 Hesperus prompted her.
 Halliwell reads And, but the emendation seems to be required by the sense.

a compline, last service of the day.

4 Alcestes is here a constellation of the dawn. In Chaucer's Legend of Good Women (Prol. A 507) she is the daisy (day's eye). Cf. Schick's note to 1. 70 of The Temple of Glas.

5 rare. 6 large bird-net. 7 started up. 8 control.

Song procedethe of joy and of pleasaunce, And prison causethe dethe and destruccioun:

Ryngyng of fetires makethe no mery sounde,

Or how shuld he be gladde or jocounde Agayne his wylle, that ligthe in chayner bounde?

What avaylethe it a lyon to be kyng
Of bestes, alle shette in a towre of stone?
Or an egle, undir strayte kepying,
Called also king of fowles everichone?
Fy on lordshippe whan liberte is gone!
Answere herto and lat it not asterte,
Who syngeth merily that syngeth not of herte?

'But if thou wilte rejoise of my syngyng, Lat me go flye free from al daunger; And every day in the mornyng, I shall repayre unto thi lawrer, And freshly syng withe lusty notes clere, Undir thy chambire or afore thyne halle, Every season whane thou list me calle.

'To be shett up and pynned undir drede, No thing accorde the unto my nature, Thouhe I were fedde with mylke and wastelbrede, 10

And soote cruddes ¹¹ browte unto my pasture, Yet had I lever to do my besy cure, Herly in the morowe to shrapyn ¹² in the vale.

To fynde my dyner amonge the wormes smale.

The laborare is gladdare at his ploughe, Herly on morne to fede hym withe bacon, Than som man is that hathe tresour i-noughe,

And of alle deyntes plente and foison, ¹³ 12 And no fredom with his possessioun To go at large, but as bere to stake ¹⁴ To passe his bound is but if he leve take.

'Take this aunswere for full conclusion —
To synge in prison thou shalt me not constrayne.

Till I have fredom in wodis up and downe, To flien at large on boughes rouhe ¹³ and playne;

⁹ escape, be avoided. 10 The finest sort of bread.
11 sweet curds. 12 scrape. 13 abundance.

¹¹ sweet curds. 12 scrape, 13 abundance. 14 a bear bound to a stake. 15 rough.

And of resoun thou shuldest not disdayne, Of my desire laugh and have game;¹ But who is a chorle wolde eche a ² man were the same.'

'Wele,' quod the chorle, 'syth it will not be That I desire as be thy talkyng, Magry thi will thou shalt chese on of thre: Withinne a cage merily to synge, Or to the kechen I shal thy body bringe, Pulle thi fedris that bene so bright and clere.

And aftir the rooste and baake to my dyner.'

'Than,' quod the birdde, 'to reson saye not nay,

Towching my songe a fulle aunswer thou haste:

And when my fedres pulled been away, 150 Yf I be rosted, outher bake in paste,
Thou shalt of me have a fulle smal repaste;
But yf thou wilt werke by my counseille,
Thou mayest by me have passing gret
availe.6

'Yf thou wil unto my rede assent,
And suffre me go frely fro prisoun,
Without raunsoun or ony other rent,
I shal the yeve a notable gret gwerdoun,
Thre grete wysdoms according to resoun,
More of valewe, take hede what I do
profre,

Thane all the golde that is shet in thi cofre.

'Trust me wele I shal the not disceyve.'
'Wele,' quod the chorle, 'telle oon, anone let se.'

'Nay,' quod the byrdde, 'thou must afore concevve,

Who that shal teche must of reason go free; It sittethe a maister to have his liberte, And at large to teche his lesson. Have me not suspecte, I mene no tresone.'

'Well,' quod the chorle, 'I holde me content.

I trust the promys which thou hast made to me.'

The birdde fley forthe, the chorle was of assent:

Nor laugh to scorn my desire.
 "That which I desire concerning."
 Maugre.
 Why "three"? Possibly "thre" should be "the," these. But we have three returns offered by the bird presently.

And toke hir flight upon the lawreer tre.

Than thought she thus, 'Now I stand fre,
With snares panters I cast 7 not al my
lyve,

Ner withe no lyme-twygges ony more to stryve.

'He is a fole that scaped is daunger,
And broken his fedres 8 and fled is fro
prisoun,

For to resorte,9 for brent childe dredethe

Eche a man beware of wisdom and resoun, Of sugre strowed that hydethe fals poyson; Ther is no venome so parlious in sharpnes.

As whan it hathe of treacle 10 a lyknes.

'Who dredeth no parelle, 11 in parelle he shal falle;

Smothe waters ben ofte sithes depe;
The quayle-pype can moste falsly calle,
Till the quayle undir the net doth crepe;
A blery-eed fowler trust not though he wepe;
Eschewe his thombe, of weping take noon
hede.

That smale birddes can nype be the hede.

'And now that I such daungers am escaped, I wil be ware and afore provide, 197 That of no fowler I wil no more be japed, 12 From their lyme-twygges I will flee fer asyde;

Where perell is, gret perelle is to abyde.—Come nere, thou chorle, take hede to my speeche,

Of thre wisdomes that I shal the teche.

'Yeve not of wisdom to hasty credence To every tale nor to eche tyding; But considre of resoun and prudence, Among many talis is many gret lesyng; 13 200 Hasty credence hathe caused gret hyndring; Reporte of talis, and tydinges broute up

Makethe many a man to beholde untrewe.

'For oon partie take this for thy raunsoun: Lerne the secund grownded in scripture, Desire thou nott be no condicioun Thing which is impossible to recure; ¹⁴ Wordly desires stand alle in adventure,

And who desire to clymbe highe on lofte, By soden torne felethe ofte his fal unsofte.

'The thirdde is this; beware bothe even and morowe,

For tresoure loste maketh never to gret sorowe.

Which in no wise may not recovered be; For who takthe sorowe for losse in that

Reknethe first his losse and aftir rekyn his peyne,

And of oon sorowe makethe he sorowes tweyne.'

Aftir this lessone the birdde begane a songe,
Of hir escape gretly rejoysing,
And she remembryng also the wronge
Don by the chorle first at hir takynge,
Of hir affray and hir enprisonyng;
Gladde that she was at large and out of drede,

Said unto hym, hovyng 2 above his hedde:

'Thou were,' quod she, 'a very naturall fole

To suffre me departe of thy lewdnesse; ³
Thou owghtest oft to complayue and make dole,

And in thyne herte to have gret hevynesse, That thou hast loste so passing gret richesse, Whiche myght suffice, by valewe in rekenyng,

To pay the raunsoum of a myghty kynge.

There is a stone whiche called is jagounce,4
Of olde engendered withinne myne entrayle,

Whiche of fyne golde peyssethe a gret

Cytryne 7 of colour, lyke garnettes of entayle,8

Which maketh men victorious in batayle, And so 9 ever bere on hym this stone Is fully assured agayne his mortal foone.

'Who hathe this stone in possession, Shal suffre no povert, ner no indigence, 240 But of al tresour have plente and foysoun, And every man shal do hym reverence; And no ennemy shal do hym offence. But from thyne handis now that I am gone,

Pleyne if thou wilt, for thi parte is none.

'It causeth love, it makethe men more gracious

And favorable in every mannys sighte; It makethe accorde betwee folke envyous, Comforteth sorowfull, and maketh heavy

I am now fre to syng, and to flye

Where that me lust, and he is a foole at alle, 22
That gothe at large and makethe himselff

'To here a wisdom thyn eres been half deef,

Lyke an asse that listithe on an harppe; Thou mayst go pype in an yve-leffe; Better is to me to synge on thornes sharppe, Than in a cage withe a chorle to carppe: ²⁸

This poem is an allegorical "love vision," a kind of writing brought anew into fashion by the French poets of the fourteenth century, and much used by Chaucer and others. Lydgate's poem is of course inspired by Chaucer's House of Fame.

Ther be kalendes of the nwe yere, And derk Diane, ihorned, nothing clere, Had hid hir benys undir a mysty cloude: Within my bed for sore § I gan me shroude, to Al desolate for constreint of my wo, The longe nyght waloing to and fro, Til atte last, er I gan taken kepe, Me did oppresse a sodein dedeli slepe, With-in the which methoughte that I was Ravysshid in spirit in a temple of glas—I nyste 10 how, ful fer in wildirnes—That foundid was, as bi liklynesse, Not opon stele, but on a craggy roche, Like ise ifrore. And whan that I hade long gone and sought, I fond a wiket, and entrid in as fast Into the temple, and myn eighen cast On evere side, now lowe and eft 16 aloft. And right anone, as I gan walken soft, If I the soth aright reporte shal, I saughe depeynt opon evere wal, From est to west, ful many a faire image Of sondri lovers, lich as thei were of age I-sette in ordre, aftir thei were trwe, With lifli colours wondir fressh of hwe. And first of al I saugh there of Cartage Dido the quene, so goodli of visage, That gan complein hir adventure and caas, How she deceyved was of Eneas, For al his hestis and his othis sworne, And said: 'alas, that ever she was borne,' 60 Whan that she saugh that ded she moste be. And next I saugh the compleint of Medee, Hou that she wes falsed of Iason.

And nygh bi Venus saugh I sit Addoun, And al the maner, how the bore him slough, For whom she wepte and hade pein inoughe.

There saugh I also, how Penalope,

For she so long hir lord ne myghte se,
Ful ofte wex of colour pale and grene.
And aldernext 1 was the fresshe quene, 70
I mene Alceste, the noble trwe wyfe,
And for Admete hou sho lost hir life,
And for hir trouth, if I shal not lie,

Hou she was turnyd to a daiesie.

There was also Grisildis innocence,
And al hir mekenes, and hir pacience.

There was eke Isande — and meni a nothir

And al the turment, and al the cruel wo,
That she hade for Tristram al hir live.
And hou that Tesbie her herte dide rife so
With thilke swerd of him Piramus;
And al the maner, hou that Theseus
The Minatawre slow amyd the hous
That was for-wrynkked 2 bi craft of Dedalus,
When that he was in prison shette in Crete.

And hou that Phillis felt of loves hete The grete fire of Demophon, alas, And for his falshed and for his trespas Upon the walles depeint men myghte se, How she was honged upon a filbert tre. 90

And mani a stori, mor then I rekin can, Were in the tempil, and how that Paris wan The faire Heleyne, the lusti fresshe quene, And hou Achilles was for Policene I-slain unwarli within Troie tonne: Al this sawe I, walkynge up and doun. Ther sawe I writen eke the hole tale, Hou Philomene into a nyghtyngale Iturned was, and Progne unto a swalow; And how the Sabyns in hir maner halowe too The fest of Lucresse yit in Rome toune.

There saugh I also the sorow of Palamoun,

That he in prison felt, and all the smert, And how that he, thurugh unto his hert, Was hurt unwarli thurugh casting of an eyghe Of faire fressh, the yunge Emelie,

'Allas that ever that it shulde fal, So soote sugre icoupled be with gal!' These yonge folk criden ofte sithe, And praied Venus hir pouer forto kithe Upon this myschef, and shape remedie. And right anon I herd other crie With sobbing teris, and with ful pitous soune,

Tofore the goddes, bi lamentacioun,
That were constrayned in hir tender youthe,
And in childhode, as it is ofte couthe,
Y-entred were into religioun,
Or thei hade yeris of discresioun,

That al her life cannot but complein, In wide copis perfeccion to feine, Ful covertli to curen al hir smert, And shew the contrarie outward of her hert. Thus saugh I wepen many a faire maide, That on hir freendis al the wite 7 thei leide. And other next I saugh there in gret rage, That thei were maried in her tendir age, 210 With-oute fredom of election, Wher love hath seld domynacioun: For love, at laarge and at liberte, Would freli chese, and not with such trete.8 And other saugh I ful oft were and wring, That they in men founde swych variynge, To love a seisoun, while that beaute floureth, And bi disdein so ungoodli loureth On hir that whilom he callid his ladi dere, That was to him so plesaunt and entere; 9 220 But lust with fairness is so overgone, That in her hert trouth abideth none. And som also I saugh in teris revne, And pitousli on God and kynde pleyne, That ever thei would on eny creature So much beaute, passing bi mesure, Set on a woman, to yeve occasioun A man to love to his confusioun. NEW TROY

(The Troy Book, 11. 479-768) 9

THE sorwe aswaged, and the syghes olde, By longe processe, liche as I yow tolde, This worthi kyng, callyd Priamus, Is in his herte nowe so desyrous, Up-on the pleyn, that was so waste and wylde,

So strong a toun of newe for to bilde, At his devyse a cite edefye, That schal th'assautys outterly defye

S After this the lady, and then the lover, make over-long supplications to Venus, who naturally counsels the lady to accept the devoted service of the knight. The poem ends at line 1403 with "May Lydgate's poem please his lady."

9 Lydgate's Troy Book is a version of the celebrated Historia Trojana of Guido delle Colonne; that is, it gives the account of Troy which passed current in the Middle Ages — the account received by Chaucer, for example, and the Gawain poet. In this strange and romantic tale the first Troy, Laomedon's, had been destroyed during Priam's absence by Hercules and Jason. It should be noted that London, fabled to have been founded by the Trojans, was sometimes called New Troy by the poets. Our extract gives an interesting mediæval conception of town-planning as it might have been practiced by Edward I and other great founders. Warton in his Edward I and other great founders. Warton in his History of English Poetry, London, 1840, vol. 11, $23, has a good description of the Troy Book. Our text that of Bergen in his edition for the Early English Text Soc., with a few unimportant modifications in typography.

Of alle enmyes, and his mortal foon, With riche tourys and wallys of hard stoon.

And al aboute the contres enviroun. He made seke in every regioun For swiche werkemen as were corious. Of wyt inventyf, of castyng 1 merveilous; Or swyche as coude crafte of gemetrye, Or wer sotyle in her fantasye; And for everyche that was good devysour. Mason, hewer, or crafty quareour; For every wright and passyng carpenter, That may be founde, owther fer or nere: 20 For swyche as koude grave, grope,2 or kerve.

Or swiche as werne able for to serve With lym or stoon, for to reise a wal, With bataillyng and crestis marcial; Or swiche as had konvng in her hed. Alabastre, owther white or redde, Or marbil grave for to pulsche 3 it pleyn, To make it smothe of veynes and of greyn. He sent also for every ymagour, Bothe in entaille,4 and every purtreyour 30 That coude drawe, or with colour peynt With hewes fresche, that the werke nat fevnt;5

And swiche as coude with countenaunces

Make an ymage that wil nevere fade: To counterfet in metal, tre, or stoon The sotil werke of Pigmaleoun, Or of Appollo, the whiche as bokis telle, In ymagerye alle other dide excelle: For by his crafty werkyng corious, The towmbe he made of kyng Daryus Whiche Alysaundre dide on heyghte reise, Only for men schuld his fame preise, In his conquest by Perce whan he went. And thus Priam for every maister sent, For eche kerver and passynge joignour, To make knottis with many corious flour, To sette on crestis with-inne and with-oute Up-on the wal the cite rounde aboute; Or who that wer excellyng in practik Of any art callyd mekanyk, Or hadde a name flouryng or famus, Was after sent to come to Priamus. For he purposeth, this noble worthi kyng, To make a cite most royal in byldyng, Brod, large, and wyde, and lest it were assailed.

For werre proudly abouten enbatailled.

And first the grounde he made to be sought, Ful depe and lowe, that it faille nought To make sure the foundacioun; In the place where the olde toun Was first ybilt, he the wallis sette; And he of lond many myle out mette,6 Aboute in compas, for to make it large, As the maysters that toke on hem the charge Devysed han the settyng and the syyt, For holsom evr to be more of delvt. And whan the soille, defouled with ruyne Of walles old, was made pleyn as lyne, The werkmen gan this cite for to founde. Ful myghtely with stonys square and rounde.

That in this world was to it noon lyche Of werkmanschip, nor of bildyng riche, Nor of crafte of coryous masounry. I can no termys to speke of gemetrye, Wherfore as now I muste hem sette a-syde; For douteles I radde never Euclide. That the maister and the foundour was Of alle that werkyn by squyre or compas, Or kepe her mesour by level or by lyne; I am to rude clerly to diffyne Or to discrive this werk in every parte, For lak of termys longyng to that arte. But I dar wel of trouthe affermyn here, In al this world ne was ther never pere Un-to this cite, and write it for a sothe, As in his boke my mayster Guydo doth. And that it myght in prosperite, In hyghe honour and felicite, From al assaut perpetuelly contune," It revsed was in worschip of Neptune, And namyd Troye, as it was to-forn, Lyche the firste that was thorugh Grekis

The lenthe was, schortly to conclude, Thre dayes journe, lyche the latitude, That never I herd make mencioun Of swiche another of fundacioun, So huge in compas nor of swiche larges, Nor to counte so passyng of fayrnes, So edyfied or lusty to the syght. And, as I rede, the walles wern on highte Two hundrid cubites, al of marbil gray, 101 Maskowed 8 with-oute for sautis 9 and assay; And it to make more pleasaunt of delyt, A-mong the marbil was alabaster white Meynt 10 in the walles, rounde the toun aboute.

1 "Two-Horn" and "Lean-Cow" are the English renderings of the mediæval French "Bigorne" (meaning uncertain) and Chicheface (lean-face). Chaucer in the Clerk's Tale, 1. 1131, warns wives not to be so pa-tient as Griselda "lest Chichevache them swelwe in his entraille." Our piece is said to have been written for "a peynted or desteyned clothe for an halle, a parlour, or a chaumbre"; v. Anglia xxu, 364. The text is J. O. Halliwell's in the Percy Society Edition of Lydgate's Minor Poems, London. 1840, p. 129.

Or Chichevache ne wil nat faile Yow for to swolow in his entraile.

Than shal ther be portrayed a long horned beste, sklendre and leene, with sharp tethe, and on his body nothyng sauf skyn and boon.

Chichevache this is my name,
Hungry, megre, sklendre, and leene,
To shewe my body I have gret shame;
For hunger I feele so grete teene,¹
On me no fatnesse wil be seene,
By cause that pasture I fynde none,
Therfor I am but skyn and boon.

For my fedying in existence
Is of wymmen that ben meke,
And liche Gresield in pacience,
Or more theyr bounte for to eeke;
But I ful longe may gon and seeke,
Or I can fynde a good repast
A morwe to breke with my fast.

I trowe ther be a deere yeere ²
Of pacient wymmen now these dayes;
Who grevithe hem withe word or chere,
Lete hym be ware of suche assayes,
For it is more than thritty Mayes,
That I have sought from lond to lond,
But yit oon Gresield never I fond.

I fonde but oon in al my lyve,
And she was ded ago ful yoore.
For more pasture I will nat stryve,
Nor seche for my foode no more,
Ne for vitaile me to restore;
Wymmen bien woxen so prudent,
They wil no more be pacient.

Than shal be portrayed after Chivache, an olde man withe a baston on his bake, manasynge the best for devouring of his wyfe.

My wife, allas! devoured is,
Most pacient and most pesible,
She never sayde to me amysse,
Whom hathe nowe slayn this best horrible,
And for it is an impossible,
To fynde ever suche a wyfe,
I wil live sowle duryng my lyfe.

For now of newe for theyr prow,³
The wyfes of ful highe prudence
Have of assent made ther avow,
For to exile forever pacience,
And cryed wolfes hede obedience,⁴

To make Chichevache faile Of hem to fynde more vitaile.

Now Chichevache may fast longe,
And dye for al hir crueltee,
Wymmen hav made hemself so stronge
For to outraye bumylite.
O cely husbondes, wo been yee!
Suche as can have no pacience
Ageyns yowre wyfes violence.

If that ye suffre, ye be but ded,
This Bycorne awaitethe yow so sore;
Eeke of yowre wyfes ye stand in drede,
Yif ye geyn-seyn hem any more;
And thus ye stonde and have don yore,
Of lyfe and dethe betwixt coveyne,

PHILIP SPARROW 1

Pla ce bo.2 Who is there, who? Di le xi,8 Dame Margery; Fa, re, my, my, Wherefore and why, why? For the soul of Philip Sparrow, That was late slain at Carow. Among the Nunes Black, For that sweet soul's sake, 10 And for all sparrows' souls, Set in our beadrolls, Pater noster qui, With an Ave Mari, And with the corner of a Creed, The more shall be your meed. Whan I remember again How my Philip was slain, Never half the pain Was between you twain, Piramus and Thisbe, As than befell to me: I wept and I wailed, The tears down hailed; But nothing it availed; To call Philip again, Whom Gib our cat hath slain. Gib, I say, our cat Worrowed 4 her on that Which I loved best: 30 It can not be expressed My sorrowful heaviness, But all without redress; For within that stound, Half slumbring, in a swound I fell down to the ground.

1 This sparkling piece is an elegy for the leath of Mistress Jane Scrope's pet sparrow. Such mock elegies, though shorter, had been in vogue since Catullus' lament for his Lesbia's sparrow (c. 60 B.C.), and very likely for longer; and such travesties of church rites were far from rare in the Middle Ages. The small nunnery of the Benedictines at Carow, near Norwich, was probably a sort of boarding-school where Jane and the other well-to-do young ladies of the neighbourhood were educated.

² So begins a verse in the Office for the Dead— Psalms exvi (Vulgate exiv), 9.

Psalms, cxyi, 1. Cf. last note. worried.

Unneth ⁶ I kest mine eyes
Toward the cloudy skies:
But whan I did behold
My sparrow dead and cold,
No creature but that wold
Have rewed ⁶ upon me,
To behold and see
What heaviness did me pang;
Wherewith my hands I wrang,
That my sinews cracked,
As though I had been racked,
So pained and so strained,
That no life wellnigh remained.
I sighed and I sobbed,
For that I was robbed

or that I was robbed,

For that I was robbed

Of my sparrow's life.

O maiden, widow, and wife,

Of what estate ye be,

Of high or low degree,

Great sorrow than ye might see

And learn to weep at 7 me!

Such pains did me freat,8

That mine heart did beat,

My visage pale and dead,

Wan, and blue as lead;

The pangs of hateful death

Wellnigh had stopped my breath.

50

Heu, heu, me, That I am woe for thee! Ad Dominum, cum tribularer, clamavi.9 Of God nothing else crave I But Philip's soule to keep From the marees 10 deep Of Acherontes well, That is a flood of Hell: And from the great Pluto, The prince of endless woe; And from foul Alecto. With visage black and blo; 11 And from Medusa, that mare, 12 That like a fiend doth stare: And from Megeras edders. 18 For ruffling of Philip's feathers, And from her fiery sparklings, From burning of his wings;

That lieth in chaines bound. With ghastly heades three, To Jupiter pray we That Philip preserved may be! Amen, say ye with me! Do mi nus. Help now, sweet Jesus! Levavi oculos meos in montes: 2 Wolde God I had Zenophontes,3 Or Socrates the wise. 100 To shew me their devise, Moderately to take This sorrow that I make For Philip Sparrow's sake! So fervently I shake, I feel my body quake; So urgently I am brought Into careful thought.4 Like Andromach, Hector's wife, Was weary of her life, 110 When she had lost her joy, Noble Hector of Troy: In like manner also Encreaseth my deadly woe, For my sparrow is go. It was so pretty a fool, It wold sit on a stool, And learned after my school For to keep his cut,5 With, Philip, keep your cut! 120 It had a velvet cap, And would sit upon my lap, And seek after small worms, And sometime white bread crumbs; And many times and oft Between my breastes soft It would lie and rest; It was proper and prest.6 Sometime he would gasp When he saw a wasp; 180 A fly or a gnat, He would fly at that; And prettily he would pant When he saw an ant;

Lord, how he would pry After the butterfly! Lord, how he would hop After the grasshop! And whan I said, Phip, Phip, Than he would leap and skip, And take me by the lip. Alas, it will me slo,7 That Philip is gone me fro! Sin in i qui ta tes Alas, I was evil at ease! De pro fun dis cla ma vi, When I saw my sparrow die! Now, after my dome,8 Dame Sulpicia,9 at Rome, Whose name registered was For ever in tables of brass, Because that she did pass In poesy to endite, And eloquently to write, Though she would pretend My sparrow to commend, I trow she could not amend Reporting the virtues all Of my sparrow royal. For it would come and go, And fly so to and fro; And on me it would leap When I was asleep, And his feathers shake, Wherewith he would make Me often for to wake, And for to take him in Upon my naked skin; God wot, we thought no sin: What though he crept so low? It was not hurt, I trow; He did nothing perdie But sit upon my knee, Philip, though he were nice, In him it was no vice; Philip had leave to go To pick my little toe; Philip might be bold And do what he wold; Philip would seek and take All the fleas black 180 That he could there espy With his wanton eye. O pe ra, La, soll, fa, fa, Confitebor tibi, Domine, in toto corde meo. Alas, I would ride and go

A thousand mile of ground! If any such might be found, It were worth an hundred pound Of king Cresus' gold, 100 Or of Attalus the old, The rich prince of Pargamee,1 Who so list the story to see. Cadmus, that his sister 2 sought, And he should be bought For gold and fee, He should over the sea, To wete 3 if he could bring Any of the offspring, Or any of the blood.4 200 But whose understood Of Medea's art, I would I had a part Of her crafty magic! My sparrow then should be quick With a charm or twain, And play with me again. But all this is in vain Thus for to complain. I took my sampler once, 910 Of purpose, for the nonce, To sew with stitches of silk My sparrow white as milk, That by representation Of his image and fashion, To me it might import Some pleasure and comfort For my solace and sport: But when I was sewing his beak, Methought my sparrow did speak, 220 And opened his pretty bill, Saying, 'Maid, ye are in will 5 Again me for to kill, Ye prick me in the head!' With that my needle waxed red, Methought, of Philip's blood; Mine hair right upstood, And was in such affray,6 My speech was taken away. I cast down that there was. 230 And said, 'Alas, alas, How cometh this to pass?' My fingers, dead and cold, Could not my sampler hold; My needle and thread I threw away for dread.

The best now that I may, Is for his soul to pray: A porta inferi, Good Lord, have mercy Upon my sparrow's soul, Written in my beadroll! Au di vi vo cem, Japhet, Cam, and Sem,7 Ma gni fi cat, Shew me the right path To the hills of Armony,8 Wherefore the birds yet cry 9 Of your father's boat, That was sometime afloat, 250 And now they lie and rot. Let some poets write Deucalion's flood it hight; But as verily as ye be The natural sones three Of Noe the patriarch, That made that great ark, Wherein he had apes and owls. Beasts, birds, and fowls, That if ye can find Any of my sparrow's kind, God send the soul good rest! I would have yet a nest As pretty and as prest 10 As my sparrow was. But my sparrow did pass All the sparrows of the wood That were since Noe's flood, Was never none so good: King Philip of Macedon. Had no such Philip as I, No, no, sir, hardely.11 That vengeance I ask and cry, By way of exclamation, On all the whole nation Of cats wild and tame: God send them sorrow and shame! That cat specially That slew so cruelly My little pretty sparrow That I brought up at Carow. O cat of carlish 12 kind. The manticors 2 of the mountains Might feed them on thy brains! Melanchates,8 that hound That plucked Acteon to the ground, Gave him his mortal wound. Changed to a deer. The story doth appear, 300 Was changed to an hart: So thou, foul cat that thou art The self same hound Might thee confound, That his own lord bote,4 Might bite asunder thy throat! Of Inde the greedy gripes 5 Might tear out all thy tripes! Of Arcady the bears Might pluck away thine ears! 310 The wild wolf Lycaon 6 Bite asunder thy backbone! Of Etna the brenning hill, That day and night brenneth still Set in thy tail a blaze, That all the world may gaze And wonder upon thee, From Ocean the great sea Unto the Isles of Orcady, From Tilbury Ferry 320 To the plain of Salisbury! So traitorously my bird to kill That never ought 7 thee evil will! Was never bird in cage More gentle of courage In doing his homage Unto his sovereign. Alas, I say again, Death hath departed us twain! The false cat bath thee slain: 330 Farewell, Philip, adieu! Our Lord thy soul rescue! Farewell without restore, Farewell for evermore! And it were a Jew, It would make one rue, To see my sorrow new.

¹ Libya. ² An extraordinary fabulous beast. ³ So the foremost hound is named in Ovid's Metanorphoses, III, 232. These villanous false cats Were made for mice and rats. And not for birdes small. Alas, my face waxeth pale, Telling this piteous tale, How my bird so fair, That was wont to repair. And go in at my spare,8 And creep in at my gore 9 Of my gown before, Flickering with his wings. Alas, my heart it stings, Remembring pretty things! 350 Alas, mine heart it slayth, My Philip's doleful death, When I remember it. How prettily it would sit, Many times and oft Upon my finger aloft! I played with him tittle tattle, And fed him with my spattle, 10 With his bill betweene my lips; It was my pretty Phipps! 360 Many a pretty kuss 11 Had I of his sweet muss; 12 And now the cause is thus, That he is slain me fro, To my great pain and woe, Of fortune this the chance

Standeth on variance:
Oft time after pleasance
Trouble and grievance;
No man can be sure
Alway to have pleasure:
As well perceive ye may
How my disport and play
From me was taken away
By Gib, our cat savage,
That in a furious rage
Caught Philip by the head,
And slew him there stark dead.

From one to the other; His master's love to further, Sometime a precious thing, An ouche,1 or else a ring; From her to him again Sometime a pretty chain, Or a bracelet of her hair, Prayed Troilus for to wear 690 That token for her sake; How heartily he did it take, And much thereof did make. And all that was in vain. For she did but feign: The story telleth plain, He could not obtain, Though his father were a king. Yet there was a thing That made the male to wring; 2 700 She made him to sing The song of lovers' lay; 8 Musing night and day, Mourning all alone, Comfort he had none, For she was quite gone: Thus in conclusion, She brought him in abusion; In earnest and in game She was much to blame: 710 Disparaged is her fame. And blemished is her name, In manner half with shame: Troilus also hath lost On her much love and cost, And now must kiss the post; 4 Pandare, that went between, Hath won nothing, I ween, But light for summer green; 5 Yet for a special laud 720 He is named Troilus' bawd, Of that name he is sure Whiles the world shall dure: Though I remember the fable Of Penelope most stable To her husband most true Yet long time she ne knew Whether he were on live 6 or dead: Her wit stood her in stead,

Of Marcus Marcellus 8 A process9 I could tell us: And of Antiochus; 10 And of Josephus De Antiquitatibus: 11 And of Mardocheus, 12 And of great Assuerus, 740 And of Vesca his queen, Whom he forsook with teen,18 And of Hester his other wife. And of no value told; His matter is worth gold, And worthy to be enrolled. In Chaucer I am sped, His tales I have read: His matter is delectable, 790 Solacious,2 and commendable; His English well allowed,8 So as it is enprowed,4 For as it is employed, There is no English void,5 At those days much commended; And now men would have amended His English, whereat they bark, And mar all they wark: Chaucer, that famous clerk, 800 His terms were not dark, But pleasant, easy, and plain; No word he wrote in vain. Also John Lydgate Writeth after an higher rate; 6 It is diffuse 7 to find The sentence 8 of his mind, Yet writeth he in his kind. No man that can amend Those matters that he hath penned; 810 Yet some men find a fault, And say he writeth too haut.9 Wherefore hold me excused If I have not well perused Mine English half abused; Though it be refused, In worth 10 I shall it take, And fewer wordes make. THE TUNNING OF ELEANOR RUMMING 18

TELL you I chill,14 If that ye will A while be still, Of a comely gill,15 That dwelt on a hill: But she is not grill,16 For she is somewhat sage And well worn in age; For her visage It would assuage A man's courage. Her loathly lere 17 Is nothing clear, But ugly of cheer, Droopy and drowsy, Seurvy and lousy; Her face all bousy,18 Comely crinkled, Wondrously wrinkled, Like a roast pig's ear, Bristled with hair.

12 The Commendations and the Addition, about 500 lines in all, now follow; but they mar the poem.

13 Tunning is brewing. For entertaining gossip con-cerning Eleanor see Dyce's notes. Such pictures of tav-ern-haunting women are common in the Middle Ages: ern-haunting women are common in the most eages; the most powerfully drawn are Watriquet de Couvin's Trois Dames de Paris (c. 1820) in Montaiglon and Raymad's Pablicaux, III, 145; and Langkand's Piers Plovman, A text, V, 146 f; the pleasantest is Dunbar's Ballad of Kind Kittok.

Her even goundy 2 Are full unsoundy, For they are bleared; And she gray haired; Jawed like a jetty; 8 A man would have pity To see how she is gummed, 40 Fingered and thumbed, Gently jointed, Greased and anointed Up to the knuckles: The bones of her huckles 4 Like as they were with buckles Together made fast: Her youth is far past: Footed like a plane,⁵ Legged like a crane: 50 And yet she will jet,6 Like a jolly fet,7 In her furred flocket,8 And gray russet rocket,9 With simper the cocket. 10 Her huke 11 of Lincoln green, It had been hers, I ween, More than fourty year; And so doth it appear, For the green bare threads 60 Look like sere weeds, Withered like hav, The wool worn away; And yet I dare say She thinketh herself gay Upon the holy day, Whan she doth her array, And girdeth in her gytes 12 Stitched and pranked with pleats; Her kirtle Bristow red. With cloths upon her head That weigh a sow 13 of lead, Writhen 14 in wonder wise. After the Saracens' guise, With a whim wham, Knit with a trim tram,

Primus passus

And this comely dame. I understand, her name Is Eleanor Rumming, At home in her wonning; 17 And as men say She dwelt in Sothray, 18 In a certain stead Beside Leatherhead. She is a tonnish gib; 19 The devil and she be sib. 100 But to make up my tale, She breweth noppy 20 ale, And maketh therof port sale 21 To travellers, to tinkers, To sweaters, to swinkers,22 And all good ale drinkers, That will nothing spare, But drink till they stare And bring themself bare, With, Now away the mare, IIO And let us slay care, As wise as an hare! Come who so will To Eleanor on the hill, With, Fill the cup, fill, And sit there by still, Early and late! Thither cometh Kate. Tertius passus

Instead of coin and money,
Some bring her a cony,
And some a pot with honey,
Some a salt, and some a spoon,
Some their hose, some their shoon;
Some ran a good trot

Some fill their pot full

Such a web can spin,
Her thrift is full thin.

Some go straight thider,
Be it slaty or slider; ⁴
They hold the high way,
They care not what men say,
Be that as be may;
Some, loath to be espied,
Start in at the back side,
Over the hedge and pale,
And all for the good ale.

Some run till they sweat, Bring with them malt or wheat, And dame Eleanor entreat To birl ⁶ them of the best.

Than cometh another guest;
She sweareth by the rood of rest,
Her lips are so dry,
Without drink she must die;
Therefore fill it by and by,⁶
And have here a peck of rye.

Anon cometh another,
As dry as the other,
And with her doth bring
Meal, salt, or other thing,
Her harvest girdle, her wedding ring,
To pay for her scot
As cometh to her lot.

Quintus passus

But of all this throng

COLIN CLOUT 5

WHAT can it avail To drive forth a snail, Or to make a sail Of an herring's tail? To rime or to rail, To write or to indite, Either for delight Or else for despite? Or books to compile Of divers manner style, TO Vice to revile And sin to exile? To teach or to preach, As reason will reach? Say this, and say that, His head is so fat, He wotteth never what Nor wherof he speaketh; He crieth and he creaketh, He pryeth and he peeketh, 20 He chides and he chatters, He prates and he patters, He clitters and he clatters. He meddles and he smatters. He gloses and he flatters; Or if he speak plain, Than he lacketh brain,

5 In this worthiest of Skelton's satires Colin Clout is the vagabond spokesman of the oppressed folk against the upstart, worldly bishops and prelates; the dissolute, irresponsible, cheating nuns, monks, and friars; and even against the indifferent, slack people and nobles themselves.

He is but a fool: Let him go to school, On a three-footed stool 30 That he may down sit, For he lacketh wit; And if that he hit The nail on the head, It standeth in no stead; The devil, they say, is dead, The devil is dead. It may well so be, Or else they would see Otherwise, and flee From worldly vanity, And foul covetousness. And other wretchedness. Fickle falseness, Variableness. With unstableness. And if ve stand in doubt Who brought this rime about, My name is Colin Clout. I purpose to shake out 50 All my cunning bag,6 Like a clerkly hag; For though my rime be ragged, Tattered and jagged, Rudely rain-beaten, Rusty and moth-eaten, If ye take well therewith, It hath in it some pith. For, as far as I can see, It is wrong with each degree: For the temporalty Accuseth the spiritualty; The spiritual again Doth grudge and complain Upon the temporal men: Thus each of other blother? The t'one again the t'other: Alas, they make me shudder! For in hoder moder 8 The Church is put in faut; 9 The prelates ben so haut,10 They say, and look so high, As though they would fly Above the starry sky. Laymen say indeed How they take no heed Their silly 11 sheep to feed, But pluck away and pull The fleeces of their wool, Unethes 12 they leave a lock

With money, if it will hap, To eatch the forked cap: Forsooth they are too lewd 90 To say so, all beshrew'd! What trow ye they say more Of the bishop's lore? How in matters they be raw; They lumber forth the law, To hearken Jack and Gill, Whan they put up a bill, And judge it as they will, For other men's skill, Expounding out their clauses, 100 And leave their own causes: In their provincial cure, They make but little sure, And meddle 4 very light In the Churches right, But ire and venire, And solfa so alamire,6 That the praemunire 7 Is like to be set afire In their jurisdictions 110 Through temporal afflictions: 8 Men say they have prescriptions Against spiritual contradictions, Accompting them as fictions. And whiles the heads do this. The remnant is amiss Of the clergy all, Both great and small. I wot never how they wark. But thus the people bark; 130 And surely thus they say, Bishops, if they may,

How evil their sheep fare. The temporality say plain, How bishops disdain Sermons for to make. Of such labour to take: And for to say truth, A great part is for slouth,9 But the greatest part Is for they have but small art And right slender cunning Within their heads wonning.10 But this reason they take How they are able to make With their gold and treasure Clerks out of measure, And yet that is a pleasure. How be it some there be, Almost two or three, Of that dignity, Full worshipful clerks, . As appeareth by their werks, Like Aaron and Ure.11 The wolf from the door To werrin 12 and to keep From their ghostly sheep, And their spiritual lambs Sequestered from rams And from the bearded goats With their hairy coats; Set nought by gold ne groats,

But they are loath to mell, 18 And loath to hang the bell About the cat's neck, For dread to have a check: They are fain to play deuz deck,14 They are made for the beck.16 How be it they are good men, Much hearted like an hen: Their lessons forgotten they have That Becket them gave: Thomas manum mittit ad fortia, Spernit damna, spernit opprobria, Nulla Thomam frangit injuria. 16 But now every spiritual father,

Spend much of their share Than to be cumb'red with care: Spend! nay, nay, but spare; For let see who that dare 180 Shoe the mockish mare; They make her wince and kick, But it is not worth a leek: Boldness is to seek The Church for to defend. Take me as I intend, For loath I am to offend In this that I have penned: I tell you as men say; Amend whan ye may, 190 For, usque ad montem Sare, Men say ye can not appare; 1 For some say ye hunt in parks, And hawk on hobby larks,2 And other wanton warks. Whan the night darks. What hath lay men to do The gray goose for to shoe? Like hounds of hell, They cry and they yell, 200 How that ye sell The grace of the Holy Ghost: Thus they make their boast Throughout every coast, How some of you do eat In Lenten season flesh meat, Pheasants, partridge, and cranes; Men call you therefor profanes; Ye pick no shrimps nor pranes,3 Saltfish, stockfish, nor herring, 210 It is not for your wearing; Nor in holy Lenten season Ye will neither beans ne peasen,4 But ye look to be let loose To a pig or to a goose, Your gorge not endewed 5 Without a capon stewed.

Thus I, Colin Clout,
As I go about,
And wandering as I walk,
I hear the people talk.

Men say, for silver and gold
Mitres are bought and sold;

And through all the world they go With Dirige and Placebo.¹

But now my mind ye understand. For they must take in hand 890 To preach, and to withstand All manner of objections: For bishops have protections, They say, to do corrections, But they have no affections To take the said directions; In such manner of cases. Men say, they bear no faces To occupy such places, To sow the seed of graces: 900 Their hearts are so fainted.2 And they be so attainted With covetise 3 and ambition, And other superstition, That they be deaf and dumb, And play silence and glum, Can say nothing but mum.

They occupy them so With singing Placebo,⁴

The lay men call them barrels
Full of gluttony

In matters that them like
They shew them politie,
Pretending gravity

With all solemnity,
For their indemnity;
For they will have no loss
Of a penny nor of a cross
Of their predial 6 lands,

Of their predial a lands,
That cometh to their hands,

Of them that do amiss

In speaking and rebelling, In hindering and disavailing 1 Holy Church, our mother, One against another: To use such despiting Is all my whole writing; IIIO To hinder no man. As near as I can, For no man have I named: Wherefore should I be blamed? Ye ought to be ashamed, Against me to be gramed,2 And can tell no cause why, But that I write truly. Then if any there be Of high or low degree 1120 Of the spiritualty, Or of the temporalty That doth think or ween That his conscience be not clean, And feeleth himself sick, Or touched on the quick, Such grace God them send Themself to amend, For I will not pretend Any man to offend. 1130 Wherefore, as thinketh me, Great idiots they be, And little grace they have, This treatise to deprave; 8 Nor will hear no preaching, Nor no virtuous teaching, Nor will have no reciting Of any virtuous writing; Will know none intelligence To reform their negligence, 1140 But live still out of fashion, To their own damnation. To do shame they have no shame, But they would no man should them blame: They have an evil name, But yet they will occupy the same. · With them the word of God Is counted for no rod:4 They count it for a railing, That nothing is availing; 1150 The preachers with evil hailing: 'Shall they daunt us prelates, That be their primates? GARLAND OF LAUREL®

To Mistress Isabell Pennell (l. 973)

By Saint Mary, my lady,

Your mammy and your daddy Brought forth a goodly baby! My maiden Isabell, Reflaring 9 rosabell, The flagrant 10 camomel: The ruddy rosary, 11 The sovereign rosemary. The pretty strawberry; The columbine, the nepte.12 The jeloffer 18 well set. The proper 14 violet; Enuwid 15 your colour Is like the daisy flower After the April shower; Star of the morrow grav. She me recommaunded, with all pleasuance, To daunce true measures without varyaunce. O Lorde God! how glad than was I, So for to daunce with my swete lady.

By her propre hande, soft as any sylke, With due obeysaunce I dyd her then take; Her skynne was white as whales bone 4 or mylke.

My thought was ravysshed, I might not aslake 5

My brennynge hert, she the fyre dyd make; These daunces truely musyke hath me tought To lute or daunce, but it avayleth nought:

For the fyre kyndled and waxed more and more,

The dauncynge blewe it; wyth her beaute clere

My hert sekened and began to waxe sore; A mynute vi. houres, and vi. houres a yere, I thought it was, so hevy was my chere; But yet for cover my great love aryght, 20 The outwarde countenaunce I made glad and light.

And for fere myne eyes should my hert bewray,

I toke my leve and to a temple wente, And all alone I to my selfe dyd saye: Alas! what fortune hath me hyther sente, To devoyde ⁶ my joye and my hert torment; No man can tell howe great payne it is, But yf he wyll fele it, as I do ywys.

(From Cap. xviii. Of the dolorous and lowly disputacion betwene La Bel Pucell and Graundamoure.)

Than forth so went Good Counsell and I, At vi. a clocke, unto a garden fayre; By Musykes toure walked most goodly, Where La Bell Pucell used to repayre In the swete mornyng for to take the ayre Among the floures of aromatyke fume, The mysty ayre to exyle and consume.

And at the gate we met the portresse, That was right gentill, and called Curteysy.

Whych salued 1 us wyth wordes of mekenesse.

And axed us the veraye cause and why Of our comynge to the gardeine sothely? Truly, saide we, for nothyng but well, A lytel to speke with La Bell Pucell.

Truly, quod she, in the garden grene Of many a swete and sundry floure She maketh a garlonde that is veray shene; ² Wyth true-loves ⁸ wrought in many a coloure.

Replete with swetenes and dulcet odoure; And all alone, wythout company, 20 Amyddes an herber 4 she sitteth plesauntly.

Nowe stande you styl for a lytle space, I wyll let her of you have knowledgynge. And ryght anone she went to her grace, Tellyng her than how we were comynge, To speke wyth her gretly desyrynge. Truly, she sayd, I am right well content Of theyr comyng to know the hole entent.

Then good Curteysy, wythout taryenge, Came unto us wyth all her diligence, Prayeng us to take our entryng And come unto the ladies precence, To tell our erande to her excellence. Than in we wente to the garden gloryous, Lyke to a place of pleasure most solacyous.

Wyth Flora paynted and wrought curyously,

In divers knottes of marvaylous gretenes; Rampande lyons stode up wondersly, Made all of herbes with dulcet swetenes, 39 Wyth many dragons of marvaylos likenes, Of dyvers floures made ful craftely, By Flora couloured wyth colours sundry.

There was an herber fayre and quadrante,⁵
To paradyse right well comparable,
Set all about with flours fragraunt;
And in the myddle there was resplendyshaunte

A dulcet spring and a marvaylous fountaine,

Of golde and asure made all certaine.

Spouted the water that was so dulcette.

Besyde whiche fountayne, the moost fayre lady
La Bel Pucel was galy syttyng;
Of many floures fayre and ryally
A goodly chaplet she was in makynge.
Her heer was downe so clerely shynynge,
Lyke to the golde late purifyed with fyre,
Her heer was bryght as the drawne wyre.

Lyke to a lady for to be moost trewe, She ware a fayre and goodly garment, Of most fyne velvet, al of Indy blewe, Wytharmynes powdred bordred at the vent.⁶ On her fayre handes, as was convenient, A payre of gloves ryght sclender and softe. In approchyng nere I did beholde her oft.⁷⁰

Wyth your swete eyes beholde you and se, How thought and wo, by great extremyte, Hath chaunged my hue into pale and wanne: It was not so whan I to love began.

Pucell

So, me thynke, it doth right well appere By your coloure that love hath done you

Your hevy countenaunce and your dolefull chere;

Hath love suche myght for to aray you so In so short a space? I marvayle moche also

That ye wolde love me so sure in certayne, Before ye knewe that I wolde love agayne?

Amoure

My good dere herte! it is no mervayle why; Your beaute cleare and lovely lokes swete My herte dyde perce with love so sodaynly At the fyrste tyme that I dyde you mete; In the olde temple whan I dyde you grete, Your beaute my herte so surely assayde, 139 That syth that tyme it hath to you obayde.

(From Cap. xix. How La Bell Pucell Graunted Graund Amoure Love, and of her Dispiteous Departage.1)

But I my mynde yet durst nothynge discure,3

How for your sake I dyd suche we endure, Tyll now this houre with dredfull hert so

To you, swete herte, I have made my complaynt.

Pucell

I demed ofte you loved me before, By your demenour I dyde it aspye, And in my mynde I juged evermore

1 merciless departure, 2 quite fixed, 3 disclose,

That at the laste ye wolde full secretly Tell me your mynde of love right gentilly:

As ye have done, so my mercy to crave, 20 In all worshyppe you shal my true love have.

Amoure

O Lorde God! than how joyfull was I!
She loked on me wyth lovely contenaunce;
I kyst her ones or twise right swetely;
Her depured 1 vysage, replete with pleasaunce,

Rejoyced my heart with amerous purveaunce.

O lady clere! that perste? me at the rote,

O floure of comforte, all my hele and bote!

O gemme of vertue, and lady excellent!

Above all other in beauteous goodlynesse!
O eyen bright as sterre refulgent,
O profounde cause of all my sekenesse,
Now all my jove and all my gladnes,
Wolde God that we were joyned in one,
In maryage, before this day were gone.

Pucell

A, al sayd she, ye must take a payne a whyle;

I must depart, by the compulcyon Of my frendes, I wyl not you begyle, Though they me led to a ferre a nacion, My heart shall be without variacion Wyth you present, in perfite sykernes, As true and stable without doublenes.

LADY ISABEL AND THE ELF-KNIGHT

1 FAIR lady Isabel sits in her bower sewing,

Aye as the gowans 1 grow gay; There she heard an elf-knight blawing his horn.

The first morning in May.

- 2 'If I had you horn that I hear blawing, And you elf-knight to sleep in my bosom.'
- 3 This maiden had scarcely these words spoken, Till in at her window the elf-knight has luppen.2

4 'It's a very strange matter, fair maiden,' said be,

'I canna blaw my horn but ye call on me.

- 5 'But will ye go to yon greenwood side? If ye canna gang, I will cause you to ride.'
- 6 He leapt on a horse, and she on another, And they rode on to the greenwood together.
- 7 'Light down, light down, lady Isabel,' said he,
 - 'We are come to the place where ye are to die.'
- 8 'Hae mercy, hae mercy, kind sir, on me, Till ance my dear father and mother I see.'
- 9 'Seven king's-daughters here hae I slain, And ye shall be the eight o them.' 20
- 10 'O sit down a while, lay your head on my knee,

That we may hae some rest before that I die.'

 - Wi a sma charm she lulld him fast asleep.
- 12 Wi his ain sword-belt sae fast as she ban 4 him,
 - Wi his ain dag-durk sae sair as she dang him.
- 13 'If seven king's-daughters here ye hae slain,
 Lye ye here, a husband to them a'.'

THE DOUGLAS TRAGEDY'

- 1 'RISE up, rise up, now, Lord Douglas,' she says,
 - 'And put on your armour so bright, Let it never be said that a daughter of thine

Was married to a lord under night.

2 'Rise up, rise up, my seven bold sons, And put on your armour so bright, And take better care of your youngest sister,

For your eldest's awa the last night.'

3 He's mounted her on a milk-white steed, And himself on a dapple grey,

With a bugelet horn hung down by his side,

And lightly they rode away.

4 Lord William lookit oer his left shoulder, To see what he could see,

And there he spy'd her seven brethren bold,

Come riding over the lee.

- 5 'Light down, light down, Lady Margret,' he said,
 - 'And hold my steed in your hand,
 - 4 bound. 5 dagger. 6 stabled.
 7 Also called Earl Brand.

Until that against your seven brethren

And your father I mak a stand.'

6 She held his steed in her milk-white hand.

And never shed one tear,

Until that she saw her seven brethren

And her father hard fighting, who lovd her so dear.

7 'O hold your hand, Lord William!' she said,

> 'For your strokes they are wondrous sair:

True lovers I can get many a ane, But a father I can never get mair.'

8 O she's taen out her handkerchief, It was o the holland sae fine, And aye she dighted her father's bloody wounds.

That were redder than the wine.

9 'O chuse, O chuse, Lady Margret,' he said.

'O whether will ye gang or bide?' 'I'll gang, I'll gang, Lord William,'

she said, 'For ye have left me no other guide.'

10 He's lifted her on a milk-white steed, And himself on a dapple grey, With a bugelet horn hung down by his

- 12 They lighted down to tak a drink Of the spring than ran sae clear, And down the stream ran his gude heart's blood, And sair she gan to fear.

13 'Hold up, hold up, Lord William,' she says,

'For I fear that you are slain;' "T is naething but the shadow of my scarlet cloak,

That shines in the water sae plain.'

14 O they rade on, and on they rade, And a' by the light of the moon, Until they cam to his mother's ha door. And there they lighted down.

15 'Get up, get up, lady mother,' he says, 'Get up, and let me in!

Get up, get up, lady mother,' he says, 'For this night my fair lady I've 16 'O mak my bed, lady mother,' he says, 'O mak it braid and deep,

And lay lady Margret close at my back.

And the sounder I will sleep.'

17 Lord William was dead lang ere midnight. Lady Margret lang ere day,

And all true lovers that go thegither, May they have mair luck than they!

18 Lord William was buried in St. Mary's kirk,

Lady Margret in Mary's quire; Out o the lady's grave grew a bonny red rose,

And out o the knight's a brier.

- 19 And they twa met, and they twa plat,1 And fain they wad be near; And a' the warld might ken right weel They were twa lovers dear.
- 20 But bye and rade the Black Douglas, And wow but he was rough! For he pulld up the bonny brier, And flang 't in St. Mary's Loch.

- 9 He 's got consent frae her parents dear, And likewise frae her sisters fair. 20
- 10 He's got consent frae her kin each one, But forgot to spiek to her brother John.
- 11 Now, when the wedding day was come, The knight would take his bonny bride home.
- 12 And many a lord and many a knight Came to behold that ladie bright.
- 13 And there was nae man that did her see But wishd himself bridegroom to be.
- 14 Her father dear led her down the stair, And her sisters twain they kissd her there.
- 15 Her mother dear led her thro the closs, And her brother John set her on her horse.
- 16 She leand her oer the saddle-bow, To give him a kiss ere she did go.
- 17 He has taen a knife, baith lang and sharp,
 And stabbd that bonny bride to the heart.
- 18 She hadno ridden half thro the town, Until her heart's blude staind her gown.
- 19 'Ride softly on,' says the best young
 - 'For I think our bonny bride looks pale and wan.'
- 20 'O lead me gently up yon hill, And I'll there sit down, and make my will.'
- 21 'O what will you leave to your father dear?'
 - 'The silver-shode steed that brought me here.'

THE THREE RAVENS

- 1 THERE were three ravens sat on a tree, Downe a downe, hav down, hav downe There were three ravens sat on a tree. With a downe There were three ravens sat on a tree,
 - They were as blacke as they might be. With a downe derrie, derrie, derrie, downe, downe.
- 2 The one of them said to his mate, 'Where shall we our breakefast take?'
- 3 'Downe in yonder greene field, There lies a knight slain under his shield.
- 4 'His hounds they lie downe at his feete, So well they can their master keepe.
- 5 'His haukes they flie so eagerly, There's no fowle dare him come nie.'
- 6 Downe there comes a fallow doe, As great with yong as she might goe.
- 7 She lift up his bloudy hed, And kist his wounds that were so red.
- 8 She got him up vpon her backe, 20 And carried him to earthen lake.
- 9 She buried him before the prime, She was dead herselfe ere even-song time.

THE TWA CORBIES

- 1 As I was walking all alane, I heard twa corbies making a mane 7: The tane unto the t'other say. 'Where sall we gang and dine to-day?'
- 2 'In behint you auld fail 8 dyke, I wot there lies a new slain knight; And naebody kens that he lies there, But his hawk, his hound, and lady fair.
- 3 'His hound is to the hunting gane, His hawk to fetch the wild-fowl hame, 10 His lady's ta'en another mate, So we may mak our dinner sweet.
- 4 'Ye'll sit on his white hause-bane,9 And I'll pike out his bonny blue een; Wi ae lock o his gowden hair We'll theek 10 our nest when it grows bare.
- 5 'Mony a one for him makes mane, But nane sall ken where he is gane; Oer his white banes, when they are bare, The wind sall blaw for evermair.'

KING HENRY 11

- 1 LAT never a man a wooing wend That lacketh thingis three: A routh 12 o gold, an open heart, Ay fu o charity.
- 2 As this I speak of King Henry, For he lay burd-alone; 18 An he's doen him to a jelly hunt's ha,14 Was seven miles frae a town.
- 3 He chas'd the deer now him before, An the roe down by the den, 10 Till the fattest buck in a' the flock King Henry he has slain.
- 4 O he has doen him to his ha. To make him beerly 15 cheer; An in it came a griesly ghost, Steed stappin i the fleer. 16

 And borrow '1 you with kisses three,
 Let all the warld do what they will,
 Oh borrowed shall you never be!'
- 4 Her breath grew strang, her hair grew lang,
 And twisted thrice about the tree,
 And all the people, far and near,
 Thought that a savage beast was she.
- 5 These news did come to Kemp Owyne, Where he lived, far beyond the sea; He hasted him to Craigy's sea, And on the savage beast lookd he.
- 6 Her breath was strang, her hair was lang,
 And twisted was about the tree,
 And with a swing she came about:
 'Come to Craigy's sea, and kiss with
 me.
- 7 'Here is a royal belt,' she cried,
 'That I have found in the green sea;
 And while your body it is on,
 Drawn shall your blood never be; 30
 But if you touch me, tail or fin,
 I vow my belt your death shall be.'
- 8 He stepped in, gave her a kiss,

 The royal belt he brought him wi;

 Her breath was strang, her hair was lang,

 And twisted twice about the tree,

 And with a swing she came about:

 'Come to Craigy's sea, and kiss with me.
- 9 'Here is a royal ring,' she said,
 'That I have found in the green sea;
 And while your finger it is on,
 Drawn shall your blood never be;
 But if you touch me, tail or fin,
 I swear my ring your death shall be.'
- 10 He stepped in, gave her a kiss,

 The royal ring he brought him wi;

 Her breath was strang, her hair was lang,
 And twisted ance about the tree,
 And with a swing she came about:

THOMAS RYMER AND THE QUEEN OF ELFLAND⁸

- 1 TRUE THOMAS lay oer yond grassy bank,
 And he beheld a ladie gay,
 A ladie that was brisk and bold,
 Come riding oer the fernie brae.
- 2 Her skirt was of the grass-green silk, Her mantel of the velvet fine, At ilka tett ⁹ of her horse's mane Hung fifty silver bells and nine.
- 3 True Thomas he took off his hat, And bowed him low down till his knee:
 - 'Al hail, thou mighty Queen of Heaven! For your peer on earth I never did see.'
- 4 'O no, O no, True Thomas,' she says,
 'That name does not belong to me;
 I am but the queen of fair Elfland,
 And I'm come here for to visit thee.
- 5 'But ye maun go wi me now, Thomas,
 True Thomas, ye maun go wi me,
 For ye maun serve me seven years,
 Thro weel or wae as may chance to be.'
- 6 She turned about her milk-white steed
 And took True Thomas up behind,
 And aye wheneer her bridle rang,
 The steed flew swifter than the wind.
- 7 For forty days and forty nights
 He wade thro red blude to the knee,
 And he saw neither sun nor moon,
 But heard the roaring of the sea.
- 8 O they rade on, and further on,
 Until they came to a garden green: 30
 'Light down, light down, ye ladie free,
 Some of that fruit let me pull to thee.'
- 9 'O no, O no, True Thomas,' she says,

 'That fruit maun not be touched by
 thee,

For a' the plagues that are in hell Light on the fruit of this countrie.

9 tuft.

- 10 'But I have a loaf here in my lap,
 Likewise a bottle of claret wine,
 And now ere we go farther on,
 We'll rest a while, and ye may dine.'
- 11 When he had eaten and drunk his fill,
 'Lay down your head upon my knee,'
 The lady sayd, 'ere we climb yon hill,
 And I will show you fairlies 1 three.
- 12 'O see not ye you narrow road, So thick beset wi thorns and briers? That is the path of righteousness, Tho after it but few enquires.
- 13 'And see not ye that braid braid road, That lies across you lillie leven? 2 50 That is the path of wickedness, The some call it the road to heaven.
- 14 'And see not ye that bonnie road,
 Which winds about the fernie brae?
 That is the road to fair Elfland,
 Whe[re] you and I this night maun gae.
- 15 'But Thomas, ye maun hold your tongue,
 Whatever you may hear or see,
 For gin ae word you should chance to speak,
 You will neer get back to your ain
 countrie.'
- 16 He has gotten a coat of the even scloth,
 And a pair of shoes of velvet green,
 And till seven years were past and gone
 True Thomas on earth was never seen.

THE WEE WEE MAN

- 1 As I was wa'king all alone,
 Between a water and a wa,⁴
 And there I spy'd a wee wee man,
 And he was the least that ere I saw.
- 2 His legs were scarce a shathmont's blength,

And thick and thimber was his thigh;

Between his brows there was a span, And between his shoulders there was three.

 Though I had been a Wallace wight,
 I couldna liften 't to my knee.
- 4 'O wee wee man, but thou be strang!
 O tell me where thy dwelling be?'
 My dwelling 's down at yon bonny
 bower;
 O will you go with me and see?'
- On we lap,⁸ and awa we rade,
 Till we came to you bonny green;
 We lighted down for to bait our horse,
 And out there came a lady fine.
- 6 Four and twenty at her back,
 And they were a' clad out in green;
 Though the King of Scotland had been there,

The warst o them might hae been his queen.

- 7 On we lap, and awa we rade, Till we came to yon bonny ha, Whare the roof was o the beaten gould, And the floor was o the cristal a'.
- 8 When we came to the stair-foot,
 Ladies were dancing, jimp and sma, 30
 But in the twinkling of an eye,
 My wee wee man was clean awa.

TAM LIN

- 1 O I FORBID you, maidens a',
 That wear gowd on your hair,
 To come or gae by Carterhaugh,
 For young Tam Lin is there.
- 2 There's nane that gaes by Carterhaugh But they leave him a wad,⁹ Either their rings, or green mantles, Or else their maidenhead.
- 3 Janet has kilted ¹⁰ her green kirtle
 A little aboon ¹¹ her knee,
 And she has broded her yellow hair
 A little aboon her bree, ¹²
 And she 's awa to Carterhaugh,
 As fast as she can hie.

- 4 When she came to Carterhaugh
 Tam Lin was at the well,
 And there she fand his steed standing,
 But away was himsel.
- 5 She had na pu'd a double rose, A rose but only twa, Till up then started young Tam Lin, Says, 'Lady, thou's pu nae mae.¹
- 6 'Why pu's thou the rose, Janet, And why breaks thou the wand? Or why comes thou to Carterhaugh Withoutten my command?'
- 7 'Carterhaugh, it is my ain,
 My daddie gave it me;
 I 'll come and gang by Carterhaugh,
 And ask nae leave at thee.'
- 8 Janet has kilted her green kirtle
 A little aboon her knee,
 And she has snooded 2 her yellow hair
 A little aboon her bree,
 And she is to her father's ha,
 As fast as she can hie.
- 9 Four and twenty ladies fair
 Were playing at the ba,
 And out then cam the fair Janet,
 Ance the flower amang them a'.
- 10 Four and twenty ladies fair Were playing at the chess, And out then cam the fair Janet, As green as onie glass.
- 11 Out then spak an auld grey knight, Lay oer the castle wa, Aud says, 'Alas, fair Janet, for thee But we'll be blamed a'.'
- 12 'Haud your tongue, ye auld fac'd knight,
 Some ill death may ye die!
 Father my bairn on whom I will,
 I 'll father nane on thee.'
- 13 Out then spak her father dear, And he spak meek and mild; 'And ever alas, sweet Janet,' he says, 'I think thou gaes wi child.'
- 14 'If that I gae wi child, father,
 Mysel maun bear the blame;

 1 no more.
 2 tied in a snood.

- There's neer a laird about your ha Shall get the bairn's name.
- 15 'If my love were an earthly knight,
 As he 's an elfin grey,
 I wad na gie my ain true-love
 For nae lord that ye hae.
- 16 'The steed that my true-love rides on Is lighter than the wind; Wi siller he is shod before, Wi burning gowd behind.'
- 17 Janet has kilted her green kirtle
 A little aboon her knee,
 And she has snooded her yellow hair
 A little aboon her bree,
 And she's awa to Carterhaugh,
 As fast as she can hie.
- 18 When she cam to Carterhaugh,
 Tam Lin was at the well,
 And there she fand his steed standing,
 But away was himsel.
- 19 She had na pu'd a double rose,
 A rose but only twa,
 Till up then started young Tam Lin,
 Says, 'Lady, thou pu's nae mae.
- 20 'Why pu's thou the rose, Janet, Amang the groves sae green, And a' to kill the bonie babe That we gat us between?'
- 21 'O tell me, tell me, Tam Lin,' she says,
 'For's sake that died on tree,
 If eer ye was in holy chapel,
 Or christendom did see?'
- 22 'Roxbrugh he was my grandfather, Took me with him to bide, And ance it fell upon a day That wae did me betide.
- 23 'And ance it fell upon a day,
 A cauld day and a snell,³
 When we were frae the hunting come,
 That frae my horse I fell;
 The Queen o Fairies she caught me,
 In yon green hill to dwell.
- 24 'And pleasant is the fairy land; But, an eerie tale to tell,

- Ay at the end of seven years
 We pay a tiend 1 to hell;
 I am sae fair and fu o flesh,
 I'm feared it be mysel.
- 25 'But the night is Halloween, lady,
 The morn is Hallowday;
 Then win me, win me, an ye will,
 For weel I wat ye may.
- 26 'Just at the mirk and midnight hour The fairy folk will ride, And they that wad their true-love win, At Miles Cross they maun bide.'
- 27 'But how shall I thee ken, Tam Lin, Or how my true-love know, Amang sae mony unco 2 knights The like I never saw?'
- 28 'O first let pass the black, lady,
 And syne let pass the brown,
 But quickly run to the milk-white steed,
 Pu ye his rider down.
- 29 'For I'll ride on the milk-white steed, And ay nearest the town; Because I was an earthly knight They gie me that renown.
- 30 'My right hand will be glovd, lady,
 My left hand will be bare,
 Cockt up shall my bonnet be,
 And kaimd down shall my hair,
 And thae's the takens I gie thee,
 Nae doubt I will be there.
- 31 'They'll turn me in your arms, lady,
 Into an esk 3 and adder;
 But hold me fast and fear me not,
 I am your bairn's father.
- 32 'They'll turn me to a bear sae grim,
 And then a lion bold;
 But hold me fast and fear me not,
 As ye shall love your child.
- 33 'Again they 'll turn me in your arms
 To a red het gaud of airn; '
 But hold me fast, and fear me not,
 I 'll do to you nae harm.
- 34 'And last they 'll turn me in your arms Into the burning gleed; b
 - tithe. strange. mewt. coal.

- Then throw me into well water, O throw me in wi speed.
- 35 'And then I 'll be your ain true-love,
 I 'll turn a naked knight;
 Then cover me wi your green mantle,
 And cover me out o sight.'
- 36 Gloomy, gloomy was the night,
 And eerie was the way,
 As fair Jenny in her green mantle
 To Miles Cross she did gae.
- 37 About the middle o the night She heard the bridles ring; This lady was as glad at that As any earthly thing.
- 38 First she let the black pass by,
 And syne she let the brown;
 But quickly she ran to the milk-white steed,
 And pu'd the rider down.
- 39 Sae weel she minded what he did say, And young Tam Lin did win; Syne coverd him wi her green mantle, As blythe's a bird in spring.
- 40 Out then spak the Queen o Fairies,
 Out of a bush o broom:
 'Them that has gotten young Tam Lin
 Has gotten a stately groom.'
- 41 Out then spak the Queen o Fairies, And an angry woman was she: 'Shame betide her ill-far'd ⁶ face, And an ill death may she die, For she's taen awa the boniest knight In a' my companie.
- 42 'But had I kend, Tam Lin,' she says,
 'What now this night I see, 18
 I wad hae taen out thy twa grey een,
 And put in twa een o tree.' 7

- 9 He's kept her there in Elmond's wood, For six lang years and one, Till six pretty sons to him she bear, And the seventh she's brought home.
- 10 It fell ance upon a day,

 This guid lord went from home,
 And he is to the hunting gane,

 Took wi him his eldest son.
- 11 And when they were on a guid way, Wi slowly pace did walk, The boy's heart being something wae, He thus began to talk:
- 12 'A question I woud ask, father, Gin ye woudna angry be:'
 'Say on, say on, my bonny boy, Ye'se nae be quarrelld by me.'
 - 1 let. 2 courteous youth. 3 ask. 4 root. 5 hollow.

- 13 'I see my mither's cheeks aye weet,
 I never can see them dry;
 And I wonder what aileth my mither,
 To mourn continually.'
- 14 'Your mither was a king's daughter,
 Sprung frae a high degree,
 And she might hae wed some worthy prince,
 Had she nae been stown 6 by me.
- 15 'I was her father's cup-bearer,
 Just at that fatal time;
 I catchd her on a misty night,
 Whan summer was in prime.
- 16 'My luve to her was most sincere, Her luve was great for me, But when she hardships doth endure, Her folly she does see.'
- 17 'I'll shoot the buntin o the bush, The linnet o the tree, And bring them to my dear mither, See if she 'll merrier be.'
- 18 It fell upo another day,

 This guid lord he thought lang,
 And he is to the hunting gane,

 Took wi him his dog and gun.
- 19 Wi bow and arrow by his side, He's aff, single, alane, And left his seven children to stay Wi their mither at hame.
- 20 'O I will tell to you, mither,
 Gin ye wadna angry be:'
 'Speak on, speak on, my little wee boy,
 Ye'se nae be quarrelld by me.' 80
- 21 'As we came frae the hynd-hunting,
 We heard fine music ring:'
 'My blessings on you, my bonny boy,
 I wish I'd been there my lane.'
- 22 He 's taen his mither by the hand, His six brithers also, And they are on thro Elmond's wood, As fast as they coud go.
- 23 They wistna weel where they were gaen,
 Wi the stratlins otheir feet;
 They wist na weel where they were gaen,
 Till at her father's yate.
 - 6 stolen. 7 alone. 8 stridings. 9 gate.

- 24 'I hae nae money in my pocket,
 But royal rings hae three;
 I 'll gie them you, my little young son,
 And ye 'll walk there for me.
- 25 'Ye'll gie the first to the proud porter,
 And he will lat you in;
 Ye'll gie the next to the butler-boy,
 And he will show you ben; 1
- 26 'Ye'll gie the third to the minstrel
 That plays before the king;
 He'll play success to the bonny boy
 Came thro the wood him lane.'2
- 27 He gae the first to the proud porter,
 And he opend an let him in;
 He gae the next to the butler-boy,
 And he has shown him ben;
- 28 He gae the third to the minstrel
 That playd before the king;
 And he playd success to the bonny boy
 Came thro the wood him lane.
- 29 Now when he came before the king, Fell low down on his knee; The king he turned round about, And the saut tear blinded his ee.
- 30 'Win 3 up, win up, my bonny boy,
 Gang frae my companie;
 Ye look sae like my dear daughter,
 My heart will birst in three.'
- 31 'If I look like your dear daughter,
 A wonder it is none;
 If I look like your dear daughter,
 I am her eldest son.'
- 32 'Will ye tell me, ye little wee boy,
 Where may my Margaret be?'
 'She's just now standing at your yates,
 And my six brithers her wi.'
- 33 'O where are all my porter-boys

 That I pay meat and fee,
 To open my yates baith wide and braid?

 Let her come in to me.'
- 34 When she came in before the king,
 Fell low down on her knee;
 'Win up, win up, my daughter dear,
 This day ye'll dine wi me.'

 1 in. 2 alone. 3 Get.

- 35 'Ae bit I canno eat, father,
 Nor ae drop can I drink,
 Till I see my mither and sister dear,
 For lang for them I think.'
- When she came before the queen,
 Fell low down on her knee;
 Win up, win up, my daughter dear,
 This day ye'se dine wi me.'
- 37 'Ae bit I canno eat, mither,
 Nor ae drop can I drink,
 Until I see my dear sister,
 For lang for her I think.'
- 38 When that these two sisters met,
 She haild her courteouslie;
 'Come ben, come ben, my sister dear,
 This day ye'se dine wi me.'
- 39 'Ae bit I canno eat, sister,
 Nor ae drop can I drink,
 Until I see my dear husband,
 For lang for him I think.'
- 40 'O where are all my rangers bold
 That I pay meat and fee,
 To search the forest far an wide,
 And bring Akin to me?'

180

- 41 Out it speaks the little wee boy:
 'Na, na, this maunna' be;
 Without ye grant a free pardon,
 I hope ye'll nae him see.'
- 42 'O here I grant a free pardon,
 Well seald by my own han;
 Ye may make search for Young Akin,
 As soon as ever you can.'
- 43 They searchd the country wide and braid,
 The forests far and near,
 And found him into Elmond's wood,
 Tearing his yellow hair.
- 44 'Win up, win up now, Young Akin, Win up, and boun b wi me; We're messengers come from the court, The king wants you to see.'
- 45 'O lat him take frae me my head,
 Or hang me on a tree;
 For since I 've lost my dear lady,
 Life 's no pleasure to me.'

- 46 'Your head will nae be touchd, Akin,
 Nor hangd upon a tree;
 Your lady's in her father's court,
 And all he wants is thee.'
- 47 When he came in before the king,
 Fell low down on his knee;
 'Win up, win up now, Young Akin,
 This day ye'se dine wi me.'
- 48 But as they were at dinner set,

 The boy asked a boun:

 'I wish we were in the good church,

 For to get christendoun.
- 49 'We hae lived in guid green wood
 This seven years and ane;
 But a' this time, since eer I mind,
 Was never a church within.'
- 50 'Your asking's nae sae great, my boy,
 But granted it shall be;
 This day to guid church ye shall gang,
 And your mither shall gang you wi.'
- 51 When unto the guid church she came,
 She at the door did stan;
 She was sae sair sunk down wi shame,
 She coudna come farer ben.
- 52 Then out it speaks the parish priest, And a sweet smile gae he: 'Come ben, come ben, my lily flower, Present your babes to me.'
- 53 Charles, Vincent, Sam and Dick,
 And likewise James and John;
 They calld the eldest Young Akin,
 Which was his father's name.
- 54 Then they staid in the royal court, And livd wi mirth and glee, And when her father was deceasd, Heir of the crown was she.

CLERK COLVILL

- 1 CLARK COLVEN and his gay ladie, As they walked to you garden green, A belt about her middle gimp,¹ Which cost Clark Colven crowns fifteen:
 - 1 slender.

- 2 'O hearken weel now, my good lord, O hearken weel to what I say; When ye gang to the wall o Stream, O gang nae neer the well-fared may.'2
- 3 'O haud your tongue, my gay ladie,
 Tak nae sic care o me;
 For I nae saw a fair woman
 I like so well as thee.'
- 4 He mounted on his berry-brown steed, And merry, merry rade he on, Till he came to the wall o Stream, And there he saw the mermaiden.
- 5 'Ye wash, ye wash, ye bonny may,
 And ay's ye wash your sark o silk:'
 'It's a' for you, ye gentle knight,
 My skin is whiter than the milk.'
- 6 He's taen her by the milk-white hand, He's taen her by the sleeve sae green,

And he's forgotten his gay ladie, And away with the fair maiden.

- 7 'Ohon, alas!' says Clark Colven,
 'And aye sae sair's I mean my head!'
 And merrily leugh the mermaiden,
 'O win on till you be dead.
- 8 'But out ye tak your little pen-knife, And frae my sark ye shear a gare; A Row that about your lovely head, 31 And the pain ye'll never feel nae mair.'
- 9 Out he has taen his little pen-knife,
 And frae her sark he's shorn a gare,
 Rowed that about his lovely head,
 But the pain increased mair and mair.
- 10 'Ohon, alas!' says Clark Colven,
 'An aye sae sair's I mean my head!'
 And merrily laughd the mermaiden,
 'It will ay be war till ye be dead.' 40
- 11 Then out he drew his trusty blade, And thought wi it to be her dead,⁷ But she's become a fish again, And merrily sprang into the fleed.
 - well-favored maid. laughed. gore, strip. kell. death.

- 12 He's mounted on his berry-brown steed,
 And dowy, dowy rade he home,
 And heavily, heavily lighted down
 When to his ladie's bower-door he came.
- 13 'Oh, mither, mither, mak my bed,
 And, gentle ladie, lay me down;
 Oh, brither, brither, unbend my bow,
 'T will never be bent by me again.'
- 14 His mither she has made his bed, His gentle ladie laid him down, His brither he has unbent his bow, 'T was never bent by him again.

KING JOHN AND THE BISHOP1

- 1 OFF an ancient story He tell you anon, Of a notable prince that was called King Iohn,
 - In England was borne, with maine and with might;
 - Hee did much wrong and mainteined litle right.
- 2 This noble prince was vexed in veretye, For he was angry with the Bishopp of Canterbury;

Ffor his house-keeping and his good cheere.

- The 2 rode post for him, as you shall heare.
- 3 They rode post for him verry hastilye; The king sayd the bishopp kept a better house then hee:

A hundred men even, as I [have heard]

The bishopp kept in his house everye day,

And fifty gold chaines, without any doubt,

In velvett coates waited the bishopp about.

4 The bishopp, he came to the court anon, Before his prince that was called King Iohn.

As soone as the bishopp the king did see, 'O,' quoth the king, 'bishopp, thow art welcome to mee.

¹ This story appears to be of Oriental origin, and there are many versions of it East and West. ² They.

- There is noe man soe welcome to towne As thou that workes treason against my crowne.'
- 5 'My leege,' quoth the bishopp, 'I wold it were knowne

I spend, your grace, nothing but that that's my owne;

I trust your grace will doe me noe deare 3

For spending my owne trew gotten geere.'

6 'Yes,' quoth the king, 'bishopp, thou must needs dye,

Eccept thou can answere mee questions three;

Thy head shalbe smitten quite from thy bodye,

And all thy living remayne unto mee.

7 'First,' quoth the king, 'tell me in this steade,

With this crowne of gold heere vpon my head,

Amongst my nobilitye, with ioy and much mirth,

Lett me know within one pennye what I am worth.

8 'Secondlye, tell me without any dowbt. How soone I may goe the whole world about;

And thirdly, tell mee or ever I stinte, What is the thing, bishopp, that I doe thinke.

Twenty dayes pardon thoust 4 have trulye,

And come againe and answere mee.'

9 The bishopp bade the king god night att a word;

He rode betwixt Cambridge and Oxenford, 40

But never a doctor there was soe wise Cold shew him these questions or enterprise.

10 Wherewith the bishopp was nothing gladd,

But in his hart was heavy and sadd, And hyed him home to a house in the countrye,

To ease some part of his melanchollye.

harm. 4 thou shalt.

11 His halfe-brother dwelt there, was feirce and fell,

Noe better but a shepard to the bishoppe himsell;

The shepard came to the bishopp anon, Saying, 'My Lord, you are welcome home!'

12 'What ayles you,' quoth the shepard, 'that you are soe sadd,

And had wonte to have beene soe merry and gladd?'

'Nothing,' quoth the bishopp, 'I ayle att this time;

Will not thee availe to know, brother mine.'

13 'Brother,' quoth the shepeard, 'you have heard itt,

That a ffoole may teach a wisemane witt:

Say me therfore whatsoever you will, And if I doe you noe good, Ile doe you noe ill.

14 Quoth the bishop: 'I have beene att the court anon,

Before my prince is called King Iohn, 60 And there he hath charged mee Against his crowne with traitorye.

15 'If I cannott answer his misterye, Three questions hee hath propounded to mee,

He will have my land soe faire and free, And alsoe the head from my bodye.

16 'The first question was, to tell him in that stead,

With the crowne of gold vpon his head, Amongst his nobilitye, with ioy and much mirth,

To lett him know within one penye what hee is worth.

17 'And secondlye, to tell him with-out any doubt

How soone he may goe the whole world about;

And thirdlye, to tell him, or ere I stint, What is the thinge that he does thinke.'

18 'Brother,' quoth the shepard, 'you are a man of learninge;

What neede you stand in doubt of soe small a thinge?

Lend me, quoth the shepard, 'your ministers apparrell,

Ile ryde to the court and answere your quarrell.

19 'Lend me your serving men, say me not nay,

With all your best horsses that ryd on the way;

Ile to the court, this matter to stay; Ile speake with King Iohn and heare what heele say.'

20 The bishopp with speed prepared then To sett forth the shepard with horsse and man;

The shepard was lively without any doubt;

I wott a royall companye came to the court.

21 The shepard hee came to the court anon Before [his] prince that was called King Iohn.

As soone as the king the shepard did see.

'O,' quoth the king, 'bishopp, thou art welcome to me.'

The shepard was soe like the bishopp his brother,

The king cold not know the one from the other.

22 Quoth the king, 'Bishopp, thou art welcome to me

If thou can answer me my questions three.'

Said the shepeard, 'If it please your grace,

Show mee what the first quest[i]on was.'

23 'First,' quoth the king, 'tell mee in this stead,

With the crowne of gold vpon my head, Amongst my nobilitye, with ioy and much mirth,

Within one pennye what I am worth.' 100

24 Quoth the shepard. 'To make your grace noe offence,

I thinke you are worth nine and twenty pence;

For our Lord Iesus, that bought vs all, For thirty pence was sold into thrall Amongst the cursed Iewes, as I to you doe showe;

But I know Christ was one penye better then you.'

25 Then the king laught, and swore by St Andrew

He was not thought to bee of such a small value.

'Secondlye, tell mee with-out any doubt How soone I may goe the world round about.'

26 Saies the shepard, 'It is noe time with your grace to scorne,

But rise betime with the sun in the morne,

And follow his course till his uprising, And then you may know without any leasing.¹

27 'And this [to] your grace shall prove the same,

You are come to the same place from whence you came;

[In] twenty-four houres, with-out any doubt.

Your grace may the world goe round about;

The world round about, even as I doe

If with the sun you can goe the next way.'

28 'And thirdlye tell me or ever I stint, What is the thing, bishoppe, that I doe thinke.'

'That shall I doe,' quoth the shepeard; 'for veretye,

You thinke I am the bishopp of Canterburye.'

29 'Why, art not thou? the truth tell to me;

For I doe thinke soe,' quoth the king, 'by St Marye.'

'Not soe,' quoth the shepeard; 'the truth shalbe knowne,

I am his poore shepeard; my brother is att home.'

30 'Why,' quoth the king, 'if itt soe bee,

Ile make thee bishopp here to mee.' 130

'Noe, Sir,' quoth the shepard, 'I pray you be still,

For Ile not bee bishop but against my will;

For I am not fitt for any such deede, For I can neither write nor reede.'

31 'Why then,' quoth the king, 'Ile give thee cleere

A pattent of three hundred pound a yeere;

That I will give thee franke and free; Take thee that, shepard, for coming to me.

32 'Free pardon Ile give,' the kings grace said,

'To save the bishopp, his land and his head;

With him nor thee Ile be nothing wrath;

With him nor thee He be nothing wrath; Here is the pardon for him and thee both.'

33 Then the shepard he had noe more to say,

But tooke the pardon and rode his way: When he came to the bishopps place, The bishopp asket anon how all things was.

34 'Brother,' quoth the shepard, 'I have well sped,

For I have saved both your land and your head;

The king with you is nothing wrath,

For heere is the pardon for you and mee both.'

35 Then the bishopes hart was of a merry cheere:

'Brother, thy paines Ile quitt them cleare;

For I will give thee a patent to thee and to thine

Of fifty pound a yeere, land good and fine.'

'I will to thee noe longer croche 2 nor creepe,

Nor Ile serve thee noe more to keepe thy sheepe.'

3 crouch.

- 37 Whereever wist you shepard before,
 That had in his head witt such store
 To pleasure a bishopp in such a like case,
 To answer three questions to the kings grace?
 Whereever wist you shepard gett cleare
 Three hundred and fifty pound a yeere?
- 38 I never hard of his fellow before, Nor I never shall: now I need to say noe more.

I never knew shepeard that gott such a livinge But David, the shepeard, that was a king.

YOUNG BICHAM1

- 1 In London city was Bicham born, He longd strange countries for to see, But he was taen by a savage Moor, Who handld him right cruely.
- 2 For thro his shoulder he put a bore,²
 An thro the bore has pitten a tree,³
 An he 's gard ⁴ him draw the carts o wine,
 Where horse and oxen had wont to be.
- 3 He's casten [him] in a dungeon deep, 9 Where he coud neither hear nor see; He's shut him up in a prison strong, And he's handld him right cruely.
- 4 O this Moor he had but ae daughter, I wot her name was Shusy Pye; She's doen her to the prison-house, And she's calld Young Bicham one word by.
- 5 'O hae ye ony lands or rents,
 Or citys in your ain country,
 Coud free you out of prison strong,
 An coud mantain a lady free?'
- 6 'O London city is my own,
 An other citys twa or three
 Coud loose me out o prison strong,
 An coud mantain a lady free.'
- 7 O she has bribed her father's men Wi meikle goud 5 and white money, She 's gotten the key o the prison doors, An she has set Young Bicham free.
- 1 Lord Bateman is a later version of this popular theme.
 3 hole. 3 put a stick. 4 compelled. 5 much gold.

- 8 She's gi'n him a loaf o good white bread,
 But an a flask o Spanish wine,
 30
 An she bad him mind on the ladie's love
 That sae kindly freed him out o pine.
- 9 'Go set your foot on good ship-board, An haste you back to your ain country,

An before that seven years has an end, Come back again, love, and marry me.'

- 10 It was long or seven years had an end She longd fu sair her love to see; She's set her foot on good ship-board, An turnd her back on her ain country.
- 11 She 's saild up, so has she doun, Till she came to the other side; She 's landed at Young Bicham's gates, An I hop this day she sal be his bride.
- 12 'Is this Young Bicham's gates?' says
 she,
 'Or is that noble prince within?'
 'He's up the stairs wi his bonny bride,
 An monny a lord and lady wi him.'
- 13 'O has he taen a bonny bride,
 An has he clean forgotten me!' 50
 An sighing said that gay lady,
 'I wish I were in my ain country!'
- 14 But she's pitten her han in her pocket, An gin⁶ the porter guineas three; Says, 'Take ye that, ye proud porter, An bid the bridegroom speak to me.'
- 15 O whan the porter came up the stair, He's fa'n low down upon his knee: 'Won' up, won up, ye proud porter, An what makes a' this courtesy?' 60
- 16 'O I've been porter at your gates This mair nor seven years an three, But there is a lady at them now The like of whom I never did see.
- 17 'For on every finger she has a ring, An on the mid-finger she has three, An there 's as meikle goud s aboon her brow

As woud buy an earldome o lan to me.

- 18 Then up it started Young Bicham,
 An sware so loud by Our Lady,
 'It can be nane but Shushy Pye,
 That has come oer the sea to me.'
- 19 O quickly ran he down the stair,
 O' fifteen steps he has made but three;
 He's tane his bonny love in his arms,
 An a wot he kissd her tenderly.
- 20 'O hae you taen a bonny bride?

 An hae you quite forsaken me?

 An hae ye quite forgotten her

 That gae you life an liberty?'
- 21 She's lookit oer her left shoulder
 To hide the tears stood in her ee;
 'Now fare thee well, Young Bicham,'
 she says,
 'I'll strive to think nae mair on thee.'
- 22 'Take back your daughter, madam,' he says,
 'An a double dowry I'll gi her wi;

For I maun marry my first true love, That's done and suffered so much for me.'

23 He's take his bonny love by the han,
And led her to yon fountain stane; 90
He's changd her name frae Shusy Pye,
An he's cald her his bonny love,
Lady Jane.

THE CHERRY-TREE CAROL 1

- 1 Joseph was an old man, and an old man was he, When he wedded Mary, in the land of Galilee.
- 2 Joseph and Mary walked through an orchard good, Where was cherries and berries, so red as any blood.
- 3 Joseph and Mary walked through an orchard green, Where was berries and cherries, as thick as might be seen.
- 1 This story is founded on the gospel of the Pseudo-Matthew, ix.

- 4 O then bespoke Mary, so meek and so mild: 'Pluck me one cherry, Joseph, for I am with child.'
- 5 O then bespoke Joseph, with words most unkind: 'Let him pluck thee a cherry that brought thee with child.'
- 6 O then bespoke the babe, within his mother's womb: 'Bow down then the tallest tree, for my mother to have some.'
- 7 Then bowed down the highest tree unto his mother's hand; Then she cried, 'See, Joseph, I have cherries at command.'
- 8 O then bespake Joseph:
 'I have done Mary wrong;
 But cheer up, my dearest,
 and be not cast down.'

30

- 9 Then Mary plucked a cherry, as red as the blood, Then Mary went home with her heavy load.
- 10 Then Mary took her babe, and sat him on her knee, Saying, 'My dear son, tell me what this world will be.'
- 11 'O I shall be as dead, mother, as the stones in the wall; O the stones in the streets, mother, shall mourn for me all.
- 12 'Upon Easter-day, mother, my uprising shall be; O the sun and the moon, mother, shall both rise with me.'

SIR PATRICK SPENCE²

- 1 The king sits in Dumferling toune,
 Drinking the blude-reid wine:
 'O whar will I get guid sailor,
 To sail this schip of mine?'
- One of the best ballads, historical sounding, but not historical in any strict sense.

- 2 Up and spak an eldern knicht, Sat at the kings richt kne:
 'Sir Patrick Spence is the best sailor That sails upon the se.'
- 3 The king has written a braid 1 letter, And signd it wi his hand, And sent it to Sir Patrick Spence, Was walking on the sand.
- 4 The first line that Sir Patrick red, A loud lauch 2 lauched he; The next line that Sir Patrick red, The teir blinded his ee.
- 5 'O wha is this has don this deid,

 This ill deid don to me,

 To send me out this time o' the yeir,

 To sail upon the se!
- 6 'Mak hast, mak haste, my mirry men all, Our guid schip sails the morne:'
 'O say na sae, my master deir, For I feir a deadlie storme.
- 7 'Late late yestreen I saw the new moone,
 Wi the auld moone in hir arme,
 And I feir, I feir, my deir master,
 That we will cum to harme.'
- 8 O our Scots nobles wer richt laith
 To weet their cork-heild schoone; 30
 Bot lang owre 3 a' the play wer
 playd,
 Thair hats they swam aboone.4
- 9 O lang, lang may their ladies sit, Wi thair fans into their hand, Or eir they se Sir Patrick Spence Cum sailing to the land.
- 10 O lang, lang may the ladies stand, Wi thair gold kems b in their hair, Waiting for thair ain deir lords, For they 'll se thame na mair.
- 11 Haf owre, haf owre to Aberdour, It's fiftie fadom deip, And thair lies guid Sir Patrick Spence, Wi the Scots lords at his feit.
 - 1 broad. 2 laugh. 3 before.
 4 above. 5 combs.

KING ESTMERE®

- 1 HEARKEN to me, gentlemen,
 Come and you shall heare;
 Ile tell you of two of the boldest brether
 That ever borne were.
- 2 The tone of them was Adler Younge, The tother was Kyng Estmere; The were as bolde men in their deeds As any were, farr and neare.
- 3 As they were drinking ale and wine
 Within his brother's hall,
 'When will ye marry a wyfe, brother,
 A wyfe to glad us all?'
- 4 Then bespake him Kyng Estmere,
 And answered him hartilye:
 'I know not that ladye in any land,
 That's able to marrye with mee.'
- 5 'Kyng Adland hath a daughter, brother, Men call her bright and sheene; If I were kyng here in your stead, That ladye shold be my queene.' 20
- 6 Saies, 'Reade ⁷ me, reade me, deare brother, Throughout merry England, Where we might find a messenger

Betwixt us towe to sende.'

- 7 Saies, 'You shal ryde yourselfe, brother, Ile beare you companye; Many a man throughe fals messengers is deceived.
- 8 Thus the renisht steeds, 30 And when the came to King Adlands halle,
 Of redd gold shone their weeds.

And I feare lest soe shold wee.'

9 And when the came to Kyng Adlands hall, Before the goodlye gate,

There they found good Kyng Adland Rearing himselfe theratt.

6 We possess this spirited ballad, unfortunately, only as touched up by Bishop Percy. Adler and Estmere occur again in the Percy Folio MS., ed. Hales and Furnivall, II, 296, and there Adler gets a fine wife.
7 Advise.
8 they prepared.

- 10 'Now Christ thee save, good Kyng Adland; Now Christ you save and see:' Sayd, 'You be welcome, King Estmere, Right hartilye to mee.'
- 11 'You have a daughter,' said Adler Younge,
 'Men call her bright and sheene;
 My brother wold marrye her to his wiffe,
 Of Englande to be queene.'
- 12 'Yesterday was att my deere daughter The king his sonne of Spayn, And then she nicked him of naye,¹ And I doubt sheele do you the same.'
- 13 'The kyng of Spayne is a foule paynim,
 And 'leeveth on Mahound,²
 And pitye it were that fayre ladye
 Shold marry a heathen hound.'
- 'But grant to me,' sayes Kyng Estmere, 'For my love I you praye, That I may see your daughter deere Before I goe hence awaye.'
- 15 'Although itt is seven yeers and more Since my daughter was in halle, She shall come once downe for your sake, To glad my guestës alle.' 60
- 16 Downe then came that mayden fayre, With ladyes laced in pall, And halfe a hundred of bold knightes, To bring her [from] bowre to hall, And as many gentle squiers, To tend upon them all.
- 17 The talents of golde were on her head sette
 Hanged low downe to her knee,
 And everye ring on her small finger
 Shone of the chrystall free.

 Estmere,
 By heaven and your righte hand,
 That you will marrye me to your wife,
 And make me queene of your land.'
- 24 Then Kyng Estmere he plight his troth, By heaven and his righte hand, That he wolde marrye her to his wyfe, And make her queene of his land.
- 25 And he tooke leave of that ladye fayre,
 To goe to his owne countree,
 To fetche him dukes and lordes and

 Of redd gold shone their weedes.
- 43 And whan the came to Kyng Adlands hall
 Until the fayre hall-yate,
 There they found a proud porter,
 Rearing himselfe thereatt.
- 44 Sayes, 'Christ thee save, thou proud porter,' Sayes, 'Christ thee save and see:'

'Nowe you be welcome,' sayd the porter, 'Of what land soever ye bee.'

- 45 'Wee beene harpers,' sayd Adler Younge,
 'Come out of the northe countrye; 180
 Wee beene come hither untill this place

- 51 'My ladde he is so lither,'1 he said, 'He will doe nought that's meete; And is there any man in this hall Were able him to beate?'
- 52 'Thou speakst proud words,' sayes the king of Spaine. 'Thou harper, here to mee; There is a man within this halle Will beate thy ladd and thee.'
- 53 'O let that man come downe,' he said, 'A sight of him wold I see; And when hee hath beaten well my ladd, Then he shall beate of mee.'
- 54 Downe then came the kemperve 2 man, And looked him in the eare; For all the gold that was under heaven, He durst not neigh 8 him neare.
- 55 'And how nowe, kempe,' said the kynge of Spaine, 'And how, what aileth thee?' He saies, 'It is writt in his forhead, All and in gramarye, That for all the gold that is under heaven. I dare not neigh him nye.'
- 56 Then Kyng Estmere pulld forth his harpe, And plaid a pretty thinge; The ladye upstart from the borde, And wold have gone from the king.
- 57 'Stay thy harpe, thou proud harper, For Gods love I pray thee; For and thou playes as thou beginns, Thou'lt till 4 my bryde from mee.'
- 58 He stroake upon his harpe againe, And playd a pretty thinge; The ladye lough a loud laughter, As shee sate by the king.

GLASGERION²

- 1 GLASGERION was a kings owne sonne, And a harper he was good; He harped in the kings chamber, Where cuppe and candle stoode, And soe did hee in the queens chamber, Till ladies waxed wood.
- 2 And then bespake the kings daughter, And these words thus sayd shee.
- 3 Saide, 'Strike on, strike on, Glasgerrion,
 Of thy striking doe not blinne; to there's never a stroke comes over thin harpe
 But it glads my hart within.'
- 4 'Faire might you fall, lady!' quoth hee;
 'Who taught you now to speake.
 I have loved you, lady, seven yeere;
 My hart I durst neere breake.'
- 5 'But come to my bower, my Glasgerryon, When all men are att rest;

As I am a ladie true of my promise,
Thou shalt bee a welcome guest.

- 6 But hom then came Glasgerryon,
 A glad man, Lord, was hee:
 'And come thou hither, Iacke, my boy,
 Come hither unto mee.

And cast that coller from about his necke;

He was but a churlës sonne:

- 'Awaken,' quoth hee, 'my master deere, I hold it time to be gone.
- 14 'For I have sadled your horsse, master, Well bridled I have your steed; Have not I served a good breakfast, When time comes I have need.'
- But up then rose good Glasgerryon,
 And did on both hose and shoone,
 And cast a coller about his necke;
 He was a kingës sonne.
- 16 And when he came to that ladies chamber,

He thrild vpon a pinn; The lady was more then true of promise, Rose up and let him in.

5 wicked. 6 rattled at the door-fastening. 7 went.

- 17 Saies, 'Whether have you left with me Your braclett or your glove? Or are you returned backe againe To know more of my love?'
- 18 Glasgerryon swore a full great othe, By oake and ashe and thorne, 'Lady, I was never in your chamber Sith the time that I was borne.'
- 19 'O then it was your litle foote-page
 Falsly hath beguiled me:'
 And then shee pulld forth a litle penkniffe,
 That hanged by her knee,
 Says, 'There shall never noe churles
 blood
 Spring within my body.'
 80
- 20 But home then went Glasgerryon,
 A woe man, good [Lord], was hee;
 'Sayes, 'Come hither, thou Iacke, my
 boy,
 Come thou hither to me.
- 21 'Ffor if I had killed a man to-night, Iacke, I wold tell it thee; But if I have not killed a man to-night, Iacke, thou hast killed three!'
- 22 And he puld out his bright browne sword, And dryed it on his sleeve, And he smote off that lither ladds head, And asked noe man noe leave.
- 23 He sett the swords poynt till his brest,
 The pumill till a stone;
 Thorrow 1 that falsenese of that lither
 ladd
 These three lives werne all gone.

CLERK SAUNDERS

- 1 CLARK SANDERS and May Margret
 Walkt ower yon graveld green,
 And sad and heavy was the love,
 I wat, it fell this twa between.
- 2 'A bed, a bed,' Clark Sanders said,
 'A bed, a bed for you and I;'
 'Fye no, fye no,' the lady said,
 'Until the day we married be.

 1 Through.

- 3 'For in it will come my seven brothers, And a'their torches burning bright; to They'll say, "We hae but ae sister, And here her lying wi a knight."
- 4 'Ye'l take the sourde fray my scabbord, And lowly, lowly lift the gin, And you may say, your oth to save,

You never let Clark Sanders in.

- 5 'Yele take a napken in your hand, And ye'l ty up baith your een, An ye may say, your oth to save, That ye saw na Sandy sen late yestreen.
- 6 'Yele take me in your armes twa, Yele carrey me ben 2 into your bed, And ye may say, your oth to save, In your bower-floor I never tread.'
- 7 She has taen the sourde fray his scabbord, And lowly, lowly lifted the gin; She was to swear, her oth to save, She never let Clerk Sanders in.
- 8 She has tain a napkin in her hand,
 And she ty'd up baith her eeen;
 She was to swear, her oth to save,
 She saw na him sene late yestreen.
- 9 She has taen him in her armes twa,
 And carried him ben into her bed;
 She was to swear, her oth to save,
 He never in her bower-floor tread.
- 10 In and came her seven brothers,
 And all their torches burning bright;
 Says thay, 'We hae but ae sister,
 And see there her lying wi a knight.'
- 11 Out and speaks the first of them, 41 'A wat 3 they hay been lovers dear;' Out and speaks the next of them, 'They hay been in love this many a year.'
- 12 Out an speaks the third of them,

 'It wear great sin this twa to twain;'4

 Out an speaks the fourth of them,

 'It wear a sin to kill a sleeping man.'

 * within. * I ween. * sunder.

13 Out an speaks the fifth of them,

'A wat they'll near be twained by
me;'
50

Out an speaks the sixt of them,
'We'l tak our leave an gae our way.'

14 Out an speaks the seventh of them, 'Altho there wear no a man but me,

I bear the brand, I'le gar him die.'

15 Out he has taen a bright long brand, And he has striped it throw the straw, And throw and throw Clarke Sanders' body

A wat he has gard 1 cold iron gae.

- 16 Sanders he started, an Margret she lapt,
 Intill his arms whare she lay,
 And well and wellsom was the night,
 A wat it was between these twa.
- 17 And they lay still, and sleeped sound,
 Untill the day began to daw; ²
 And kindly till him she did say
 'It's time, trew-love, ye wear awa.'
- 18 They lay still, and sleeped sound,
 Until the sun began to shine;
 She lookt between her and the wa,
 And dull and heavy was his eeen.
- 19 She thought it had been a loathsome sweat,

A wat it had fallen this twa between; But it was the blood of his fair body, A wat his life days wair na lang.

- 20 'O Sanders, I'le do for your sake What other ladys would na thoule;³ When seven years is come and gone, There's near a shoe go on my sole.
- 21 'O Sanders, I'le do for your sake 80 What other ladies would think mare; When seven years is come an gone, Ther's nere a comb go in my hair.
- 22 'O Sanders, I'le do for your sake
 What other ladies would think lack;
 When seven years is come an gone,
 I'le wear nought but dowy black.'
 - 1 I wot he has made. 2 endure.
- dawn.

- 23 The bells gaed clinking throw the towne, To carry the dead corps to the clay, An sighing says her May Margret, 90 'A wat I bide a doulfou day.'
- 24 In an come her father dear, Stout steping on the floor;
- 25 'Hold your toung, my doughter dear,
 Let all your mourning a bee;
 I'le carry the dead corpse to the clay,
 An I'le come back an comfort thee.'
- 26 'Comfort well your seven sons,
 For comforted will I never bee;
 For it was neither lord nor loune
 That was in bower last night wi mee.'

LORD THOMAS AND FAIR ANNET

- 1 LORD THOMAS and Fair Annet Sate a' day on a hill; Whan night was cum, and sun was sett, They had not talkt their fill.
- 2 Lord Thomas said a word in jest,
 Fair Annet took it ill:
 'A, I will nevir wed a wife.
 Against my ain friends' will.'
- 3 'Gif ye wull nevir wed a wife, A wife wull neir wed yee:' Sae he is hame to tell his mither, And knelt upon his knee.

10

- 4 'O rede, O rede, mither,' he says, 'A gude rede ⁵ gie to mee; O sall I tak the nut-browne bride, And let Faire Annet bee?'
- 5 'The nut-browne bride haes gowd and gear,
 Fair Annet she has gat nane;
 And the little beauty Fair Annet haes

And the little beauty Fair Annet haes
O it wull soon be gane.'

6 And he has till his brother gane: 'Now, brother, rede ye mee; A, sall I marrie the nut-browne bride, And let Fair Annet bee?'

5 counsel.

- 7 'The nut-browne bride has oxen, brother, The nut-browne bride has kye; 1
 - I wad hae ye marrie the nut-browne bride,
 And cast Fair Annet bye.'

8 'Her oxen may dye i the house, billie, And her kye into the byre,2

- And I sall hae nothing to mysell Bot a fat fadge ⁸ by the fyre.'
- 9 And he has till his sister gane: 'Now, sister, rede ye mee; O sall I marrie the nut-browne bride, And set Fair Annet free?'
- 10 'I 'se rede ye tak Fair Annet, Thomas, And let the browne bride alaue; Lest ye sould sigh, and say, "Alace, What is this we brought hame!"
- 11 'No, I will tak my mither's counsel, And marrie me owt o hand; And I will tak the nut-browne bride, Fair Annet may leive the land.'
- 12 Up then rose Fair Annet's father, Twa hours or it wer day, And he is gane into the bower Wherein Fair Annet lay.
- 13 'Rise up, rise up, Fair Annet,' he says, 'Put on your silken sheene; ⁴ 50 Let us gae to St. Marie's kirke, And see that rich weddeen.'
- 14 'My maides, gae to my dressing-roome, And dress to me my hair; Whaireir yee laid a plait before, See yee lay ten times mair.
- 15 'My maids, gae to my dressing-room, And dress to me my smock; The one half is o the holland ⁵ fine, The other o needle-work.'
- 16 The horse Fair Annet rade upon, He amblit like the wind; Wi siller he was shod before, Wi burning gowd behind.
- 17 Four and twanty siller bells Wer a' tyed till his mane,
 - 1 kine. 2 cow-shed. 3 dumpy woman. 4 splendor. 5 linen.

- And yae tift of the norland wind, They tinkled ane by ane.
- 18 Four and twanty gay gude knichts
 Rade by Fair Annet's side,
 And four and twanty fair ladies,
 As gin she had bin a bride.
- 19 And whan she cam to Marie's kirk, She sat on Marie's stean: 7 The cleading 8 that Fair Annet had on It skinkled 9 in their een.
- 20 And whan she cam into the kirk, She shimmerd like the sun; The belt that was about her waist Was a' wi pearles bedone.
- 21 She sat her by the nut-browne bride,
 And her een they wer sae clear,
 Lord Thomas he clean forgat the bride,
 Whan Fair Annet drew near.
- 22 He had a rose into his hand, He gae it kisses three, And reaching by the nut-browne bride, Laid it on Fair Annet's knee.
- 23 Up than spak the nut-browne bride, She spak wi meikle spite:
 'And whair gat ye that rose-water, That does mak yee sae white?'
- 24 'O I did get the rose-water
 Whair ye wull neir get nane,
 For I did get that very rose-water
 Into my mither's wame.' 10
- 25 The bride she drew a long bodkin
 Frae out her gay head-gear,
 And strake Fair Annet unto the heart,
 That word spak nevir mair.
- 26 Lord Thomas he saw Fair Annet wex pale,
 And marvelit what mote bee;
 But when he saw ben dear heart's blude.

But whan he saw her dear heart's blude,
A' wood-wroth 11 wexed hee.

- 27 He drew his dagger, that was sae sharp,
 That was sae sharp and meet,
 And drave it into the nut-browne bride,
 That fell deid at his feit.
 - 6 one gust. 7 stone. 8 clothing.
 9 shone. 10 womb. 11 mad-angry.

- 28 'Now stay for me, dear Annet,' he sed,
 'Now stay, my dear,' he cry'd;
 Then strake the dagger untill his heart,
 And fell deid by her side.
- 29 Lord Thomas was buried without kirkwa,

 Fair Annet within the quiere,
 And o the tane thair grew a birk, 1

The other a bonny briere.

30 And ay they grew, and ay they threw,²
As they wad faine be neare;
And by this ye may ken right weil
They were twa luvers deare.

LOVE GREGOR 8

- 1 'O WHA will shoe my fu fair foot?

 And wha will glove my hand?

 And wha will lace my middle jimp,

 Wi the new made London band?
- 2 'And wha will kaim my yellow hair, Wi the new made silver kaim? And wha will father my young son, Till Love Gregor come hame?'
- 3 'Your father will shoe your fu fair foot, Your mother will glove your hand; to Your sister will lace your middle jimp Wi the new made London band.
- 4 'Your brother will kaim your yellow hair,
 Wi the new made silver kaim;
 And the king of heaven will father your bairn,

Till Love Gregor come haim.'

- 5 'But I will get a bonny boat, And I will sail the sea, For I maun gang to Love Gregor, Since he canno come hame to me.' 20
- 6 O she has gotten a bonny boat, And sailld the sa't sea fame; She langd to see her ain true-love, Since he could no come hame.
- 7 'O row your boat, my mariners, And bring me to the land,
- birch.
 twisted.
 Also known as The Lass of Roch Royal.
 mall

- For yonder I see my love's castle, Closs by the sa't sea strand.'
- 8 She has taen her young son in her arms,
 And to the door she's gone,
 30
 And lang she's knocked and sair she ca'd,
 But answer got she none.
- 9 'O open the door, Love Gregor,' she says. 'O open, and let me in; For the win blaws thro my yellow hair, And the rain draps oer my chin.'
- 10 'Awa, awa, ye ill woman,
 You'r uae come here for good;
 You'r but some witch, or wile warlock,⁵
 Or mer-maid of the flood.'
- 11 'I am neither a witch nor a wile warlock, Nor mer-maid of the sea, I am Fair Annie of Rough Royal; O open the door to me.'
- 12 'Gin ye be Annie of Rough Royal —
 And I trust ye are not she —
 Now tell me some of the love-tokens
 That past between you and me.'
- 13 'O dinna you mind now, Love Gregor,
 When we sat at the wine,
 How we changed the rings frae our fingers?
 And I can show thee thine.
- 14 'O yours was good, and good enneugh, But ay the best was mine; For yours was o the good red goud, But mine o the diamonds fine.
- 15 'But open the door now, Love Gregor,
 Open the door I pray,
 For your young son that is in my arms
 Will be dead ere it be day.'
- 16 'Awa, awa, ye ill woman,
 For here ye shanno win in;
 Gae drown ye in the raging sea,
 Or hang on the gallows-pin.'
- 17 When the cock had crawn, and day did dawn,
 And the sun began to peep,

Then it raise him Love Gregor, And sair, sair did he weep.

5 wizard.

- 18 'O I dreamd a dream, my mother dear, The thoughts o it gars me greet,¹ 70 That Fair Annie of Rough Royal Lay cauld dead at my feet.'
- 19 'Gin it be for Annie of Rough Royal
 That ye make a' this din,
 She stood a' last night at this door,
 But I trow she wan no in.'
- 20 'O wae betide ye, ill woman,
 An ill dead may ye die!
 That ye woudno open the door to her,
 Nor yet woud waken me.'
- 21 O he has gone down to yon shore-side,
 As fast as he could fare;
 He saw Fair Annie in her boat,
 But the wind it tossed her sair.
- 22 And 'Hey, Annie!' and 'How, Annie!
 O Annie, winna ye bide?'
 But aye the mair that he cried Annie,
 The braider grew the tide.
- 23 And 'Hey, Annie!' and 'How, Annie!

 Dear Annie speak to me!'

 But ay the louder he cried Annie,

 The louder roard the sea.
- 24 The wind blew loud, the sea grew rough, And dashd the boat on shore; Fair Annie floats on the raging sea, But her young son raise no more.
- 25 Love Gregor tare his yellow hair, And made a heavy moan; Fair Annie's corpse lay at his feet, But his bonny young son was gone.
- 26 O cherry, cherry was her cheek,
 And gowden was her hair,
 But clay cold were her rosey lips,
 Nae spark of life was there.
- 27 And first he 's kissed her cherry cheek, And neist he 's kissed her chin; And saftly pressed her rosey lips, But there was nae breath within.
- 28 'O wae betide my cruel mother,
 And an ill dead may she die!
 For she turnd my true-love frae my door,
 When she came sae far to me.'

1 makes me cry.

SWEET WILLIAM'S GHOST

1 Whan bells war rung, an mass was sung,
A wat a man 2 to bed were gone,

Clark Sanders came to Margret's window,

With mony a sad sigh and groan.

- 2 'Are ye sleeping, Margret,' he says, 'Or are ye waking, presentlie? Give me my faith and trouthe again, A wat, trew-love, 1 gied to thee.'
- 3 'Your faith and trouth ye's never get, Nor our trew love shall never twain,⁸ Till ye come with me in my bower, 11 And kiss me both cheek and chin.'
- 4 'My mouth it is full cold, Margret,
 It has the smell now of the ground;
 And if I kiss thy comely mouth,
 Thy life-days will not be long.
- 5 'Cocks are crowing a merry mid-larf, 4
 I wat the wild fule 5 boded day;
 Gie me my faith and trouthe again,
 And let me fare me on my way.'
- 6 'Thy faith and trouth thou shall na get, Nor our trew love shall never twin, Till ye tell me what comes of women A wat that dy's in strong traveling.'
- 7 'Their beds are made in the heavens high,

Down at the foot of our good Lord's knee,

Well set about wi gilly-flowers, A wat sweet company for to see.

8 'O cocks are crowing a merry middlarf,

A wat the wilde foule boded day; 30 The salms of Heaven will be sung, And ere now I 'le be misst away.'

- 9 Up she has tain a bright long wand, And she has straked⁶ her trouth thereon;
 - She has given (it) him out at the shotwindow,

Wi many a sad sigh and heavy groan.

Surely all men. 3 part. 4 A doubtful word. 5 fowl. 5 stroked, i.e., transferred it to the wand.

10 'I thank you, Margret, I thank you, Margret,

And I thank you hartilie;

- Gine ever the dead come for the quick, Be sure, Margret, I'll come again for thee.'
- 11 It's hose an shoon an gound ¹ alane
 She clame the wall and followed him,
 Untill she came to a green forest,
 On this she lost the sight of him.
- 12 'Is there any room at your head, Sanders?

 Is there any room at your feet?

 Or any room at your twa sides?

 Whare fain, fain woud I sleep.'
- 13 'There is na room at my head, Margret,
 There is na room at my feet;
 There is room at my twa sides,
 For ladys for to sleep.
- 14 'Cold meal 2 is my covering owre,
 But an my winding sheet;
 My bed it is full low, I say,
 Down among the hongerey worms I sleep.
- 15 'Cold meal is my covering owre,
 But an my winding sheet;
 The dew it falls na sooner down
 Than ay it is full weet.'

THE WIFE OF USHER'S WELL

- 1 THERE lived a wife at Usher's Well, And a wealthy wife was she; She had three stout and stalwart sons And sent them oer the sea.
- 2 They hadna been a week from her, A week but barely ane, Whan word came to the carline wife ³ That her three sons were gane.
- 3 They hadna been a week from her,
 A week but barely three,
 Whan word came to the carlin wife
 That her sons she'd never see.
- 4 'I wish the wind may never cease, Nor fashes in the flood,
- 1 gown. 2 mould. 3 old woman. 4 troubles.

- Till my three sons come hame to me, In earthly flesh and blood.'
- 5 It fell about the Martinmass,
 When nights are lang and mirk,⁵
 The carlin wife's three sons came hame,
 And their hats were o the birk.⁶
 20
- 6 It neither grew in syke 7 nor ditch, Nor yet in ony sheugh 8; But at the gates o Paradise, That birk grew fair eneugh,
- 7 'Blow up the fire, my maidens, Bring water from the well; For a' my house shall feast this night, Since my three sons are well.'
- 8 And she has made to them a bed, She's made it large and wide, so And she's taen her mantle her about, Sat down at the bed-side.
- 9 Up then crew the red, red cock, And up and crew the gray; The eldest to the youngest said, ''T is time we were away.'
- 10 The cock he hadna crawd but once,
 And clappd his wings at a',
 When the youngest to the eldest said,
 'Brother, we must awa.
- 11 'The cock doth craw, the day doth daw, The channerin worm doth chide; Gin we be mist out o our place, A sair pain we mann bide.
- 12 'Fare ye weel, my mother dear! Fareweel to barn and byre 10!
- 13 And fare ye weel, the bonny lass
 That kindles my mother's fire!'

LITTLE MUSGRAVE AND LADY BARNARD

1 As it fell one holy-day,

Hay downe,

As many be in the yeare,

When young men and maids together
did goe,

Their mattins and masse to heare,

6 dark. 6 birch. 7 trench. 8 furrew.
9 grumbling. 10 cow-house.

2 Little Musgrave came to the churchdore:

The preist was at private masse; But he had more minde of the faire women Than he had of our lady['s] grace.

3 The one of them was clad in green, Another was clad in pall,1 And then came in my Lord Bernard's wife.

The fairest amonst them all.

- 4 She cast an eye on Little Musgrave, As bright as the summer sun; And then bethought this Little Musgrave, This lady's heart have I woonn.
- 5 Quoth she, 'I have loved thee, Little Musgrave, Full long and many a day;' 'So have I loved you, fair lady, 20 Yet never word durst I say.
- 6 'I have a bower at Buckelsfordbery, Full daintyly it is deight: If thou wilt wend thither, thou Little Musgrave, Thou's lig 2 in mine armes all night.'
- 7 Quoth he, 'I thank yee, faire lady, This kindnes thou showest to me: But whether it be to my weal or woe, This night I will lig with thee.'
- 8 With that he heard, a little tyne page, By his ladye's coach as he ran: 'All though I am my ladye's foot-page, Yet I am Lord Barnard's man.
- 9 'My lord Barnard shall knowe of this. Whether I sink or swim;' And ever where the bridges were broake He laid him downe to swimme.
- 10 'A sleepe or wake, thou Lord Barnard, As thou art a man of life. For Little Musgrave is at Bucklesford-A bed with thy own wedded wife.
- 11 'If this be true, thou little tinny page, This thing thou tellest to me, Then all the land in Bucklesfordbery I freely will give to thee. 1 purple. 2 Thou shalt lie.

- 12 'But if it be a ly, thou little tinny page, This thing thou tellest to me, On the hyest tree in Bucklesfordbery Then hanged shalt thou be.'
- 13 He called up his merry men all: 50 'Come saddle me my steed; This night must I to Buckellsfordbery. For I never had greater need.'
- 14 And some of them whistld, and some of them sung, And some these words did say. And ever when my lord Barnard's horn blew. 'Away, Musgrave, away!'
- 15 'Methinks I hear the thresel-cock, Methinks I hear the jaye; Methinks I hear my lord Barnard, And I would I were away.'
- 16 'Lye still, lye still, thou Little Musgrave. And huggell me from the cold; 'T is nothing but a shephard's boy, A driving his sheep to the fold.
- 17 'Is not thy hawke upon a perch? Thy steed eats oats and hav: And thou a fair lady in thine armes, And wouldst thou bee away?'
- 18 With that my lord Barnard came to the dore. And lit a stone upon; He plucked out three silver keys, And he opened the dores each one.
- 19 He lifted up the coverlett, He lifted up the sheet: 'How now, how now, thou Littell Mus-Doest thou find my lady sweet?'
- 20 'I find her sweet,' quoth Little Musgrave, 'The more 't is to my paine: I would gladly give three hundred pounds

That I were on yonder plaine.'

21 'Arise, arise, thou Littell Musgrave, And put thy clothes on; It shall nere be said in my country I have killed a naked man.

- 22 'I have two swords in one scabberd,
 Full deere they cost my purse;
 And thou shalt have the best of them,
 And I will have the worse.'
- 23 The first stroke that Little Musgrave stroke, 90
 He hurt Lord Barnard sore;
 The next stroke that Lord Barnard stroke,
 Little Musgrave nere struck more.
- 24 With that bespake this faire lady,
 In bed whereas she lay:
 'Although thou'rt dead, thou Little Musgrave,
 Yet I for thee will pray.
- 25 'And wish well to thy soule will I, So long as I have life; So will I not for thee, Barnard, Although I am thy wedded wife.'
- 26 He cut her paps from off her brest;
 Great pity it was to see
 That some drops of this ladie's heart's blood
 Ran trickling downe her knee.
- 27 'Woe worth you, woe worth, my mery men all,
 You were nere borne for my good;
 Why did you not offer to stay my hand,
 When you see me wax so wood?
- 28 'For I have slaine the bravest sir knight
 That ever rode on steed;
 So have I done the fairest lady
 That ever did woman's deed.
- 29 'A grave, a grave,' Lord Barnard cryd,
 'To put these lovers in;
 But lay my lady on the upper hand,
 For she came of the better kin.'

BONNY BARBARA ALLAN

1 IT was in and about the Martinmas time,
When the green leaves were a falling,
That Sir John Græme, in the West
Country,
Fell in love with Barbara Allan.

- 2 He sent his man down through the town,

 To the place where she was dwelling:
 'O haste and come to my master dear,
 Gin ye be Barbara Allan.'
- 3 O hooly, hooly rose she up,
 To the place where he was lying,
 And when she drew the curtain by,
 'Young man, I think you're dying.'
- 4 'O it's I'm sick, and very, very sick,
 And 't is a' for Barbara Allan:'
 'O the better for me ye's never be,
 Tho your heart's blood were a spilling.
- 5 'O dinna ye mind, young man,' said she,
 'When ye was in the tavern a drinking,
 That ye made the healths gae round and round,
 And slighted Barbara Allan?'
- 6 He turned his face unto the wall, And death was with him dealing: 'Adieu, adieu, my dear friends all, And be kind to Barbara Allau.'
- 7 And slowly, slowly raise she up, And slowly, slowly left him, And sighing said, she coud not stay, Since death of life had reft him.
- 8 She had not gane a mile but twa,
 When she heard the dead-bell ringing,
 And every jow 2 that the dead-bell
 geid,3
 It cry'd, 'Woe to Barbara Allan!'
- 9 'O mother, mother, make my bed! O make it saft and narrow! Since my love died for me to-day, I'll die for him to-morrow.'

LAMKIN

1 It's Lamkin was a mason good as ever built wi stane; He built Lord Wearie's castle, but payment got he nane.

1 slowly. 2 stroke. 3 struck.

- 2 'O pay me, Lord Wearie, come, pay me my fee:'
 'I canna pay you, Lamkin, for I maun gang oer the sea.'
- 3 'O pay me now, Lord Wearie, come, pay me out o hand:' 'I canna pay you, Lamkin, unless I sell my land.'
- 4 'O gin ye winna pay me,
 I here sall mak a vow,
 Before that ye come hame again,
 ye sall hae cause to rue.'
- 5 Lord Wearie got a bonny ship, to sail the saut sea faem; Bade his lady weel the castle keep, ay till he should come hame.
- 6 But the nourice was a fause limmer 1
 as eer hung on a tree;
 She laid a plot wi Lamkin,
 whan her lord was oer the sea.
- 7 She laid a plot wi Lamkin, when the servants were awa, Loot him in at a little shot-window,² and brought him to the ha.
- 8 'O whare's a' the men o this house, that ca me Lamkin?'
 'They're at the barn-well thrashing; 't will be lang ere they come in.'
- 9 'And whare 's the women o this house, that ca me Lamkin?'
 - 'They 're at the far well washing; 't will be lang ere they come in.'
- 10 'And whare 's the bairns o this house, that ca me Lamkin?'
 - 'They 're at the school reading; 39 't will be night or they come hame.'

YOUNG WATERS

- 1 About Yule, when the wind blew cule,
 And the round tables 6 began,
 A there is cum to our king's court
 Mony a well-favord man.
- 2 The queen luikt owre the castle-wa, Belield baith dale and down, And there she saw Young Waters Cum riding to the town.
- 3 His footmen they did rin before, His horsemen rade behind; And mantel of the burning gowd Did keip him frae the wind.
- 4 Gowden-graithd 7 his horse before, And siller-shod behind; The horse Young Waters rade upon Was fleeter than the wind.
- 5 Out then spack a wylie lord,
 Unto the queen said he,
 'O tell me wha 's the fairest face
 Rides in the company?'
- 6 'I 've sene lord, and I 've sene laird, And knights of high degree, Bot a fairer face than Young Waters Mine eyne did never see.'
- 1 chamber. 2 amber. 3 of all. 4 wept. 5 thrush. 6 a game. 7 Gold-shod.

- Out then spack the jealous king,
 And an angry man was he:
 O if he had bin twice as fair,
 You might have excepted me.'
- 8 'You're neither laird nor lord,' she says,
 'Bot the king that wears the crown;
 There is not a knight in fair Scotland
 But to thee mann's how down.'
- 9 For a' that she coud do or say,
 Appeas'd he wad nae bee,
 Bot for the words which she had said,
 Young Waters he maun die.
- 10 They hae taen Young Waters,
 And put fetters to his feet;
 They hae taen Young Waters,
 And thrown him in dungeon deep. 40
- 11 'Aft I have ridden thro Stirling town In the wind bot and 9 the weit; But I neir rade thro Stirling town Wi fetters at my feet.
- 12 'Aft I have ridden thro Stirling town
 In the wind bot and the rain;
 Bot I neir rade thro Stirling town
 Neir to return again.'
- 13 They hae taen to the heiding-hill
 His young son in his craddle,
 And they hae taen to the heiding-hill
 His horse bot and his saddle.
- 14 They hae taen to the heiding-hill
 His lady fair to see,
 And for the words the queen had spoke
 Young Waters he did die.

THE BAILIFF'S DAUGHTER OF ISLINGTON

1 THERE was a youth, and a well belovd youth,

And he was a esquire's son, He loved the bayliff's daughter dear, That lived in Islington.

- 2 She was coy, and she would not believe That he did love her so, No, nor at any time she would Any countenance to him show.
- 3 But when his friends did understand
 His fond and foolish mind,
 They sent him up to fair London,
 An apprentice for to bind.
- 4 And when he had been seven long years, And his love he had not seen, 'Many a tear have I shed for her sake When she little thought of me.'
- 5 All the maids of Islington
 Went forth to sport and play;
 All but the bayliff's daughter dear;
 She secretly stole away.
- 6 She put off her gown of gray, And put on her puggish ¹ attire; She 's up to fair London gone, Her true-love to require.
- 7 As she went along the road, The weather being hot and dry, There was she aware of her true-love, At length came riding by.
- 8 She stept to him, as red as any rose,
 And took him by the bridle-ring: 30
 'I pray you, kind sir, give me one penny,
 To ease my weary limb.'
- 9 'I prithee, sweetheart, canst thou tell me Where that thou wast born?'

- At Islington, kind sir,' said she,
 'Where I have had many a scorn.'
- 10 'I prithee, sweetheart, canst thou tell
 me
 Whether thou dost know
 The bailiff's daughter of Islington?'
 'She's dead, sir, long ago.'
- 11 'Then will I sell my goodly steed,
 My saddle and my bow;
 I will into some far countrey,
 Where no man doth me know.'
- 12 'O stay, O stay, thou goodly youth!

 She's alive, she is not dead;

 Here she standeth by thy side,

 And is ready to be thy bride.'
- 13 'O farewel grief, and welcome joy,
 Ten thousand times and more!
 For now I have seen my own true-love,
 That I thought I should have seen no
 more.'

THE GREAT SILKIE OF SULE SKERRY²

- 1 An eartly nourris sits and sings, And aye she sings, 'Ba, lily wean! Little ken I my bairnis father, Far less the land that he staps in.'
- 2 Then are arose at her bed-fit,
 An a grumly guest I'm sure was he:
 Here am I, thy bairnis father,
 Although that I be not comelie.
- 3 'I am a man, upo the lan,
 An I am a silkie in the sea;
 And when I'm far and far frae lan,
 My dwelling is in Sule Skerrie.'
- 4 'It was na weel,' quo the maiden fair,
 'It was na weel, indeed,' quo she,
 'That the Great Silkie of Sule Skerrie Suld hae come and aught 4 a bairn to
 me.'
- 5 Now he has taen a purse of goud, And he has pat it upo her knee,
- 2 "The Great Seal of Sule Reef." This fine ballad, reminding one of Arnold's Forsaken Merman, was obtained from an old lady in the Shetland Islands in 1852.

- Sayin, Gie to me my little young son, An tak thee up thy nourris-fee.
- 6 'An it sall come to pass on a simmer's day,

 When the sin shines het on evera stane,
 That I will tak my little young son,
 An teach him for to swim the faem.
- 7 'An thu sall marry a proud gunner,
 An a proud gunner I'm sure he'll be,
 An the very first schot that ere he schoots, He'll schoot baith my young son and
 me.'

JOHNIE COCK

- 1 Johny he has risen up i the morn, Calls for water to wash his hands; But little knew he that his bloody hounds Were bound in iron bands.¹ bands Were bound in iron bands.
- 2 Johny's mother has gotten word o that,
 And care-bed ² she has taen:
 O Johny, for my benison,
 I beg you'l stay at hame;

There are some two score ballads of Robin Hood, the oldest in a MS., of about 1450; and one of these, printed about 1500, is the Gest of Robyn Hode in 456 stanzas — apparently nothing less than a little popular epic, wrought from separate, episodic ballads. The material is of course much older, for in Piers Plowman, composed about 1377, we learn that Sloth knew "rhymes of Robin Hood and Randolf Earl of Chester" better than he did his paternoster. Robin is a ballad creation, the ideal champion of the common people against their secular and spiritual oppressors, and the embodiment of the old English love of fair play and the open air.

 I'le make yond fellow that flyes soe fast
 To be both glad and ffaine.'
- 15 Iohn bent vp a good veiwe 4 bow,
 And ffetteled 5 him to shoote;
 The bow was made of a tender boughe,
 And fell downe to his foote.
- 16 'Woe worth thee, wicked wood,' sayd
 Litle Iohn,
 'That ere thou grew on a tree!
 Ffor this day thou art my bale,
 My boote 6 when thou shold bee!'
- 17 This shoote it was but looselye shott,
 The arrowe flew in vaine,
 And it mett one of the sheriffes men;
 Good William a Trent was slaine. 70
- 18 It had beene better for William a Trent
 To hange upon a gallowe
 Then for to lye in the greenwoode,
 There slaine with an arrowe.
- 19 And it is sayd, when men be mett, Six can doe more then three: And they have tane Litle Iohn, And bound him ffast to a tree.
- 20 'Thou shalt be drawen by dale and downe,' quoth the sheriffe,
 'And hanged bye on a hill:' so
 'But thou may ffayle,' quoth Litle Iohn,
 'If itt be Christs owne will.'

 - Guy was an archer good enoughe, But he cold neere shoote soe.
- 31 The second shoote Sir Guy shott,

 He shott within the garlande;
 But Robin Hoode shott it better then hee,

 For he clove the good pricke-wande.
- 32 'Gods blessing on thy heart!' sayes Guye,

'Goode ffellow, thy shooting is goode; For an thy hart be as good as thy hands,

Thou were better then Robin Hood.

33 'Tell me thy name, good ffellow,' quoth Guy,
'Under the leaves of lyne:'

'Nay, by my faith,' quoth good Robin,
'Till thou have told me thine.'

34 'I dwell by dale and downe,' quoth Guye,

And I have done many a curst turne; And he that calles me by my right name

Calles me Guye of good Gysborne.'

35 'My dwelling is in the wood,' sayes Robin;

'By thee I set right nought;
My name is Robin Hood of Barnesdale,
A ffellow thou has long sought.'

If thou have had the worse stroakes at my hand,
Thou shalt have the better cloathe.

- 44 Robin did off his gowne of greene, Sir Guy hee did it throwe; And hee put on that capull-hyde, That cladd him topp to toe.
- 45 'The bowe, the arrowes, and litle horne,
 And with me now I 'le beare; 180
 Ffor now I will goe to Barn[e]sdale,
 To see how my men doe ffare.'
- 46 Robin sett Guyes horne to his mouth,
 A lowd blast in it he did blow;
 That beheard the sheriffe of Nottingham,
 As he leaned under a lowe.
- 47 'Hearken! hearken!' sayd the sheriffe,
 'I heard noe tydings but good;
 Foryonder I heare Sir Guyes horne blowe,
 For he hath slaine Robin Hoode.
- 48 'For yonder I heare Sir Guyes horne blow,

Itt blowes soe well in tyde, For yonder comes that wighty yeoman, Cladd in his capull-hyde.

ROBIN HOOD'S DEATH AND BURIAL

- 1 When Robin Hood and Little John Down a down a down — Went oer yon bank of broom, Said Robin Hood bold to Little John, 'We have shot for many a pound.' Hey down, a down, a down.
- 2 'But I am notable to shoot one shot more, My broad arrows will not flee; But I have a cousin lives down below, Please God, she will bleed me.' 10
- 3 Now Robin he is to fair Kirkly gone, As fast as he can win; ³ But before he came there, as we do hear, He was taken very ill.
- 4 And when he came to fair Kirkly-hall,
 He knockd all at the ring,
 But none was so ready as his cousin herself
 For to let bold Robin in.
- 5 'Will you please to sit down, cousin Robin,' she said,

 'And drink some beer with me?' 20

No, I will neither eat nor drink, Till I am blooded by thee.'

6 'Well, I have a room, cousin Robin,' she said,
'Which you did never see,

And if you please to walk therein, You blooded by me shall be.'

- 7 She took him by the lily-white hand,
 And led him to a private room,
 And there she blooded bold Robin Hood,
 While one drop of blood would run down.
- 8 She blooded him in a vein of the arm, And locked him up in the room; Then did he bleed all the live-long day, Until the next day at noon.
- 9 He then bethought him of a casement there,
 Thinking for to get down;

But was so weak he could not leap, He could not get him down.

3 manage.

- 10 He then bethought him of his bugle-horn, Which hung low down to his knee; 40 He set his horn unto his mouth, And blew out weak blasts three.
- 11 Then Little John, when hearing him, As he sat under a tree, 'I fear my master is now near dead, He blows so wearily.'
- 12 Then Little John to fair Kirkly is gone,
 As fast as he can dree;
 But when he came to Kirkly-hall,
 He broke locks two or three:
- 13 Until he came bold Robin to see,
 Then he fell on his knee;
 'A boon, a boon,' cries Little John,
 'Master, I beg of thee.'
- 14 'What is that boon,' said Robin Hood, 'Little John, [thou] begs of me?' 'It is to burn fair Kirkly-hall, And all their nunnery.'
- 'Now nay, now nay,' quoth Robin Hood.
 'That boon I'll not grant thee; 60
 I never hurt woman in all my life,
 Nor men in woman's company.
- 16 'I never hurt fair maid in all my time, Nor at mine end shall it be; But give me my bent bow in my hand, And a broad arrow I 'll let flee And where this arrow is taken up, There shall my grave digged be.
- 17 'Lay me a green sod under my head,
 And another at my feet;
 And lay my bent bow by my side,
 Which was my music sweet;
 And make my grave of gravel and green,
 Which is most right and meet.
- 18 'Let me have length and breadth enough,
 With a green sod under my head;

With a green sod under my head; That they may say, when I am dead, Here lies bold Robin Hood.'

19 These words they readily granted him,
Which did bold Robin please: so
And there they buried bold Robin Hood,
Within the fair Kirkleys.

ROBIN HOOD RESCUING THE WIDOW'S THREE SONS

- 1 THERE are twelve months in all the year
 As I hear many men say,
 But the merriest month in all the year,
 Is the merry month of May.
- 2 Now Robin Hood is to Nottingham gone, With a link a down and a day, And there he met a silly old woman

And there he met a silly old woman, Was weeping on the way.

3 'What news? what news, thou silly old woman?

What news hast thou for me?'
Said she, 'There's three squires in Nottingham town
To-day is condemned to die.'

- 4 'O have they parishes burnt?' he said,
 'Or have they ministers slain?
 Or have they robbed any virgin,
 Or with other men's wives have lain?'
- 5 'They have no parishes burned, good sir,
 Nor yet have ministers slain,
 Nor have they robbed any virgin,
 Nor with other men's wives have
 lain.'
 - 6 'O what have they done?' said bold Robin Hood, 'I pray thee tell to me:'

'It's for slaying of the king's fallow deer, Bearing their long bows with thee.'

7 'Dost thou not mind, old woman,' he said,
'Since thou made me sup and dine?
By the truth of my body,' quoth bold

Robin Hood,
'You could not tell it in better time.'

- 8 Now Robin Hood is to Nottingham gone, With a link a down and a day, 30 And there he met with a silly old palmer, Was walking along the highway.
- 9 'What news? what news, thou silly old man?

What news, I do thee pray?'
Said he, 'Three squires in Nottingham town

Are condemned to die this day.'

10 'Come change thy apparel with me, old man,

Come change thy apparel for mine; Here is forty shillings in good silver, Go drink it in beer or wine.'

- 11 'O thine apparel is good,' he said, 'And mine is ragged and torn; Wherever you go, wherever you ride, Laugh neer an old man to scorn.'
- 12 'Come change thy apparel with me, old churl,

 Come change thy apparel with mine;

 Here are twenty pieces of good broad gold,

 Go feast thy brethren with wine.'
- 13 Then he put on the old man's hat,
 It stood full high on the crown:
 The first bold bargain that I come at,
 It shall make thee come down.
- 14 Then he put on the old man's cloak,
 Was patchd black, blew, and red;
 He thought no shame all the day long
 To wear the bags of bread.
- Then he put on the old man's breeks,¹
 Was patchd from ballup ² to side;
 By the truth of my body,' bold Robin can say,
 This man lovd little pride.'
- 16 Then he put on the old man's hose, Were patched from knee to wrist; 'By the truth of my body,' said bold Robin Hood, 'I'd laugh if I had any list.'8
- 17 Then he put on the old man's shoes,
 Were patched both beneath and aboon;
 Then Robin Hood swore a solemn oath,
 'It's good habit that makes a man.'
- 18 Now Robin Hood is to Nottingham gone, With a link a down and a down, 70 And there he met with the proud sheriff, Was walking along the town.
- 19 'O save, O save, O sheriff,' he said,
 'O save, and you may see!

 And what will you give to a silly old man
 To-day will your haugman be?'

 1 breeches. 2 front flap. 3 inclination.

20 'Some suits, some suits,' the sheriff he said,
'Some suits I'll give to thee;
Some suits, some suits, and pence thirteen

To-day's a hangman's fee.'

21 Then Robin he turns him round about,
And jumps from stock to stone;
'By the truth of my body,' the sheriff
he said,

'That's well jumpt, thou nimble old man.'

- 'I was neer a hangman in all my life,
 Nor yet intends to trade;
 But curst be he,' said bold Robin,
 'That first a hangman was made.
- 23 I've a bag for meal, and a bag for malt,
 And a bag for barley and corn;
 A bag for bread, and a bag for beef,
 And a bag for my little small horn.
- 24 'I have a horn in my pocket,
 I got it from Robin Hood,
 And still when I set it to my mouth
 For thee it blows little good.'
- 25 'O wind thy horn, thou proud fellow,
 Of thee I have no doubt;
 I wish that thou give such a blast
 Till both thy eyes fall out.'
- 26 The first loud blast that he did blow, He blew both loud and shrill; A hundred and fifty of Robin Hood's men Came riding over the hill.
- 27 The next loud blast that he did give, He blew both loud and amain, And quickly sixty of Robin Hood's men Came shining over the plain.
- 28 'O who are you,' the sheriff he said
 'Come tripping over the lee?', 110
 'The're my attendants,' brave Robin
 did say,
 'They'll pay a visit to thee.'
- 29 They took the gallows from the slack,⁴ They set it in the glen,
 They hangd the proud sheriff on that,
 Releasd their own three men.

HUGH OF LINCOLN.1

- 1 Four and twenty bonny boys Were playing at the ba, And by it came him sweet Sir Hugh, And he playd oer them a'.
- 2 He kicked the ba with his right foot, And catchd it wi his knee, And through-and-thro the Jew's window He gard 2 the bonny ba flee.
- 3 He's doen him to the Jew's castell, And walked it round about; And there he saw the Jew's daughter, At the window looking out.
- 4 'Throw down the ba, ye Jew's daugh-Throw down the ba to me!' 'Never a bit,' says the Jew's daughter, 'Till up to me come ye.'
- 5 'How will I come up? How can I come up? How can I come to thee? For as ye did to my auld father, The same ye'll do to me.'
- 6 She's gane till her father's garden, And pu'd an apple red and green; 'T was a' to wyle him sweet Sir Hugh, And to entice him in.
- 7 She's led him in through ae dark door, And sae has she thro nine; She's laid him on a dressing-table, And stickit him like a swine.
- 8 And first came out the thick, thick blood, And syne 8 came out the thin, And syne came out the bonny heart's blood; There was nae mair within.
- 9 She's rowd 4 him in a cake o lead, Bade him lie still and sleep; She 's thrown him in Our Lady's drawwell, Was fifty fathom deep.

1 Or The Jew's Daughter. The thirteenth century chroniclers tell the story. Such fabrications directed against the Jewshave persisted ever since, especially in Russia. Cf. Chaucer's Prioress's Tale. 3 then. 2 made. 4 rolled.

- 11 She's taen her mantle her about. Her coffer by the hand, And she 's gane out to seek her son, And wanderd oer the land.
- 12 She's doen her to the Jew's castell, Where a' were fast asleep: 'Gin ye be there, my sweet Sir Hugh. I pray you to me speak.'
- 13 She's doen her to the Jew's gar-Thought he had been gathering fruit: 'Gin ye be there, my sweet Sir Hugh, I pray you to me speak.'
- 14 She neard Our Lady's deep draw-well, Was fifty fathom deep: Whareer ye be, my sweet Sir Hugh, I pray you to me speak.'
- 15 'Gae hame, gae hame, my mither dear, Prepare my winding sheet, And at the back o merry Lincoln The morn 5 I will you meet.'
- 16 Now Lady Maisry is gane hame, Made him a winding sheet, And at the back o merry Lincoln The dead corpse did her meet.
- 17 And a' the bells o merry Lincoln Without men's hands were rung, And a' the books o merry Lincoln Were read without man's tongue, And neer was such a burial Sin Adam's days begun.

THE BATTLE OF OTTERBURN®

- 1 IT fell about the Lammas time, When the muir-men won their hay, That the doughty Earl Douglas went Into England to catch a prey.
- 5 tomorrow. • This battle was fought in 1388, and Froissart has a fine account of it in his Chronicles for that year. The ballad grew up presumably soon after. Our version is that supplied by James Hogg to Sir Walter Scott.

- 2 He chose the Gordons and the Graemes, With the Lindsays light and gay; But the Jardines wadna wi him ride, And they rued it to this day.
- 3 And he has burnt the dales o Tine
 And part of Almonshire,
 And three good towers on Roxbrugh
 fells
 He left them all on fire.
- 4 Then he marched up to Newcastle,
 And rode it round about:
 'O whae's the lord of this castle,
 Or whae's the lady o't?'
- 5 But up spake proud Lord Piercy then,
 And O but he spak hie!

 'I am the lord of this castle,
 And my wife 's the lady gaye.'
- 6 'If you are lord of this castle, Sae weel it pleases me; For ere I cross the border again The ane of us shall die.'
- 7 He took a lang speir in his hand, Was made of the metal free, And for to meet the Douglas then He rode most furiously.
- 8 But O how pale his lady lookd,
 Frae off the castle wa,
 When down before the Scottish spear
 She saw brave Piercy fa!
- 9 How pale and wan his lady lookd, Frae off the castle hieght, When she beheld her Piercy yield To doughty Douglas' might!
- 10 'Had we twa been upon the green,
 And never an eye to see,
 I should have had ye flesh and fell;
 But your sword shall gae wi me.'
- 11 'But gae you up to Otterburn,
 And there wait dayes three,
 And if I come not ere three days' end
 A fause lord ca ye me.'
- 12 'The Otterburn's a bonny burn,
 'T is pleasant there to be,
 But there is naught at Otterburn
 To feed my men and me.

- 13 'The deer rins wild owr hill and dale, The birds fly wild frae tree to tree, 50 And there is neither bread nor kale To fend my men and me.
- 14 'But I will stay at Otterburn,
 Where you shall welcome be;
 And if ye come not ere three days' end
 A coward I'll ca thee.
- 15 'Then gae your ways to Otterburn,
 And there wait dayes three;
 And if I come not ere three days' end
 A coward ye's came.'
- 16 They lighted high on Otterburn, Upon the bent 1 so brown, They lighted high on Otterburn, And threw their pallions 2 down.
- 17 And he that had a bonny boy
 Sent his horses to grass,
 And he that had not a bonny boy
 His ain servant he was.
- 18 But up then spak a little page,
 Before the peep of the dawn;
 O waken ye, waken ye, my good lord,
 For Piercy's hard at hand!'
- 19 'Ye lie, ye lie, ye loud liar, Sae loud I hear ye lie! The Piercy hadna men yestreen To dight 3 my men and me.
- 20 'But I have seen a dreary dream,
 Beyond the isle o Sky;
 I saw a dead man won the fight,
 And I think that man was I.'
- 21 He belted on his good broad-sword
 And to the field he ran,
 Where he met wi the proud Piercy,
 And a' his goodly train.
- 22 When Piercy wi the Douglas met,
 I wat he was right keen;
 They swakked their swords till sair they swat,
 And the blood ran them between.
- 23 But Piercy wi his good broad-sword,
 Was made o the metal free,
 Has wounded Douglas on the brow
 Till backward he did flee.

- 24 Then he calld on his little page, And said, 'Run speedily, And bring my ain dear sister's son, Sir Hugh Montgomery.'
- 25 Who, when he saw the Douglas bleed, His heart was wonder wae: 'Now, by my sword, that haughty lord Shall rue before he gae.'
- 26 'My nephew bauld,' the Douglas said, What boots the death of ane? Last night I dreamed a dreary dream. And I ken the day 's thy ain.1
- 27 'I dreamd I saw a battle fought Beyond the isle o Sky, When lo! a dead man wan the field, And I thought that man was I.
- 28 'My wound is deep, I fain wad sleep, Nae mair I 'll fighting see; Gae lay me in the breaken bush That grows on yonder lee.
- 29 'But tell na ane of my brave men That I lye bleeding wan, But let the name of Douglas still Be shouted in the van.
- 30 'And bury me here on this lee, Beneath the blooming briar, And never let a mortal ken A kindly Scot lyes here.'
- 31 He liftit up that noble lord, Wi the saut tear in his ee. And hid him in the breaken bush, On yonder lily lee.
- 32 The moon was clear, the day drew near. The spears in flinters flew, But mony gallant Englishman Ere day the Scotsman slew.
- 33 Sir Hugh Montgomery he rode Thro all the field in sight, And loud the name of Douglas still He urgd wi a' his might.
- 34 The Gordons good, in English blood They steeped their hose and shoon, The Lindsays flew like fire about, Till a' the fray was doon.

And the blood ran down like rain. 140

- 36 'O yield thee, Piercy,' said Sir Hugh, 'O yield, or ye shall die!' 'Fain wad I yield,' proud Piercy said, But neer to loun 2 like thee.'
- 37 'Thou shalt not yield to knave nor Nor shalt thou yield to me: But yield thee to the breaken bush That grows on yonder lee.'
- 38 'I will not yield to bush or brier, Nor will I yield to thee: 150 But I will yield to Lord Douglas, Or Sir Hugh Montgomery.
- 39 When Piercy knew it was Sir Hugh, He fell low on his knee, But soon he raisd him up again, Wi mickle courtesy.
- 40 He left not an Englishman on the field That he hadna either killd or taen Ere his heart's blood was cauld.

CHEVY CHASE 8

- 1 God prosper long our noble king. our liffes and saftyes all! A woefull hunting once there did in Chevy Chase befall.
- 2 To drive the deere with hound and horne Erle Pearcy took the way:

The child may rue that is unborne the hunting of that day!

fellow. Probably founded remotely on the same happening as Otterburn. This is the ballad that stirred Sir Philip Sidney in his Defence of Poesie to remark: "Certeinly I must confesse my own barbarousness. I never heard the olde song of Percy and Douglas that I found not my heart mooved more than with a trumpet; and yet it is sung but by some blind crouder [fiddler], with no rougher voyce then rude stile: which, being so evill apparrelled in the dust and cob-webbes of that uncivill age. what would it worke trymmed in the gorgeous eloquence of Pindar!" Addison's appreciation of it is in Nos. 70 and 74 of the Spectator.

TO

- 3 The stout Erle of Northumberland a vow to God did make His pleasure in the Scottish woods three sommers days to take,
- 4 The cheefest harts in Chevy C[h]ase to kill and beare away: These tydings to Erle Douglas came in Scottland, where he lay.
- 5 Who sent Erle Pearcy present word he would prevent his sport; The English erle, not fearing that, did to the woods resort,
- 6 With fifteen hundred bowmen bold, All chosen men of might, Who knew ffull well in time of neede to ayme their shafts arright.
- 7 The gallant greyhound[s] swiftly ran to chase the fallow deere; On Munday they began to hunt, ere daylight did appeare.
- 8 And long before high noone the had a hundred fat buckes slaine; 3c Then having dined, the drovyers went to rouze the deare againe.
- 9 The bowmen mustered on the hills, well able to endure;
 Theire backsids all with speciall care that day were guarded sure.
- 10 The hounds ran swiftly through the woods
 the nimble deere to take,
 That with their cryes the hills and dales an eccho shrill did make.
- 11 Lord Pearcy to the querry went to veiw the tender deere; Quoth he, 'Erle Douglas promised once this day to meete me heere;
- 12 'But if I thought he wold not come, noe longer wold I stay.' With that a brave younge gentlman thus to the erle did say:
- 13 'Loe, yonder doth Erle Douglas come, hys men in armour bright; 50 Full twenty hundred Scottish speres all marching in our sight.

- 14 'All men of pleasant Tivydale, fast by the river Tweede:'
 'O ceaze your sportts!' Erle Pearcy said, 'and take your bowes with speede.
- 15 'And now with me, my countrymen, your courage forth advance! For there was never champion yett, in Scottland nor in Ffrance,
- 16 'That ever did on horsbacke come, [but], and if my hap it were, I durst encounter man for man, with him to break a spere.'
- 17 Erle Douglas on his milke-white steede, most like a baron bold, Rode formost of his company, whose armor shone like gold.
- 18 'Shew me,' sayd hee, 'whose men you bee that hunt soe boldly heere,

 That without my consent doe chase and kill my fallow deere.'
- 19 The first man that did answer make was noble Pearcy hee, Who sayd, 'Wee list not to declare nor shew whose men wee bee;
- 20 'Yett wee will spend our deerest blod thy cheefest harts to slay.' Then Douglas swore a solempne oathe, and thus in rage did say:
- 21 'Ere thus I will outbraved bee, one of us tow shall dye; I know thee well, an erle thou art; Lord Pearcy, soe am I.
- 22 'But trust me, Pearcye, pittye it were, and great offence, to kill Then any of these our guiltlesse men, for they have done none ill.
- 23 'Let thou and I the battell trye, and set our men aside:' 90 'Accurst bee [he!]' Erle Pearcye sayd, 'by whome it is denyed.'
- 24 Then stept a gallant squire forth Witherington was his name — Who said, 'I wold not have it told To Henery our king, for shame,

- 25 'That ere my captaine fought on foote, and I stand looking on. You bee two Erles,' quoth Witherington, 'and I a squier alone;
- 26 'I'le doe the best that doe I may, while I have power to stand; While I have power to weeld my sword, I'le fight with hart and hand.'
- 27 Our English archers bent their bowes; their harts were good and trew; Att the first flight of arrowes sent, full foure score Scotts the slew.
- 28 To drive the deere with hound and horne,
 Dauglas bade on the bent;
 Two captaines moved with mickle might,
 their speres to shivers went.
- 29 They closed full fast on everye side, noe slacknes there was found, But many a gallant gentleman lay gasping on the ground.
- 30 O Christ! it was great greeve to see how eche man chose his spere,
 And how the blood out of their brests
 did gush like water cleare.
- 31 At last these two stout erles did meet, like captaines of great might; Like lyons woode ¹ they layd on lode; ² the made a cruell fight.
- 32 The fought untill they both did sweat, with swords of tempered steele,
 Till blood downe their cheekes like raine
 the trickling downe did feele.
- 33 'O yeeld thee, Pearcye!' Douglas sayd,
 'And in faith I will thee bringe where thou shall high advanced bee by Iames our Scottish king.
- 34 'Thy ransome I will freely give, and this report of thee, Thou art the most couragious knight [that ever I did see.]'

 2 load, i.e., they laid on heartily.

35 'Noe, Douglas!' quoth Erle Percy then, 'thy profer I doe scorne; I will not yeelde to any Scott that ever yett was borne!'

- 36 With that there came an arrow keene, out of an English bow, Which stroke Erle Douglas on the brest a deepe and deadlye blow.
- 37 Who never sayd more words than these; 'Fight on, my merry men all! For why, my life is att [an] end, lord Pearcy sees my fall.'
- 38 Then leaving liffe, Erle Pearcy tooke the dead man by the hand; 150 Who said, 'Erle Dowglas, for thy life, wold I had lost my land!
- 39 'O Christ! my verry hart doth bleed for sorrow for thy sake, For sure, a more redoubted knight mischance cold a never take.'
- 40 A knight amongst the Scotts there was which saw Erle Douglas dye, Who streight in hart did vow revenge upon the Lord Pearcye.
- 41 Sir Hugh Mountgomerye was he called,
 who, with a spere full bright,
 Well mounted on a gallant steed,
 ran feirely through the fight,
- 42 And past the English archers all, without all dread or feare, And through Erle Percyes body then he thrust his hatfull spere.
- 43 With such a vehement force and might his body he did gore,

 The staff ran through the other side a large cloth-yard and more.
- 44 Thus did both those nobles dye, whose courage none cold staine; An English archer then perceived the noble erle was slaine.
- 45 He had [a] good bow in his hand, made of a trusty tree;
 An arrow of a cloth-yard long to the hard head haled hee.

s could.

- 46 Against Sir Hugh Mountgomerye
 his shaft full right he sett;
 The grey-goose-winge that was there-on in his harts bloode was wett.
- 47 This fight from breake of day did last till setting of the sun,
 For when the rung the evening-bell the battele scarse was done.
- 48 With stout Erle Percy there was slaine
 Sir Iohn of Egerton,
 Sir Robert Harcliffe and Sir William,
 Sir Iames, that bold barron.
- 49 And with Sir George and Sir Iames, both knights of good account, Good Sir Raphe Rebbye there was slaine, whose prowesse did surmount.
- 50 For Witherington needs must I wayle as one in dolefull dumpes,

 For when his leggs were smitten of, he fought upon his stumpes.
- 51 And with Erle Dowglas there was slaine Sir Hugh Mountgomerye, And Sir Charles Morrell, that from feelde one foote wold never flee;
- 52 Sir Roger Hever of Harcliffe tow, his sisters sonne was hee; Sir David Lamwell, well esteemed, but saved he cold not bee.
- 53 And the Lord Maxwell, in like case, with Douglas he did dye;
 Of twenty hundred Scottish speeres, scarce fifty-five did flye.
- 54 Of fifteen hundred Englishmen went home but fifty-three; The rest in Chevy Chase were slaine, under the greenwoode tree.
- 55 Next day did many widdowes come their husbands to bewayle;
 They washt their wounds in brinish
 teares,
 but all wold not prevayle.

- 56 Theyr bodyes, bathed in purple blood, the bore with them away; They kist them dead a thousand times ere the were cladd in clay.

- 57 The newes was brought to Eddenborrow,
 where Scottlands king did rayne,
 That brave Erle Douglas soddainlye was with an arrow slaine.
- 58 'O heavy newes!' King Iames can say;
 'Scottland may wittenesse bee 230
 I have not any captaine more of such account as hee.'
- 59 Like tydings to King Henery came, within as short a space, That Pearcy of Northumberland was slaine in Chevy Chase.
- 60 'Now God be with him!' said our king,
 'sith it will noe better bee;
 I trust I have within my realme five hundred as good as hee.
- 61 'Yett shall not Scotts nor Scottland say but I will vengeance take,
 And be revenged on them all for brave Erle Percyes sake.'
- 62 This vow the king did well performe after on Humble-downe;
 In one day fifty knights were slayne, with lords of great renowne.
- 63 And of the rest, of small account,
 did many hundreds dye:
 Thus endeth the hunting in Chevy Chase,
 made by the Erle Pearcye.
- 64 God save our king, and blesse this land with plentye, ioy, and peace, And grant heneforth that foule debate twixt noble men may ceaze!

JOHNIE ARMSTRONG1

1 There dwelt a man in faire Westmerland,
Ionnë Armestrong men did him call,
He had nither lands nor rents coming in,

He had nither lands nor rents coming in, Yet he kept eight score men in his hall.

¹ This ballad is historical. In 1530 James V of Scotland cleaned up the Border, and among other outlaws hanged John Armstrong. This English version shifts Johnie's residence to Westmoreland.

- 2 He had horse and harness for them all, Goodly steeds were all milke-white; O the golden bands an about their necks, And their weapons, they were all alike.
- 3 Newes then was brought unto the king
 That there was sicke a won 1 as hee, 10
 That lived lyke a bold out-law,
 And robbed all the north country.
- 4 The king he writt an a letter then,
 A letter which was large and long;
 He signed it with his owne hand,
 And he promised to doe him no wrong.
- 5 When this letter came Ionnë untill, His heart it was as blythe as birds on the tree:

Never was I sent for before any king, My father, my grandfather, nor none but mee.

6 'And if wee goe the king before,
I would we went most orderly;
Every man of you shall have his scarlet cloak,
Laced with silver laces three.

7 'Every won of you shall have his velvett coat,

Laced with sillver lace so white;

O the golden bands an about your necks,
Black hatts, white feathers, all alyke.'

8 By the morrow morninge at ten of the clock,
Towards Edenburough gon was hee,
And with him all his eight score men;
Good lord, it was a goodly sight for 9 When Ionnë came befower the king, He fell downe on his knee;

to see!

'O pardon, my soveraine leige,' he said,
'O pardon my eight score men and mee!'

10 'Thou shalt have no pardon, thou traytor strong,

For thy eight score men nor thee; For to-morrow morning by ten of the clock,

Both thou and them shall hang on the gallow-tree.'

1 such a one.

11 But Ionnë looke'd over his left shoulder, Good Lord, what a grevious look looked hee!

Saying, 'Asking grace of a graceles

Why there is none for you nor me.'

- 12 But Ionnë had a bright sword by his side
 And it was made of the mettle so free,
 That had not the king stept his foot aside,
 He had smitten his head from his faire boddë.
- 13 Saying, 'Fight on, my merry men all,
 And see that none of you be taine; 50
 For rather than men shall say we were hange'd,

Let them report how we were slaine.'

14 Then, God wott, faire Eddenburrough rose,

And so besett poore Ionnë rounde,
That fowerscore and tenn of Ionnes best men
Lay gasping all upon the ground.

- 15 Then like a mad man Ionnë laide about, And like a mad man then fought hee, Untill a falce Scott came Ionnë behinde, And runn him through the faire boddee.
- 16 Saying, 'Fight on, my merry men all, And see that none of you be taine; For I will stand by and bleed but awhile, And then will I come and fight againe.'
- 17 Newes then was brought to young Ionnë
 Armestrong,
 As he stood by his nurses knee,

Who vowed if ere he live'd for to be a man,
O the treacherous Scots revengd hee 'd be.

MARY HAMILTON²

- 1 Word's gane to the kitchen, And word's gane to the ha, That Marie Hamilton gangs wi bairn To the hichest Stewart of a'.
- ² There may be some slight historical foundation to this famous ballad. See the discussion by Child, II, 381, and Andrew Lang, Blackwood's Magazine, Sept. 1, 1895, p. 381. This version, the oldest, was first printed in 1824.

- 2 He's courted her in the kitchen, He's courted her in the ha, He's courted her in the laigh 1 cellar, And that was warst of a'.
- 3 She's tyed it in her apron
 And she's thrown it in the sea;
 Says, 'Sink ye, swim ye, bonny wee babe!
 You'l neer get mair o me.'
- 4 Down then cam the auld queen, Goud tassels tying her hair: 'O Marie, where's the bonny wee babe That I heard greet sae sair?'
- 5 'There was never a babe intill my room,
 As little designs to be;
 It was but a touch o my sair side,
 Come oer my fair bodie.'
- 6 'O Marie, put on your robes o black, Or else your robes o brown, For ye maun gang wi me the night, To see fair Edinbro town.'
- 7 'I winna put on my robes o black, Nor yet my robes o brown; But I'll put on my robes o white, To shine through Edinbro town.'
- 8 When she gaed up the Cannogate, She laughd loud laughters three; 30 But whan she cam down the Cannogate The tear blinded her ee.
- 9 When she gaed up the Parliament stair, The heel cam aff her shee; And lang or she cam down again She was condemnd to dee.
- 10 When she cam down the Cannogate,
 The Cannogate sae free,
 Many a ladie lookd oer her window,
 Weeping for this ladie.
- 11 'Ye need nae weep for me,' she says, 'Ye need nae weep for me; For had I not slain mine own sweet babe, This death I wadna dee.
- 12 'Bring me a bottle of wine,' she says,
 'The best that eer ye hae,
 That I may drink to my weil-wishers,
 And they may drink to me.

1 low.

13 'Here's a health to the jolly sailors,

That sail upon the main;

Let them never let on to my father and mother

But what I'm coming hame.

- 14 'Here's a health to the jolly sailors,
 That sail upon the sea;
 Let them never let on to my father and mother
 That I cam here to dee.
- 15 'Oh little did my mother think,
 The day she cradled me,
 What lands I was to travel through,
 What death I was to dee.
- 16 'Oh little did my father think, The day he held up me, What lands I was to travel through, What death I was to dee.
- 17 'Last night I washd the queen's feet,
 And gently laid her down;
 And a' the thanks I've gotten the nicht
 To be hangd in Edinbro town!
- 18 'Last nicht there was four Maries,
 The nicht there 'I be but three; 70
 There was Marie Seton, and Marie
 Beton,
 And Marie Carmichael, and me.'

CAPTAIN CAR²

1 It befell at Martynmas, When wether waxed colde, Captaine Care said to his men, We must go take a holde.

Syck, sike, and to-towe sike,⁸
And sike and like to die;
The sikest nighte that ever I abode,
God lord have merey on me!

- 2 'Haille, master, and wether 4 you will,
 And wether ye like it best';
 To the castle of Creerynbroghe,
 And there we will take our reste.'
- ² Also called Edom o Gordon from the historical original, Adam Gordon, who in 1571 as deputy-lieutenant for Mary Queen of Scots thus burnt the Forbes (not Hamilton) hold of Towie.

* too too sick. 4 whither.

- 3 'I knowe wher is a gay castle, Is builded of lyme and stone; Within their is a gay ladie, Her lord is riden and gone.'
- 4 The ladie she lend on her castle-walle, She loked upp and downe; There was she ware of an host of men, Come riding to the towne.
- 5 'Se yow, my meri men all,
 And se yow what I see?
 Yonder I see a host of men,
 I muse who they bee.'
- 6 She thought he had ben her wed lord, As he comd riding home; Then was it traitur Captaine Care, The lord of Ester-towne.
- 7 They wer no soner at supper sett,
 Then after said the grace,
 Or Captaine Care and all his men
 Wer lighte aboute the place.
- 8 'Gyve ouer thi howsse, thou lady gay, And I will make the a bande; ¹ To-nighte thou shall ly within my armes, To-morrowe thou shall ere ² my lande.'
- 9 Then bespacke the eldest sonne,
 That was both whitt and redde:
 O mother dere, geve over your howsse,
 Or elles we shalbe deade.'
- 10 'I will not geve over my hous,' she saithe, 'Not for feare of my lyffe; It shalbe talked throughout the land, The slaughter of a wyffe.
- 11 'Fetch me my pestilett,3
 And charge me my gonne,
 That I may shott at yonder bloddy butcher,
 The lord of Easter-towne.'
- 12 Styfly vpon her wall she stode,
 And lett the pellettes flee;
 But then she myst the blody bucher,
 And she slew other three.
- 13 '[I will] not geve over my hous,' she saithe,
 'Netheir for lord nor lowne;
 Nor yet for traitour Captaine Care,
 The lord of Easter-towne.
 'compact. 'pistolet.

- 14 'I desire of Captine Care,
 And all his bloddye band,
 That he would save my eldest sonne,
 The eare of all my lande.'
- 15 'Lap him in a shete,' he sayth, 'And let him downe to me, And I shall take him in my armes, His waran 'shall I be.'
- 16 The captayne sayd unto him selfe: Wyth sped, before the rest, He cut his tonge out of his head, His hart out of his brest.
- 17 He lapt them in a handkerchef,
 And knet it of knotes three,
 And cast them over the castell-wall,
 At that gay ladye.
- 18 'Fye vpon the, Captayne Care, And all thy bloddy band! For thou hast slayne my eldest sonne, The ayre of all my land.'
- 19 Then bespake the yongest sonne,

 That sat on the nurses knee,
 Sayth, 'Mother gay, geve over your house;
 It smoldereth me.'
- 20 'I wold geve my gold,' she saith,
 'And so I wolde my ffee,
 For a blaste of the westryn wind,
 To dryve the smoke from thee.
- 21 'Fy vpon the, John Hamleton,
 That ever I paid the hyre!
 For thou hast broken my castle-wall,
 And kyndled in the ffyre.'
- 22 The lady gate 5 to her close parler, The fire fell aboute her head; She toke vp her children thre, Seth, 'Babes, we are all dead.'
- 23 Then bespake the hye steward, That is of hye degree; Saith, 'Ladie gay, you are in close,⁶ Wether ye fighte or flee.'
- 24 Lord Hamleton dremd in his dream,
 In Carvall where he laye,
 His halle were all of fyre,
 His ladie slayne or daye.⁷

 *warrant. *got, went. *enclosed. *pefore day.

- 25 'Busk and bowne,¹ my mery men all, Even and go ye with me; For I dremd that my haal was on fyre, My lady slayne or day.'
- 26 He buskt him and bownd hym,
 And like a worthi knighte;
 And when he saw his hall burning,
 His harte was no dele lighte.
- 27 He sett a trumpett till his mouth,
 He blew as it plesd his grace;
 Twenty score of Hamlentons
 Was light aboute the place.
- 28 'Had I knowne as much yesternighte
 As I do to-daye,
 Captaine Care and all his men
 Should not have gone so quite.
- 29 'Fye vpon the, Captaine Care,
 And all thy blody bande!
 Thou haste slayne my lady gay,
 More wurth then all thy laude.
- 30 'If thou had ought 2 eny ill will,' he saith,
 'Thou shoulde have taken my lyffe,
 And have saved my children thre,
 All and my lovesome wyffe.'

THE BONNY EARL OF MURRAY'S

- 1 YE Highlands, and ye Lawlands, Oh where have you been? They have slain the Earl of Murray, And they layd him on the green.
- 2 'Now wae be to thee, Huntly!
 And wherefore did you sae?
 I bade you bring him wi you,
 But forbade you him to slay.'
- 3 He was a braw gallant,
 And he rid at the ring;
 And the bonny Earl of Murray,
 Oh he might have been a king!

² The handsome James Stewart, Earl of Murray, was slain in 1592.

- 5 He was a braw gallant,
 And he playd at the glove;
 And the bonny Earl of Murray,
 Oh he was the Queen's love!
- 6 Oh lang will his lady
 Look oer the castle Down,
 Eer she see the Earl of Murray
 Come sounding thro the town!
 Eer she, etc.

KINMONT WILLIE 4

O have ye na heard o the fause Sakelde?
O have ye na heard o the keen Lord
Scroop?

How they hae taen bauld Kinmont Willie,

On Hairibee to hang him up?

2 Had Willie had but twenty men,
But twenty men as stout as he,
Fause Sakelde had never the Kinmont
taen,
Wi eight score in his companie.

- 3 They band his legs beneath the steed,
 They tied his hands behind his back; to
 They guarded him, fivesome on each side,
 - And they brought him ower the Liddel-rack.
- 4 They led him thro the Liddel-rack,
 And also thro the Carlisle sands;
 They brought him to Carlisle castell,
 To be at my Lord Scroope's commands.
- 5 'My hands are tied, but my tongue is free,
 And whae will dare this deed avow?
 Or answer by the border law?
 Or answer to the bauld Buccleuch?' 20
- 6 'Now haud thy tongue, thou rank reiver!5

There's never a Scot shall set ye free:

Before ye cross my castle-yate, I trow ye shall take farewell o me.'

⁴ This ballad, founded on actual events of about 1596, has been much touched up by Sir Walter Scott.
⁵ robber.

- 7 'Fear na ye that, my lord,' quo Willie;
 'By the faith o my bodie, Lord
 Scroop,' he said,
 - 'I never yet lodged in a hostelrie But I paid my lawing 1 before I gaed.'
- 8 Now word is gane to the bauld Keeper, In Branksome Ha² where that he lay, That Lord Scroope has taen the Kinmont Willie,

Between the hours of night and day.

- 9 He has taen the table wi his hand, He garrd the red wine spring on hie; 'Now Christ's curse on my head,' he said.
 - 'But avenged of Lord Scroop I'll be!
- 10 'O is my basnet a widow's curch? 4
 Or my lance a wand of the willowtree?
 - Or my arm a ladye's lilye hand?

- 11 'And have they taen him Kinmont Willie, Against the truce of Border tide, And forgotten that the bauld Bacleuch Is keeper here on the Scottish side?
- 12 'And have they een taen him Kinmont
 Willie,
 Withouten either dread or fear,

And forgotten that the bauld Bacleuch Can back a steed, or shake a spear?

- 13 'O were there war between the lands,
 As well I wot that there is none,
 I would slight 6 Carlisle castell high,
 Tho it were builded of marble-stone.
- 14 'I would set that castell in a low,'
 And sloken 8 it with English blood;
 There's nevir a man in Cumberland
 Should ken where Carlisle castell stood.
- 15 'But since nae war's between the lands, And there is peace, and peace should be,
 - I'll neither harm English lad or lass,
 And yet the Kinmont freed shall be!'

- 18 There were five and five before them a', Wi hunting-horns and bugles bright; 70 And five and five came wi Buccleuch, Like Warden's men, arrayed for fight.
- 19 And five and five like a mason-gang, That carried the ladders lang and hie; And five and five like broken men; 10 And so they reached the Woodhouse-lee.
- 20 And as we crossed the Bateable Land,
 When to the English side we held,
 The first o men that we met wi,
 Whae sould it be but fause Sakelde! so
- 21 'Where be ye gaun, ye hunters keen?'
 Quo fause Sakelde; 'come tell to
 me!'
 - 'We go to hunt an English stag, Has trespassd on the Scots countrie.'
- 22 'Where be ye gaun, ye marshal-men?'
 Quo fause Sakelde; 'come tell to me true!'
 - 'We go to catch a rank reiver, Has broken faith wi the bauld Buccleuch.'
- 23 'Where are ye gaun, ye mason-lads, Why a' your ladders lang and hie?' 'We gang to herry '11 a corbie's nest, 91
 - That wons 12 not far frae Woodhouse-lee.'
- 24 'Where be ye gaun, ye broken men?'
 Quo fause Sakelde; 'come tell to

- 25 'Why trespass ye on the English side? Row 1-footed outlaws, stand !' quo he; The neer a word had Dickie to say, Sae he thrust the lance thro his faulse bodie. *00
- 26 Then on we held for Carlisle toun. And at Staneshaw-bank the Eden we crossd:

The water was great, and meikle of spait,2 But the nevir a horse nor man we lost.

27 And when we reached the Staneshawbank.

The wind was rising loud and hie; And there the laird garrd 8 leave our steeds.

For fear that they should stamp and nie.

28 And when we left the Staneshaw-bank, The wind began full loud to blaw: 110 But 't was wind and weet, and fire and

31 'Now sound out, trumpets!' quo Buccleuch:

'Let's waken Lord Scroope right merrilie!'

Then loud the Warden's trumpets blew 'O whae dare meddle wi me?'

- 32 Then speedilie to wark we gaed, And raised the slogan ane and a', And cut a hole thro a sheet of lead. And so we wan to the castel-ha.

43 Buccleuch has turned to Eden Water, Even where it flowd frae bank to brim,

And he has plunged in wi a' his band, And safely swam them thro the stream.

- 44 He turned him on the other side, And at Lord Scroope his glove flung he:
 - 'If ye like na my visit in merry England,
 In fair Scotland come visit me!'
- 45 All sore astonished stood Lord Scroope, He stood as still as rock of stane; He scarcely dared to trew his eyes When thro the water they had gane.

THE BONNIE HOUSE O AIRLIE 2

1 IT fell on a day, and a bonny summer day,

When corn grew green and yellow, That there fell out a great dispute Between Argyll and Airly.

2 Argyll has raisd an hundred men, An hundred men, and so many, And he is away by the back of Dur

And he is away by the back of Dunkeld,

For to plunder the bonny house of Airly.

3 Lady Margaret looks oer her bowerwindow,

And O but she looks weary!

And there she spied the great Argyll,

Coming to plunder the bonny house of Airly.

- 1 trust.
- The Earl of Argyle sacked and burnt Airlie in 1640.

4 'Come down, come down, Lady Margret,' he said,

'Come down, and kiss me fairly:'
O I will not kiss the great Argyll,

If he should not leave a standing stone in Airly.'

5 He hath taken her by the left shoulder, Says, 'Lady, where lyes thy dowry?' 'It's up and it's down by the bonny bank-side,

Amongst the planting of Airly.'

6 They have sought it up, they have sought it down,

They have sought it both late and early,
And they have found it in the bonny
plumb-tree

That shines on the bowling-green of Airly.

7 He hath taken her by the middle so small,

And O but she lookd weary!
He hath laid her down by the bonny
burn-side,

Till he hath plundered the bonny house of Airly.

8 'If my good lord were at home this night,
As he is with Prince Charly,
Nouther you nor no Scottish lord

Durst have set a foot on the bowlinggreen of Airly.

9 'Ten bonny sons I have born unto him, The eleventh neer saw his daddy;

Although I had an hundred more, I would give them all to Prince Charly.'

THE BARON OF BRACKLEY®

1 Inverey cam down Decside, whistlin and playin,

He was at brave Braikley's yett 4 ere it was dawin.⁵

- 2 He rappit fu loudly an wi a great roar, Cried, 'Cum doun, cum doun, Braikley, and open the door.
- 3 Various tragedies in the history of the Brackley family have supplied the material for this.

- 3 'Are ye sleepin, Baronne, or are ye wakin?
 - There 's sharpe swords at your yett, will gar your blood spin.
- 4 'Open the yett, Braikley, and lat us within,
 - Till we on the green turf gar your bluid rin.'
- 5 Out spak the brave baronne, owre the castell-wa:
 - Are ye cum to spulyie 1 and plunder mi ha?
- 6 'But gin ye be gentlemen, licht and cum
 - Gin ye drink o my wine, ye'll nae gar 2 my bluid spin.
- 7 'Gin ye be hir'd widifus, ye may gang
 - Ye may gang to the lawlands and steal their fat ky.4
- 8 'Ther spulyie like rievers o wyld kettrin clan.⁵
 - Who plunder unsparing baith houses and lan.
- 9 'Gin ye be gentlemen, licht an cum [in], Ther's meat an drink i my ha for every man.
- 10 'Gin ye be hir'd widifus, ye may gang by, Gang doun to the lawlands, and steal horse and ky.'
- 11 Up spak his ladie, at his bak where she
 - 'Get up, get up, Braikley, and be not afraid;
 - The'r but young hir'd widifus wi belted plaids.'
- 12 'Cum kiss me, mi Peggy, I'le nae langer stay,
 - For I will go out and meet Inverey.
- 13 'But haud your tongue, Peggy, and mak nae sie din,
 - For you same hir'd widifus will prove themselves men.'
 - 1 spoil. 2 make. 3 gallows-birds. 4 kine. 5 steal like thieves of the wild robber clans.

- 14 She called on her marys, 6 they cam to her hand;
 - Cries, 'Bring me your rocks,' lassies, we will them command.
- 15 'Get up, get up, Braikley, and turn bak
 your ky,
 Or me an mi women will them defy.
- 16 'Cum forth then, mi maidens, and show them some play;
 - We'll ficht them, and shortly the cowards will fly.
- 17 'Gin I had a husband, whereas I hae nane, He woud nae ly i his bed and see his ky taen.
- 18 'Ther's four-and-twenty milk-whit calves, twal 8 o them ky,

 In the woods o Glentanner, it 's ther thei a' ly.
- 19 'Ther's goat i the Etnach, and sheep o the brae, Ana'will be plunderd by young Inverey.'
- 20 'Now haud your tongue, Peggy, and gie me a gun, 40 Ye'll see me gae furth, but I'll never cum in.
- 21 'Call mi brother William, mi unkl also, Mi cousin James Gordon; we'll mount and we'll go.'
- 22 When Braikley was ready and stood i the closs,
 - He was the bravest baronne that eer mounted horse.
- 23 When all wer assembld o the castell green,

 No man like brave Braikley was ther to be seen.
- 'Turn bak, brother William, ye are a bridegroom;
- 25 'Wi bonnie Jean Gordon, the maid o
 - O sichin and sobbin she'll soon get her fill.'
 - 6 maids. 7 distaffs. 8 twelve. 9 sighing.

- 26 'I'm no coward, brother, 't is kend I'm a man:
 - I'll ficht i your quarral as lang 's I can stand.
- 27 'I'll ficht, my dear brother, wi heart and gude will,
 - And so will young Harry that lives at the mill.
- 28 'But turn, mi dear brother, and nae langer stay:
 - What'll cum o your ladie, gin Braikley thei slay?
- 29 'What'll cum o your ladie and bonnie young son?
 - O what 'll cum o them when Braikley is gone?' 58
- 30 'I never will turn: do you think I will fly? But here I will ficht, and here I will die.'
- 31 'Strik dogs,' crys Inverey, 'and ficht till ye're slayn,
 - For we are four hundered, ye are but four men.
- 32 'Strik, strik, ye proud boaster, your honour is gone,
 - Your lands we will plunder, your castell we'll burn.'
- 33 At the head of the Etnach the battel began, At Little Auchoilzie thei killd the first man.
- 34 First thei killd ane, and soon they killd twa.
 - Thei killd gallant Braikley, the flour o them a'.
- 35 Thei killd William Gordon, and James o the Knox,
 - And brave Alexander, the flour o Glenmuick.
- 36 What sichin and moaning was heard i
 - For the Baronne o Braikley, who basely was slayn!
- 37 'Cam ye bi the castell, and was ye in there?
 - Saw ye pretty Peggy tearing her hair ?'

- 38 'Yes, I cam by Braikley, and I gaed in there,
 - And there [saw] his ladie braiding her hair.
- 39 'She was rantin, and dancin, and singin
 - And vowin that nicht she woud feest Inverey.
- 40 'She eat wi him, drank wi him, welcomd
 - Was kind to the man that had slayn her baronne.'
- 41 Up spake the son on the nourice's knee, 'Gin I live to be a man, revenged I'll be.'
- 42 Ther's dool i the kitchin, and mirth i
- The Baronne o Braikley is dead and awa.

BONNIE GEORGE CAMPBELL

- 1 Hie upon Hielands, and laigh ¹ upon Tay, Bonnie George Campbell rode out on a day.
- 2 He saddled, he bridled, and gallant rode he, And hame cam his guid horse, but never cam he.
- 3 Out came his mother dear, greeting fu sair,² And out cam his bonnie bryde, riving her hair.
- 4 'The meadow lies green, the corn is unshorn, But Bonnie George Campbell will never return.'
- 5 Saddled and bridled and booted rode he,
 A plume in his helmet,
 a sword at his knee.
- 6 But toom 3 cam his saddle, all bloody to see, Oh, hame cam his guid horse, but never cam he!
- 1 low. 2 Weeping full sore. 2 empty.

BEWICK AND GRAHAM1

1 Old Grahame [he] is to Carlisle gone, Where Sir Robert Bewick there met he;

In arms to the wine they are gone, And drank till they were both merry.

2 Old Grahame he took up the cup, And said, 'Brother Bewick, here's to thee;

And here's to our two sons at home, For they live best in our country.'

3 'Nay, were thy son as good as mine,
And of some books he could but
read,

With sword and buckler by his side, To see how he could save his head,

4 'They might have been calld two bold brethren

Where ever they did go or ride;
They might [have] been calld two bold brethren.

They might have crackd the Border-side.

5 'Thy son is bad, and is but a lad, And bully 2 to my son cannot be; For my son Bewick can both write and read,

And sure I am that cannot he.' 20

6 'I put him to school, but he would not learn,

I bought him books, but he would not read; But my blessing he 's never have

Till I see how his hand can save his head.'

7 Old Grahame called for an account, And he askd what was for to pay; There he paid a crown, so it went round, Which was all for good wine and hay.

8 Old Grahame is into the stable gone, Where stood thirty good steeds and three:

He's taken his own steed by the head, And home rode he right wantonly.

1 In spite of incongruous touches in the spirit of the eighteenth century — the date of the oldest copy this is a proper ballad.

3 brother-in-arms.

9 When he came home, there did he espy, A loving sight to spy or see,

There did he espy his own three sons, Young Christy Grahame, the foremost was he.

10 There did he espy his own three sons, Young Christy Grahame, the foremost was he:

'Where have you been all day, father, That no counsel you would take by me?'

11 'Nay, I have been in Carlisle town,
Where Sir Robert Bewick there met
me;

He said thou was bad, and calld thee a lad,

And a baffled man by thou I be.

12 'He said thou was bad, and calld thee lad,

And bully to his son cannot be;
For his son Bewick can both write and
read.

And sure I am that cannot thee.

13 'I put thee to school, but thou would not learn,

I bought thee books, but thou would not read; 50

But my blessing thou's never have Till I see with Bewick thou can save thy head.'

14 'Oh, pray forbear, my father dear;
That ever such a thing should be!
Shall I venture my body in field to fight
With a man that's faith and troth to
me?'

15 'What's that thou sayst, thou limmer 8 loon?

Or how dare thou stand to speak to me?

If thou do not end this quarrel soon, Here is my glove thou shalt fight me,'

16 Christy stoopd low unto the ground, 61
Unto the ground, as you'll understand:

Of father, put on your glove again,
The wind hath blown it from your hand.

a rascally.

- 17 'What's that thou sayst, thou limmer loon?
 - Or how dare thou stand to speak to me?
 - If thou do not end this quarrel soon, Here is my hand thou shalt fight me.'
- 18 Christy Grahame is to his chamber gone, And for to study, as well might be, 70 Whether to fight with his father dear, Or with his bully Bewick he.
- 19 'If it be [my] fortune my bully to kill,
 As you shall boldly understand,
 In every town that I ride through,
 They 'll say, There rides a brotherless man!
- 20 'Nay, for to kill my bully dear,
 I think it will be a deadly sin;
 And for to kill my father dear,
 The blessing of heaven I neer shall win.

 80
- 21 'O give me your blessing, father,' he said,
 'And pray well for me for to thrive;
 If it be my fortune my bully to kill,
 I swear I'll neer come home alive.'
- 22 He put on his back a good plate-jack, And on his head a cap of steel, With sword and buckler by his side; O gin 1 he did not become them well!
- 23 'O fare thee well, my father dear!

 And fare thee well, thou Carlisle
 town!

 90

 If it be my fortune my bully to kill,
 - I swear I'll neer eat bread again.
- 24 Now we'll leave talking of Christy
 Grahame,
 And talk of him again belive;
 But we will talk of bonny Bewick,
 Where he was teaching his scholars five.

- 25 Now when he had learned them well to fence,
 - To handle their swords without any doubt,
 - He's taken his own sword under his arm,
 - And walkd his father's close about.

- 26 He lookd between him and the sun,
 To see what farleys he could see;
 There he spy'd a man with armour on,
 As he came riding over the lee.
- 27 'I wonder much what man yon be
 That so boldly this way does come;
 I think it is my nighest friend,
 I think it is my bully Grahame. 108
- 28 'O welcome, O welcome, bully Grahame!
 O man, thou art my dear, welcome!
 O man, thou art my dear, welcome!
 For I love thee best in Christendom.'
- 29 'Away, away, O bully Bewick,
 And of thy bullyship let me be!
 The day is come I never thought on;
 Bully, I'm come here to fight with
 thee.'
- 30 'O no! not so, O bully Grahame! That eer such a word should spoken be!
 - I was thy master, thou was my scholar: So well as I have learned thee.' 120
- 31 'My father he was in Carlisle town,
 Where thy father Bewick there met he;
 He said I was bad, and he calld me a lad,
 And a baffled man by thou I be.'
- 32 'Away, away, O bully Grahame,
 And of all that talk, man, let us be!
 We'll take three men of either side
 To see if we can our fathers agree.'
- 33 'Away, away, O bully Bewick,
 And of thy bullyship let me be! 130
 But if thou be a man, as I trow thou art, Come overt his ditch and fight with
 me.'
- 34 'O no! not so, my bully Grahame!

 That eer such a word should spoken be!

 Shall I venture my body in field to fight

 With a man that 's faith and troth to

 me?'
- 35 'Away, away, O bully Bewick,
 And of all that care, man, let us be!
 If thou be a man, as I trow thou art,
 Come over this ditch and fight with
 me.'

* strange sights.

36 'Now, if it be my fortune thee, Grahame, to kill,

As God's will 's, man, it all must be; But if it be my fortune thee, Grahame, to kill.

'T is home again I 'll never gae.'

37 'Thou art of my mind then, bully Bewick,

And sworn-brethren will we be;
If thou be a man, as I trow thou art,
Come over this ditch and fight with
me.'

38 He flang his cloak from [off] his shoulders.

His psalm-book out of his hand flang he, 150

He clapd his hand upon the hedge, And oer lap he right wantonly.

39 When Grahame did see his bully come,
The salt tear stood long in his eye:

(Now needs must I say that thou art a

'Now needs must I say that thou art a man,

That dare venture thy body to fight with me.

- 40 'Now I have a harness on my back;
 I know that thou hath none on thine;
 But as little as thou hath on thy back,
 Sure as little shall there be on mine.'
- 41 He flang his jack from off his back, 161 His steel cap from his head flang he;

He's taken his sword into his hand, He's tyed his horse unto a tree.

42 Now they fell to it with two broa[d swords],

For two long hours fought Bewick [and he];

Much sweat was to be seen on them both,

But never a drop of blood to see.

43 Now Grahame gave Bewick an ackward 1 stroke, 169

An ackward stroke surely struck he; He struck him now under the left breast,

Then down to the ground as dead fell he.

1 awkward, backhand.

- 44 'Arise, arise, O bully Bewick,
 Arise, and speak three words to me!
 Whether this be thy deadly wound,
 Or God and good surgeons will mend
 thee.'
- 45 'O horse, O horse, O bully Grahame,
 And pray do get thee far from me!
 Thy sword is sharp, it hath wounded
 my heart,
 And so no further can I gae. 180
- 46 'O horse, O horse, O bully Grahame,
 And get thee far from me with speed!
 And get thee out of this country quite!
 That none may know who 's done the deed.'
- 47 'C if this be true, my bully dear,
 The words that thou dost tell to me,
 The vow I made, and the vow I'll keep;
 I swear I'll be the first that die.'
- 48 Then he stuck his sword in a moodyhill,²
 Where he lap thirty good foot and three;
 First he bequeathed his soul to God,

First he bequeathed his soul to God, And upon his own sword-point lap he.

- 49 Now Grahame he was the first that died, And then came Robin Bewick to see; 'Arise, arise, O son!' he said, 'For I see thou's won the victory.
- 50 'Arise, arise, O son!' he said,
 'For I see thou's won the victory:'
 [Father, co]uld ye not drunk your wine
 at home,
 [And le]tten me and my brother be?
- 51 'Nay, dig a grave both low and wide, And in it us two pray bury; But bury my bully Grahame on the sunside, For I'm sure he won the victory.'
- 52 Now we'll leave talking of these two brethren, In Carlisle town where they lie slain,

And talk of these two good old men.
Where they were making a pitiful

2 mole-hill.

- 53 With that bespoke now Robin Bewick:
 'O man was I not much to blame?
 I have lost one of the liveliest lads 211
 That ever was bred unto my name.'
- 54 With that bespoke my good lord Grahame:

'O man, I have lost the better block; I have lost my comfort and my joy, I have lost my key, I have lost my lock.

- 55 'Had I gone through all Ladderdale, And forty horse had set on me, Had Christy Grahame been at my back, So well as he woud guarded me.' 220
- 56 I have no more of my song to sing, But two or three words to you I'll name:

But't will be talk'd in Carlisle town
That these two [old] men were all the blame.

THE DOWY HOUMS O YARROW1

- 1 LATE at een, drinkin the wine, Or early in a mornin, The set a combat them between, To fight it in the dawnin.
- 2 'O stay at hame, my noble lord! O stay at hame, my marrow!² My cruel brother will you betray, On the dowy houms o Yarrow.'
- 3 'O fare ye weel, my lady gaye!
 O fare ye weel, my Sarah!
 For I maun gae, tho I neer return
 Frae the dowy banks o Yarrow.'
- 4 She kissed his cheek, she kaimd his hair,

As she had done before, O; She belted on his noble brand, An he's awa to Yarrow.

5 O he's gane up yon high, high hill —
I wat he gaed wi sorrow —
And in a den spied nine armd men,
I the dowy houms o Yarrow.

 1 The doleful banks of Yarrow. Also called The Braes of Yarrow.

2 sweetheart.

- 6 'O ir 4 ye come to drink the wine, As ye hae doon before, O? Or ir ye com to wield the brand, On the bonny banks o Yarrow?'
- 7 'I im no come to drink the wine, As I hae don before, O, But I im come to wield the brand, On the dowy houms o Yarrow.'
- 8 Four he hurt, an five he slew,
 On the dowy houms o Yarrow,
 Till that stubborn knight came him behind,
 An ran his body thorrow.

9 'Gae hame, gae hame, good-brother John, An tell your sister Sarah

To come an lift her noble lord, Who's sleepin sound on Yarrow.'

10 'Yestreen I dreamd a dolefu dream; I kend b there wad be sorrow; I dreamd I pu'd the heather green, On the dowy banks o Yarrow.'

- 11 She gaed up yon high, high hill I wat she gaed wi sorrow — An in a den spy'd nine dead men, On the dowy houms o Yarrow.
- 12 She kissed his cheek, she kaimed his hair,
 As oft she did before, O;
 She drank the red blood frae him ran,
 On the dowy houms o Yarrow.
- 13 'O haud your tongue, my douchter
 dear,
 For what needs a' this sorrow?

 I 'll wed you on a better lord
 Than him you lost on Yarrow.'
- 14 'O hand your tongue, my father dear,
 And dinna grieve your Sarah;
 A better lord was never born
 Than him I lost on Yarrow.
- 15 'Tak hame your ousen,6 take hame your kye,7
 For they hae bred our sorrow;
 I wiss 8 that they had a' gane mad
 Whan they cam first to Yarrow.'

4 are. 5 knew. 6 oxen. 7 kine. 8 wish.

THE DÆMON LOVER 1

1 'O WHERE have you been, my long, long love.

This long seven years and mair?' O I'm come to seek my former vows Ye granted me before.'

2 'O hold your tongue of your former

For they will breed sad strife: O hold your tongue of your former vows. For I am become a wife.'

- 3 He turned him right and round about, And the tear blinded his ee: 'I wad never hae trodden on Irish ground, If it had not been for thee.
- 4 'I might hae had a king's daughter, Far, far beyond the sea: I might have had a king's daughter, Had it not been for love o thee.'
- 5 'If ye might have had a king's daughter, Yer sel ye had to blame: Ye might have taken the king's daughter. For ye kend that I was nane.
- 6 'If I was to leave my husband dear, And my two babes also, O what have you to take me to, If with you I should go?'
- 7 'I hae seven ships upon the sea -The eighth brought me to land -With four-and-twenty bold mariners, And music on every hand.'
- 8 She has taken up her two little babes, Kissd them baith cheek and chin: O fair ye weel, my ain two babes, For I'll never see you again.'
- 9 She set her foot upon the ship, No mariners could she behold: But the sails were o the taffetie, And the masts o the beaten gold.
- 10 She had not sailed a league, a league, A league but barely three, When dismal grew his countenance, And drumlie 2 grew his ee. 1 Often called James Harris.

2 gloomy.

- 11 They had not saild a league, a league, A league but barely three, Until she espied his cloven foot, And she wept right bitterlie.
- 12 'O hold your tongue of your weeping,' savs he. 'Of your weeping now let me be; I will shew you how the lilies grow On the banks of Italy.'
- 13 'O what hills are you, you pleasant hills, That the sun shines sweetly on?' 50 'O you are the hills of heaven,' he said, 'Where you will never win.' 8
- 14 'O whaten a mountain is yon,' she said, 'All so dreary wi frost and snow?' 'O you is the mountain of hell,' he cried, 'Where you and I will go.'
- 15 He strack the tap-mast wi his hand, The fore-mast wi his knee, And he brake that gallant ship in twain. And sank her in the sea.

OUR GOODMAN

- 1 Hame came our goodman, And hame came he, And then he saw a saddle-horse. Where nae horse should be.
- 2 'What's this now, goodwife? What's this I see? How came this horse here, Without the leave o me?'
 - Recitative. 'A horse?' quo she. 'Ay, a horse,' quo he.
- 3 'Shame fa your cuckold face, Ill mat 4 ye see! 'T is naething, but a broad sow, My minnie 5 sent to me.'
 - 'A broad sow?' quo he. 'Ay, a sow,' quo shee.

 - 'Water-stoups?' quo he.
 'Ay, water-stoups,' quo she.
- 8 'Far hae I ridden,
 And farer hae I gane,
 But siller spurs on water-stoups
 I saw never nane.'
- 9 Hame came our goodman,
 And hame came he,
 And he saw a sword,
 Whare a sword should na be.

 'Ay, a maid,' quo she.
- 24 'Far hae I ridden,
 And farer hae I gane,
 But lang-bearded maidens
 I saw never nane.'

GET UP AND BAR THE DOOR

- 1 IT fell about the Martinmas time,
 And a gay time it was then,
 When our good wife got puddings 1 to make,
 And she's boild them in the pan.
- 2 The wind sae cauld blew south and north, And blew into the floor; Quoth our goodman to our goodwife, 'Gae out and bar the door.'
- 3 'My hand is in my hussyfskap,²
 Goodman, as ye may see;

 An it shoud nae be barrd this hundred year,

 It's no be barrd for me.'
- 4 They made a paction tween them twa, They made it firm and sure, That the first word whaeer should speak, Should rise and bar the door.
- 5 Then by there came two gentlemen,
 At twelve o'clock at night,
 And they could neither see house nor hall,
 Nor coal nor candle-light.
- 6 'Now whether is this a rich man's house, Or whether is it a poor?'
 - 1 sausages. 2 housewifery.

- But neer a word wad ane o them speak, For barring of the door.
- 7 And first they ate the white puddings,
 And then they ate the black;
 Tho muckle thought the goodwife to hersel,
 Yet neer a word she spake.
- 8 Then said the one unto the other,
 'Here, man, tak ye my knife;
 Do ye tak aff the auld man's beard,
 And I'll kiss the goodwife.'
- 9 'But there's nae water in the house, And what shall we do than?' What ails thee at the pudding-broo,⁸ That boils into the pan?'
- 10 O up then started our goodman,
 An angry man was he:
 Will ye kiss my wife before my een,
 And scad 4 me wi pudding-bree? ' 40
- 11 Then up and started our goodwife,
 Gied three skips on the floor:
 'Goodman, you've spoken the foremost word,
 Get up and bar the door.'

THE WIFE WRAPT IN WETHER'S SKIN

- 1 SHE wadna bake, she wadna brew, Hollin,⁵ green hollin, For spoiling o her comely hue. Bend your bow, Robin.
- 2 She wadna wash, she wadna wring, For spoiling o her gay goud ring.
- 3 Robin he's gane to the fald And catched a weather by the spauld.6
- 4 And he has killed his weather black And laid the skin upon her back
- 5 'I darena pay 7 you, for your kin, But I can pay my weather's skin.
- 6 'I darena pay my lady's back, But I can pay my weather black.'
 - brew, juice. scald. holly. beat.

20

- 7 'O Robin, Robin, lat me be, And I'll a good wife be to thee.
- 8 'It's I will wash, and I will wring, And never mind my gay goud ring.
- 9 'It's I will bake, and I will brew, And never mind my comely hue.
- 10 'And gin ye thinkna that eneugh, I'se tak the goad and I 'se ca 1 the pleugh.
- 11 'Gin ye ca for mair whan that is doon, I'll sit i the neuk 2 and I'll dight 8 your shoon.'

THE BITTER WITHY

- 1 As it fell out on a Holy day, The drops of rain did fall, did fall, Our Saviour asked leave of His mother Mary If He might go play at ball.
- 2 'To play at ball, my own dear Son, It's time you was going or gone, But be sure let me hear no complaint of At night when You do come home.'
- 3 It was upling seorn and downling scorn, Oh, there He met three jolly jerdins: 8 Oh, there He asked the three jolly jer-
- 1 call, drive. 2 nook, corner. 3 clean. 4 The Bitter Withy, probably a genuine popular ballad, was first recorded in 1868, and printed by Mr. Frank Sidgwick in Notes and Queries, Series 10, IV, 84 f., July, 1905. See Pub. Mod. Lang. Ass. Am., vol. 23, p. 141, for a discussion of it by G. H. Gerould. It is representative of many mediæval tales of the Saviour's childhood.

If they would go play at ball.

An inexplicable word.

- 4 'Oh, we are lords' and ladies' sons, Born in bower or in hall, And You are but some poor maid's child Born'd in an ox's stall.'
- 5 'If you are lords' and ladies' sons. Born'd in bower or in hall, Then at the very last I'll make it ap-That I am above you all.' 20
- 6 Our Saviour built a bridge with the beams of the sun, And over He gone, He gone He, And after followed the three jolly jer-And drownded they were all three.
- 7 It was upling scorn and downling scorn. The mothers of them did whoop and

Crying out, 'Mary mild, call home your Child.

For ours are drownded all.'

8 Mary mild, Mary mild, called home her Child, And laid our Saviour across her knee.

And with a whole handful of bitter withv 6

She gave Him slashes three.

9 Then He says to His Mother, 'Oh! the withy, oh! the withy,

The bitter withy that causes me to smart, to smart,

Oh! the withy it shall be the very first

That perishes at the heart.' 6 willow twig.

HOW SCOTLAND LEARNED TO LOVE LIBERTY

(1, 179-246)

QUHEN 16 schir Edward, the mychty king. Had on this wyss 17 done his likyng 18 Off Ihone the Balleoll, that swa sone Was all defawtyt 19 and undone. To Scotland went he than in hy, And all the land gan occupy: So hale,20 that bath castell and toune War in-till 21 his possessioune, Fra Weik anent Orknay To Mullyr-snwk in Gallaway: And stuffyt all with Ingliss men. Schyrreffys and bailyheys maid he then; And alkyn 22 othir officeris. That for to gowern land afferis,28 He maid off Inglis nation; That worthyt 24 than sa ryth fellone,25 And sa wykkyt and cowatouss, And swa hawtane 26 and dispitouss, That Scottis men mycht do na thing That evir mycht pleyss to thar liking.27 Thar wyffis wald that oft forly,28 And thar dochtrys dispitusly; And gyff 29 ony thar-at war wrath, Thai watyt 80 hym wele with gret scaith, For thai suld fynd sone enchesone 81 To put hym to destructione. And gyff that ony man thaim by Had ony thing that wes worthy, As horss, or hund, or other thing, That plesand war to thar liking, With rycht or wrang it have wald thai. And gyf ony wald thaim withsay, Thai suld swa do, that thai suld tyne 32 Othir land or lyff, or leyff 33 in pyne.

THE BATTLE OF BANNOCK-

(XII, 407-588)

THE Scottis men, quhen it wes day, Thair mess devotly herd thai say, Syne tuk a sop, and maid thame yar.1 And guhen, thai all assemblit war, And in thair battalis 2 all purvait, With thair braid baneris all displayit, Thai maid knychtis, as it efferis 8 To men that oysis 4 thai mysteris. The kyng maid Walter Stewart knycht, And Iames of Douglass, that wes wicht, to And other als of gret bounte He maid, ilkaue 6 in thair degre. Quhen this wes done, that I you say, Thai went all furth in gud aray, And tuk the playne full apertly,7 Mony wicht man, gud and hardy, That wer fulfillit of gret bounte. In-till 8 thair rowtis 9 men mycht se The Ynglis men, in othir party, That right as angelis schane brightly, War nocht arayit on sie maner; For all thair battalis sammyn 10 wer In a schiltrum; 11 bot quhethir it wes Throu the gret stratnes 12 of the plass, That thai war rad 18 till byd 14 fichting, Or that it wes for abaysing,15 I wat 16 nocht; bot in a schiltrum It semyt thai war, all and some, Outane 17 the vaward anerly, That with ane richt gret cumpany 30 Be thame-selvin arayit war, And till the battale maid thame yar. That folk our-tuk 18 ane mekill 19 feld On breid, guhar mony a schynand scheld, And mony a burnyst bricht armour, And mony man of gret valour, And mony a baner, bricht and scheyne, Micht in that gret schiltrum be seyne. And quhen the kyng of Yngland Saw Scottis men sa tak on hand To tak the hard feild so planly, And apon fut, he had ferly,20 And said, 'Quhat? will you Scottis ficht?' 'Yaa, sekirly, schir,' than said a knycht, Schir Ingerame Vmphrevell hat 21 he, And said, 'Forsuth, schir, now I se

Bot and yhe 24 will trow my consale, Yhe sall discomfit thame lichtly. Yhe sal vithdraw hyne 25 suddanly, With battalis, baneris, and pennownys, Quhill that we pass our palyeownys; 26 And ye sall se als soyne at 27 thai, Magre thair lordis, sall brek aray, And scale 28 thame, our harness to ta.29 And quhen we se thame scalit swa, Prik we than on thame hardely, And we sall haf thame weill lichtly. For than sall nane be knyt 80 to ficht, That may withstand our mekill mycht.' 'I will nocht,' said the king, 'perfay,81 Do sa; for ther sall no man say That I suld eschewe the battale, Na withdraw me for sic rangale.' 82 Quhen this wes said that er 38 said I. The Scottis men full devotly Knelyt all doune, till God to pray, And a schort prayer thair maid thai Till God, till help thame in that ficht. And quhen the Yngliss king has sicht Of thame kneland, he said in hy -84 'Yon folk knelis till ask mercy. Schir Yngerame said, 'Ye say suth now; Thai ask mercy, bot nocht at yow. For thair trespass to God thai cry. I tell yow a thing sekirly, That you men will wyn all or de, For doubt of ded 35 thar sall nane fle.' 'Now be it swa,' than said the kyng, 'We sall it se but 36 delaying.' He gert 87 trump up to the assemble; On athir 38 syd than men mycht se Full mony wicht men and worthy, All ready till do chevelry.

That till the erd doune stremand yud.25

The erll of Murreff and his men So stoutly thame contenit 26 then, That thai wan plass 27 ay mair and mair On thair fais, the quhethir 28 thai war Ay ten for ane, or ma, 29 perfay; Swa that it semyt weill that thai 160 War tynt 30 emang so gret menghe, 31 As thai war plungit in the se. And guhen the Yugliss men has sevne The erll and all his men be-deyne 82 Fecht sa stoutly, but effraying, 88 Richt as thai had nane abaysing,34 Thai pressit thame with all thar mycht. And thai, with speris and suerdis 35 brycht, And axis that rycht scharply schar, 36 In-myd the visage 87 met thame thar Thar men mycht se ane stalwart stour.88 And mony men of gret valour With speris, macyss, 39 and with knyvis, And other wapnys vissill 40 thair lyvis. Swa that mony fell doune all ded; The gyrss wox 41 with the blude all red. The erll, that wicht wes and worthy, And his men faucht so manfully, That, quha sa 42 had seyne thaim that day, I trow, forsuth, that thai suld say, That thai suld do thair devour 48 wele, Swa that thair fayis suld it feill.

(XIII, 1-408)

Qwhen that thir two first batellis wer Assemblit, as I said yow er, The Steward, Walter that than wes, And the gud lord als of Dougless, In a battale quhen that thai saw The erll, foronten ⁴⁴ dreid or aw, Assemmyll ⁴⁶ with his cumpany On all the folk so sturdely, For till help him thai held thar way With thar battale in gud aray,

THE DEATH OF WALLACE

(XI, 1305-1406)

On Wednysday the fals Sotheroun furth brocht,

Till martyr him as thai befor had wrocht. Rycht suth it is, a martyr was Wallace, Als Osauold, Edmunt, Eduuard, and Thomas.

1 violent. 2 must be, 3 too. 4 cure thee. 5 harm. 7 redeem. 7 banish. 8 righteousness.

Off men in armes led him a full gret rout.
With a bauld spreit gud Wallace blent about:

A preyst he askyt, for God at deit 10 on tre. King Eduuard than cummandyt his clerge, And said; 'I charge, apayn 11 off loss off lyve.

Nane be sa bauld you tyrand for to schryve.

He has rong ¹² lang in contrar my hienace. ¹³ A blyst byschop sone, present in that place, Off Canterbery he than was rychtwys lord, Agayn the king he maid this rycht record; And said; 'My selff sall her his confessioun, Gyff I haiff mycht, in contrar off thi croun. And ¹⁴ thou throu force will stop me off this thing.

I vow to God, quhilk is my rychtwys king, That all Ingland I sall her enterdyt, 19 And mak it knawin thou art ane herretyk. The sacrement of kyrk I sall him geiff; Syn 15 tak thi chos, to sterve 16 or lat him leiff. 17

It war mar waill, 18 in worschip off thi croun, To kepe sic ane in lyff in thi bandoun, 19 Than all the land and gud at thow has refyd. 20

Bot covatice the ay fra honour drefyd.²¹
Thow has thi lyff rongyn ²² in wrangwis

Off quhich the name is clepit 11 properly Boece, eftere him that was the compiloure, Schewing [the] counsele of philosophye, Compilit by that noble senatoure

Off Rome, quhilom 12 that was the warldis floure.

And from estate by fortune [for] a qubile 20 Forjugit 18 was to povert 14 in exile :

And there, to here this worthy lord and clerk, His metir suete, full of moralitee; His flourit pen so fair he set a-werk, Discryving 15 first of his prosperitee, And out of that his infelicitee;

And than how he, in his poetly report,16 In philosophy can him to confort.17

And though I stude abaisit the a lyte, No wonder was; for-quhy my wittis all Were so overcom with plesance and delyte, Onely throu latting of myn eyen fall,

That sudaynly my hert became hir thrall For ever, of free will; for of manace There was no takyn in hir suetë face.

And in my hede I drewe ryght hastily, And eft-sonës 3 I lent it forth agevne. And sawe hir walk, that verray womanly, 200

With no wight mo, bot onely wommen tuevne.

Than gan I studye in my-self, and seyne, 'A! suete, ar ve a warldly crëature, Or hevinly thing in likenesse of nature?

'Or ar ye god Cupidis owin princesse, And cummyn are to louse me out of band?

Or ar ye verray Nature the goddesse, That have depaynted with your hevinly

This gardyn full of flouris, as they stand? Quhat sall I think, allace! quhat reverence Sall I min[i]ster to your excellence?

'Gif ye a goddesse be, and that ye like To do me payne, I may it noght astert;4 Gif ye be warldly wight, that dooth me sike, Quhy lest 6 God mak you so, my derrest

THE TALE OF THE UPLANDISH 2 MOUSE AND THE BURGESS 8 MOUSE

ESOPE, myne author, makis mentioun
Of twa myis, and thay wer sisteris deir,
Of quham the eldest dwelt in ane bor-

rous 4 toun,
The uther wynnit uponland, weill neir, 5
Solitar, quhyle under busk, quhyle under breir,

Quhylis in the corne, and uther mennis skaith.6

As outlawis dois and levis on thair waith.7

This rurall Mous in to the wynter tyde

Had hunger, cauld, and tholit 8 greit

The uther Mous that in the burgh can byde

Wes gild brother and maid ane free bur-

Toll fre als, but custum 9 mair or les, And fredome had to ga quhair ever scho list, Amang the cheis in ark, 10 and meill in kist. 11

Ane tyme quhen scho wes full and unfute sair, 12

Scho tuik in mynde hir sister uponland, And langit for to heir of hir weilfair,

To se quhat lyfe scho had under the wand 18;

Bairfute, allone, with pykestalf in hir hand,

As pure 14 pilgryme scho passit out of toun, 20 To seik hir sister baith ouer daill and doun.

THE GOLDEN TARGE

RYGHT as the stern 1 of day begouth to schyne,

Quhen gone to bed war Vesper and Lucyne, I raise, and by a rosere 2 did me rest; Up sprang the goldyn candill matutyne,

With clere depurit bemes cristallyne,
Glading the mery foulis in thair nest;
Or Phebus was in purpur kaip ³ revest
Up raise the lark, the hevyns menstrale

In May, in till a morow myrthfullest.

Full angellike thir birdis sang thair houris 4 Within thair courtyns grene, in to thair bouris,

Apparalit quhyte and red, wyth blomes suete:

Anamalit was the felde wyth all colouris, The perly droppis schake in silvir schouris, Quhill all in balme did branch and levis flete: 5

To part fra Phebus did Aurora grete,⁶
Hir cristall teris I saw hyng on the flouris, Quhilk he for lufe all drank up with his

For mirth of May, wyth skippis and wyth hoppis,

The birdis sang upon the tender croppis,7
With curiouse note, as Venus chapell cleris:

The rosis yong, new spreding of thair knoppis,8

War powderit brycht with hevinly beriall 9 droppis,

Throu bemes rede, birnyng as ruby sperkis;

The skyes rang for schoutyng of the larkis,

The purpur hevyn ourscailit in silvir sloppis 10

Ourgilt the treis, branchis, leivis and barkis.

THE DANCE OF THE SEVEN DEADLY SINS

OFF Februar the fyiftene nycht,
Full lang befoir the dayis lycht,
I lay in till a trance;
And then I saw baith Hevin and Hell:

Me thocht, amangis the feyndis fell,

Mahoun ² gart cry ane dance Off schrewis ³ that wer nevir schrevin, Aganiss the feist of Fasternis evin, ⁴ To mak thair observance;

He bad gallandis ga graith a gyiss,⁵ And kast up gamountis ⁶ in the skyiss, That last came out of France.

'Lat se,' quod he, 'now quha begynnis?'
With that the fowll Sevin Deidly Synnis
Begowth to leip at anis.

And first of all in dance wes Pryd,
With hair wyld 7 bak and bonet on syd,
Lyk to mak vaistie wanis: 8

Lyk to mak vaistie wanis; ⁸
And round abowt him, as a quheill,
Hang all in rumpillis to the heill
His kethat ⁹ for the nanis: ¹⁰

Mony prowd trumpour ¹¹ with him trippit Throw skaldand fyre, ay as thay skippit Thay gyrnd ¹² with hiddouss granis.¹³

lie harlottis on hawtane wviss 14

Heilie harlottis on hawtane wyiss ¹⁴
Come in with mony sindrie gyiss, ¹⁵
Bot yit luche ¹⁶ nevir Mahoun;
Quhill ¹⁷ preistis come in with bair schevin

Than all the feyndis lewche, and maid gekkis, 18

Blak Belly and Bawsy Brown.19 30

Than Yre come in with sturt 20 and stryfe; His hand wes ay upoun his knyfe,

He brandeist lyk a beir: ²¹
Bostaris, braggaris, and barganeris, ²²
Eftir him passit in to pairis,
All bodin in feir of weir; ²³

1 dispose. 2 Mahomet, i.e., the Devil. 3 rascals.

6 gambols. 7 combed. 8 desolate dwellings. 9 cassock. 10 nonce. 11 deceiver. 12 snaried. 13 groans.
14 Proud rascals in haughty fashion. 15 costume.
15 laughed. 17 Till. 18 mocks. 19 Two popular devils. 20 trouble. 21 swaggered like a bear.
24 quarrellers. 23 arrayed in the likeness of war.

In jakkis 24 and stryppis 25 and bonettis of steill,

Thair leggis wer chenyeit 26 to the heill,

Ffrawart wes thair affeir: 27

Sum upoun udir with brandis beft, 28

Sum jaggit 29 uthiris to the heft,

With knyvis that scherp cowd scheir.

Nixt in the dance followit Invy, Fild full of feid ³⁰ and fellony, Hid malyce and dispyte; Ffor pryvie hatrent ³¹ that tratour trymlit. Him followit mony freik ³² dissymlit, With fenyeit wirdis ³³ quhyte;

50

And flattereris in to menis facis, And bakbyttaris in secreti placis To ley ⁸⁴ that had delyte; And rownaris of fals lesingis; ⁸⁵ Allace! that courtis of noble kingis Of thame can nevir be quyte.

Nixt him in dans come Cuvatyce, Rute of all evill and grund of vyce, That nevir cowd be content; Catyvis, wrechis, and okkeraris,³⁵ Hud-pykis, hurdaris, and gadderaris ³⁷ All with that warlo ³⁸ went:

Out of thair throttis thay schot on udder ⁸⁹
Hett moltin gold, me thocht a fudder, ⁴⁰
As fyreflawcht ⁴¹ maist fervent;
Ay as thav tomit ⁴² thame of schot,
Ffeyndis fild thame new up to the thrott
With gold of allkin prent. ⁴³

Syne Sweirnes, ⁴⁴ at the secound bidding, Come lyk a sow out of a midding, Full slepy wes his grunyie: ⁴⁵ Mony sweir bumbard belly huddroun, ⁴⁶ Mony slute daw ⁴⁷ and slepy duddroun. ⁴⁸ Him serwit ay with sounyie. ⁴⁹

He drew thame furth in till a chenyie, ⁵⁰
And Belliall, with a brydill renyie, ⁵¹
Evir lascht thame on the lunyie: ⁵²

24 corselets. 25 strips. But Bannatyne MS. may be read scruppis, bags. Neither is satisfactory. 27 Wild was their 26 covered with chain-mail. behavior. 28 beat. 29 stabbed. 30 feud. 31 hatred. 34 lie. 35 whisp. 37 Misers, hoarders, 40 great 32 person. 33 words. 85 whisperers of false lies. 36 usurers. 39 others. 40 great 88 wizard. and gatherers. quantity (lit. 128 lbs.). 41 wildfire. 44 Sloth. 43 all kinds of coinage. 45 visage. 46 lazy, tun-bellied sloven (Chalmers). 47 idle rogue. 48 drab. 40 care. 50 chain. 51 rein. 52 loin.

In dance thay war so slaw of feit. Thay gaif thame in the fyre a heit, And maid thame quicker of counvie.1

Than Lichery, that lathly corss, Berand 2 lyk a bagit horss,3 And Ydilness did him leid: Thair wes with him ane ugly sort,4 Full mony stynkand fowll tramort,5 That had in syn bene deid.

Than the fowll monstir Glutteny, Off wame 6 unsasiable and gredy, To dance he did him dress. Him followit mony fowll drunckart, With can and collep,7 cop and quart, In surffett and excess:

Full mony a waistless wallydrag.8 With wamiss unweildable,9 did furth wag, In creische 10 that did incress; 'Drynk!' ay thay cryit, with mony a gaip,11 The feyndis gaif thame hait leid to laip,12

Na menstrallis playit to thame but dowt; Ffor glemen thair wer haldin owt, Be day, and eik by nycht, Except a menstrall that slew a man,

Thair leveray 13 wes na less.

Swa till his heretage he wan, And entirt be brief of richt,

Than cryd Mahoun for a Heleand padvane; 14

Syne ran a feynd to feche Makfadyane, 110 Ffar northwart in a nuke; 15 Be he the correnoch 16 had done schout, Erschemen 17 so gadderit him abowt, In Hell grit rowne thay tuke.

Thae tarmegantis, 18 with tag and tatter, Ffull lowde in Ersche 19 begowth to clatter, And rowp lyk revin and ruke; 20 The Devill sa devit 21 wes with thair yell,

That in the depest pot of Hell He smorit 22 thame with smuke.

Erue, Domine, animas et corpora eorum.
Credo gustare statim vinum Edinburgi,

In villa viventium.
Requiescant Edinburgi. Amen.
Domine, exaudi orationem meam,
Et clamor meus ad te veniat.

OREMUS

Deus qui iustos et corde humiles Ex omni eorum tribulatione liberare dignatus es,

Libera famulos tuos apud villam de Stirling versantes

A penis et tristitijs eiusdem, Et ad Edinburgi gaudia eos perducas, Vt requiescat Strivilling. Amen.

THE BALLAD OF KIND KITTOK

My Gudame wes a gay wif, bot scho wes rycht gend, 18

Scho duelt furth fer in to France, apon Falkland fellis;

Thay callit her Kynd Kittok, quhasa hir weill kend: ¹⁴

Scho wes like a caldrone cruke 15 cler under kellis; 16

Thay threpit 17 that scho deit of thrist, and maid a gud end.

Efter hir dede, 18 scho dredit 19 nought in hevin for to duell;

And sa to bevin the hieway dreidless scho wend,

Yit scho wanderit, and yeid by 20 to ane elriche 21 well.

Scho met thar, as I wene,
Ane ask ²² rydand on a snaill,
And cryit, 'Ourtane ²³ fallow, haill!'
And raid ane inche behind the taill,
Till it wes neir evin.

11 sprats. 12 dwelling. 13 genteel. 14 knew. 15 pot-hook. 16 head-dress. 17 insisted. 18 death. 19 doubted. 20 went aside 21 fairy. 22 newt. 23 Overtaken.

Sa scho had hap to be horsit to hir herbry,¹ Att ane ailhous neir hevin, it nyghttit ²
thaim thare;

Scho deit of thrist in this warld, that gert

hir be so dry,

Scho never eit, bot drank our mesur 3 and mair.

Scho slepit qubill the morne at none, and rais airly;
And to the yettis 4 of hevin fast can 5 the wif

fair,6

And by Sanct Petir, in at the yet, scho stall 7 prevely:

God lukit and saw hir lattin in, and lewch s

And thar, yeris sevin
Scho levit a gud life,
And wes our Ladyis hen wif:
Aud held Sanct Petir at stryfe,
Ay quhill scho wes in hevin.

Sche lukit out on a day, and thoght ryght lang 9

To se the ailhous beside, in till an evill bour:

And out of hevin the hie gait 10 cowth 11 the wif gang

For to get hir ane fresche drink; the aill of hevin wes sour.

Scho come againe to hevinnis yet, quhen the bell rang,

Sanct Petir hat hir with a club, quhill a gret clour 12

Rais in hir heid, becaus the wif yeid 18 wrang. Than to the ailhous agane scho ran, the pycharis 14 to pour,

And for to brew, and baik.

Frendis, I pray you hertfully,
Gif ye be thristy or dry,
Drink with my Guddame, as ye ga by,
Anys 15 for my saik.

HOW DUNBAR WAS DESIRED TO BE A FRIAR

This nycht befoir the dawing ¹⁶ cleir, Me thocht Sanct Francis did to me appeir, With ane religious abbeit ¹⁷ in his hand, And said, 'In thiss go cleith ¹⁸ the, my serwand;

Reffuss the warld, for thow mon 19 be a freir.'

1 inn. 2 night overtook. 3 beyond measure. 4 gates.

5 did. 6 go. 7 stole. 5 laughed. 9 yearned.

19 high road. 11 did. 12 lump. 13 went. 14 pitchers.

15 once. 15 dawning. 17 habit, 16 clothe. 19 must.

With him and with his abbeit bayth I skarrit, 20

Lyk to ane man that with a gaist wes marrit: 21

Me thocht on bed he layid it me abone, Bot on the flure delyverly ²² and sone I lap thairfra, and nevir wald cum nar it.

Quoth he, 'Quhy skarris thow with this holy weid?

Cleith the thairin, for weir 23 it thow most neid;

Thow, that hes lang done Venus lawis teiche,

Sall now be freir, and in this abbeit preiche; Delay it nocht, it mon be done but dreid.'24

Quod I, 'Sanct Francis, loving be the till,²⁵
And thankit mot thow be of thy gude will
To me, that of thy clayis ²⁶ ar so kynd;
Bot thame to weir it nevir come in my mynd;

Sweit Confessour, thow tak it nocht in ill.

'In haly legendis haif I hard allevin,²⁷ 21 Ma ²³ sanctis of bischoppis nor freiris, be sic sevin; ²⁹

Off full few freiris that hes bene sanctis I reid;

Quhairfoir ga bring to me ane bischopis weid,

Gife evir thow wald my saule gaid 30 unto Hevin.'

'My brethir oft hes maid the supplicationis, Be epistillis, sermonis, and relationis, To tak the abyte, bot thow did postpone; But ony process,⁸¹ cum on thairfoir annone, All sircumstance put by and excusationis.'

'Gif evir my fortoun wes to be a freir, 31 The dait thairof is past full mony a yeir; For into every lusty toun and place Off all Yngland, frome Berwick to Kalice, I haif in to thy habeit maid gud cheir.

'In freiris weid full fairly haif I fleichit, ⁸²
In it haif I in pulpet gon and preichit
In Derntoun kirk, and eik in Canterberry;
In it I past at Dover our ⁸³ the ferry
Throw Piccardy, and thair the peple teichit.

20 was frightened. 21 scared. 22 actively. 23 wasr.
24 without doubt. 25 praise be to thee. 25 clothes.
27 alleged. 28 More. 29 by a great deal. 20 guide.
28 Mithout any ado. 25 flattered. 25 over.

'Als lang as I did beir the freiris style, In me, God wait, wes mony wrink 'and wyle; In me wes falset with every wicht to flatter, Quhilk mycht be flemit with na haly watter; I wes ay reddy all men to begyle.'

This freir that did Sanet Francis thair appeir, Ane fleind he wes in liknes of ane freir; He vaneist away with stynk and fyrie smowk; With him me thocht all the hous-end he towk, And I awoik as wy 4 that wes in weir.⁵ 50

A NEW YEAR'S GIFT TO THE KING

My prince in God gif the guid grace, Joy, glaidnes, confort, and solace, Play, pleasance, myrth, and mirrie cheir, In hansell 6 of this guid new yeir.

1 trick, 2 falsehood. 3 banished. 4 man, 5 doubt. 6 As a first gift.

BIOGRAPHICAL AND BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTES

BIOGRAPHICAL AND BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTES

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE

ROBERT MANNING lived, perhaps as a canon, in various houses of the Gilbertine order in Lincolnshire. For a score of years, he tells us, he was in the priory of Brunnewake in Kesteven, six miles from Sempringham, in the extreme south of the county; and here in 1303 he began the Handling Sin, a free translation in 12,632 lines of William of Wadington's French Manuel des Pechiez. (Wadington is an insignificant place four miles south of Lincoln.) It is, he carefully explains, a manual of sins for unlearned people, treating of the ten commandments, the seven deadly sins, and the like, in purposely simple English, and garnished with sixty-five attractive tales - more than the French version has. Of these the two in the text are fair samples, although the first is not in the French at all, and the second is much shorter there. The rest of our extract is valuable as illustrating the manners of the time; indeed the Hundling Sin is an entertaining poem, and a worthy forerunner of the Canterbury Tales and the Confessio Amantis. The other important work of Manning's is his Chronicle, finished about 1338 at the priory of Sixtill (or Six Hills), in the middle of Lincolnshire. The first part of this is a translation of Wace's Brut, the second of Pierre Langtoft's French Chronicle. Langtoft was born presumably at the hamlet of that name close to Brunne (or Bourne), and was Canon of Bridlington, on the Yorkshire coast. From such indications as these we can infer that there was a good deal of literary activity in the northern countries in the late thirteenth and early fourteenth centuries. It is an odd little circumstance that at another Gilbertine house at which Robert Manning stayed - at Cambridge - he met Robert the Bruce, and was at a feast with Bruce's two brothers, one of whom "made a carved king," says Manning, "and was the best artist of his time."

The first part of the Chronicle has been edited by Thomas Hearne, Oxford, 1725, and the second by Furnivall, London, 1889; the Handling Sin, by Furnivall for the Early English Text Soc., London, 1901-03. The present text is Furnivall's with a few changes in punctuation and typography; thus the letters 3 and 5 have been replaced by their modern equivalents, u and v distinguished, and the capitalization normalized.

THE GAWAIN POET

The unknown author ¹ of four poems in the British Museum manuscript Cotton Nero A. X + 4 is one of the most distinguished literary figures of the Middle Ages in England. The poems are The Pearl, Cleanness (or Purity), Patience, and Gawain and the Green Knight — all edited by R. Morris for the E. E. T. S., the first three in Early English Alliterative Poems, the last in Sir Gawayne and the Green Knight (revised by Gollanez, 1912); later editions of The Pearl by C. G. Osgood in the Belles Lettres Series, 1906, and by I. Gollanez, London, 1907; and of Patience by H. Bateson, Manchester, 1912. The Pearl is a highly finished elegy in an elaborate stanza; Gawain is a stirring Arthurian romance, informed with a beautiful spirit of honor and purity. Of these two we give complete translations, with a sample of the original text. Patience and Cleanness, of 500 and 1800 lines respectively, are written in the most powerful and highly colored alliterative verse, the former telling the story of Jonah, the latter Belshazzar's impious feast and fate.

¹ It ought to be noted that the identification of the author of Gavain and the Green Knight with that of The Pearl, etc., is based on internal evidence and is not universally accepted.

These four, with Winner and Waster and The Parliament of the Three Ages (edited together by Gollancz for the Roxburghe Club, 1897) and the Thornton Morte Arthure (edited by Perry and Brock for the E. E. T. S., and by M. M. Banks, London, 1900; translation by A. Boyle in Everyman's Library), are the artistic culmination of the great alliterative revival of the fourteenth century. Of our author we know only what can be deduced from his works — that he was a native of Lancashire or thereabouts, since he uses the North-West-Midland dialect; a person of chivalrous as well as religious feeling; highly educated, and conversant with the best society of his time. Guesses about his personality may be found in Gollanez and Bateson. His work appears to fall within the third quarter of the fourteenth century.

The exact signification of The Pearl has of late been much discussed. The opinion that it is mainly a religious allegory written to support certain theological opinions, though east with consummate skill into the form of an elegy, has made much headway since it was proposed by W. H. Schofield in the Publications of the Modern Language Association of America, vol. XIX (1904), p. 154; yet many scholars still prefer to consider that it is a genuine lament for a little child, and that the theological matter is secondary. Although a vision setting was one of the commonest devices of mediæval poetry, as one may see in the Romance of the Rose, Dante, and Chaucer, the only piece known that bears any striking resemblance to The Pearl is Boccaccio's fourteenth eclogue, probably composed in 1360: their relationship is discussed in Schofield's article, p. 204, and in Osgood's introduction. The Pearl has been translated by Gollancz (1891), by S. Weir Mitchell (N. Y., 1906—incomplete), by G. C. Coulton (1906), by C. G. Osgood (1907), by Sophie Jewett (N. Y., 1908), and by Miss Jessie Weston (in Romance, Vision, and Satire, Boston, 1912).

Gawain and the Green Knight represents and crowns a great number of Gawain romances, most of which were collected by Sir Frederick Madden in his Sir Gawayne, edited for the Bannatyne Club in 1839. Gawain was originally the hero par excellence of the Round Table, a knight peerless for utter courage and courtesy. Other heroes in time and in turn became more popular than he, and in some of the French prose romances of the thirteenth century his character was defaced that others might appear to excel him; and Malory and Tennyson have unfortunately perpetuated the debased portrait. The immediate source of our poem was probably a lost French romance. The only editions are Madden's, which is rare, and Morris's, but a new one is preparing. Translations have been published by Miss Weston in Arthurian Romances Unrepresented in Malory's Morte d'Arthur, No. 1, London, 1898, in prose, and in Romance, Vision, and Satire in verse; by E. J. B. Kirtlan, London (1912), and by C. M. Lewis, New Haven, Conn., 1913—the last a free retelling. Recent articles are those of Knott in Modern Language Notes, xxx (1915), p. 102, and Hulbert in Modern Philology, XIII (1915), p. 433. An important Study of Gawain and the Green Knight by Professor Kittredge has just been published, Cambridge, Mass., 1916.

The translations of The Pearl and Gawain and the Green Knight here offered were made in full knowledge of the difficulty, well-nigh futility, of the task, and aim simply at sticking close to the text and shirking none of the hard places.

WILLIAM LANGLAND

Upon the dubious evidence of notes in certain of the manuscripts the author of Piers Plowman is generally considered to be one William Langland, of Cleobury Mortimer in Shropshire; and by the equally unsafe method of identifying the Long Will of the poem with the author a sort of biography has been made out for him. But as a matter of fact the authorship is uncertain.

The poem itself was extremely popular, so that numerous manuscripts of it still exist. These fall into three groups, making three versions: the A text is a succinct vision concerning Piers the Plowman in eight passus, followed by four passus of the vision of Do Wel, Do Bet, and Do Best. This is usually termed the earliest version, written perhaps in 1362. Two revisions and enlargements are called the B and C texts, and dated 1377 and 1399 respectively. These have generally been deemed the work of the first author; but within the last decade the opinion has spread that they are the work of different hands.

The poem is one of the most significant of the age, picturing as it does with graphic simplicity the social and political life of the times from the standpoint of the masses. It is an indispensable counterpart to the more artistic and more fashionable works of Chaucer. In form Piers Plowman is an allegorical vision, written in the old-fashioned alliterative metre which was undergoing so remarkable a revival in this century.

The standard edition is W. W. Skeat's in two volumes, London, 1886, containing all three versions with a complete apparatus. Professor Manly states his new theory in the Cambridge History of English Literature, II, 1; and both sides of the case are presented in the E. E. T. S. publication, The Piers Plowman Controversy, being Original Series, Extra Issue 139 b, c, d, e, London, 1910 (published 1912).

The present modernization follows line by line what seems to have been the original form of the A version, as given by Skeat; the attempt being made to preserve as much of the alliteration as possible, but yet render the language intelligible to the general reader.

JOHN GOWER

John Gower, who for centuries ranked as the peer of Chaucer, died an old man in 1408; and his splendid tomb may still be seen in St. Saviour's Church, Southwark. He was a well-to-do member of an extensive Kentish family, and possibly a merchant. Practically nothing is known of his life, but we possess his long and interesting will. His chief works were the Speculum Meditantis or Mirour de l'Omme (before 1380), a French poem of some 30,000 lines, treating of the sins, passing in review the various classes of the world, and giving the scheme of salvation; the Vox Clamantis (1382), some 10,000 lines in Latin, sombre, grandiose, largely allegorical, depicting the degeneracy of the times as indicated by the great Peasants' Revolt of 1381; and finally the Confessio Amantis (1390) in English, about 33,000 lines in eight books. In this an elderly lover, dissatisfied with his rewards, is made to confess to Genius, Venus' priest, who elucidates for him the points of shrift by over a hundred stories, — with manifold digressions and inconsistencies, — and finally counsels the lover to renounce love and pursue morality. The style of these stories is smooth and lucid, the narrative admirably direct.

Gower is one of the pillars of English literature: he writes in the same pure and elegant language as Chaucer, and though much more conservative — more "mediæval" — than Chaucer, lacking indeed his genius and humor, he represents worthily the tendencies of his time.

The standard edition is that of G. C. Macaulay, 4 vols., Oxford, 1901, from which our extracts are taken. The capitalization has been modernized.

GEOFFREY CHAUCER

Geoffrey Chaucer was born in London presumably about 1340, the son of a highly reputable wine-merchant. From the royal records and household accounts we obtain an unusually accurate knowledge of his external life. We first discover him at seventeen, a page in the house of the Countess of Ulster, wife of Prince Lionel, third son of Edward III; and a few years later a valet and finally a squire of the King, serving to some extent John of Gaunt also, Edward's fourth son. When about twenty-six he married Philippa, a lady of the court, probably sister of John of Gaunt's third wife, Katherine Swynford. From his royal masters and friends Chaucer and his wife received for their services pensions ranging from forty to sixty pounds yearly, which might represent $3800 or $5200 of our money; and similar grants were continued to the poet after Philippa's death by Edward III's successors, Richard II and Henry IV. Chaucer held two custom-house appointments, one for twelve, and one for four years, for which he received the customary fees, whatever they were. At least seven times he was sent abroad—to Flanders, France, and Italy—on the King's business, diplomatic and commercial; and we have records of payments to him on these occasions. He was clerk of the king's works at various places for two years at a good salary, a member of Parliament for Kent for one year, one of a commission to repair the bank of the Thames, a royal forester, and so on; and besides these sources of income he had his share of the perquisites of office and lurative royal favors. In his prime, then, our great poet was a well-to-do man of affairs. In 1386 he met with reverses, and towards the end of his life he appears actually to have been in straits for want of money; however, when he died in 1400 he was again prosperous.

Chaucer's principal works are: a translation of the French Romance of the Rose, an early work, of which, at most, only a fragment is extant; The House of Fame (1379?), an aerial journey related in a whimsical and assured style, but left unfinished; The Parliament of Fowls (1382), a lively allegory; a prose translation of Boethius' Consolation of Philosophy (1383); Troilus and Criseyda (1384), a long and perfectly wrought version of Boecaccio's Filostrato; the Legend of Good Women (1385), also unfinished, with a pretty, spirited prologue and nine hurried lives or legends of amorous "martyrs"; and the Canterbury Tales (1386-94). Chaucer began like a good craftsman by translating from the French masters of his own century; then he came under the influence of the still greater Italians; and finally in the Canterbury Tales — from whatever source he appropriated his plots — he developed into our raciest, most thoroughly English-flavored, poet. These so-called "periods," however, are not mutually exclusive. The great position which Chaucer at once won and has ever since held served as much as the influence of London and the court to make his deft and melodious language the standard of literary English.

The principal modern editions of Chaucer are Skeat's, in six volumes, with complete apparatus, Oxford, 1899; Skeat's Students' Chaucer, and the Globe Chaucer by Pollard and others. Pollard's Chaucer Primer is a helpful companion. The Chaucer Society (now, alas, extinct) has printed much valuable material. Miss E. P. Hammond's Chaucer, a Bibliographical Manual, gives all the works upon Chaucer down to 1908. Our text is Skeat's in the Students' Chaucer, with half a dozen conservative changes.

Important critical works are Studies in Chaucer, by T. R. Lounsbury, 3 vols., New York, 1892; The Poetry of Chaucer, by R. K. Root, Boston, 1906; Geoffrey Chaucer by Emile Legouis, London and N. Y., 1913; and Chaucer and his Poetry, by G. L. Kittredge, Cambridge, Mass., 1915.

THE CANTERBURY TALES

The Canterbury Tales is far from being a completed work. The twenty-nine pilgrims were each to tell two (or four - see ll. 792-794 of the Prologue) stories; but we have only twenty finished, and four unfinished. Thus many gaps are left in our MSS., and editors designate the detached groups as A, B, C, etc. The Knight's Tale (2250 lines) is an adaptation of Boccaccio's Teseide (9054 lines). Less than a third of Chaucer's poem is actual translation, the rest being his own variations. The theme was one in which Chaucer had long been interested, and traces of Boccaccio's poem crop up in Anelida and Arcite, The Parliament of Fowls, Troilus, and The Legend of Good Women. The Prioress's Tale Chaucer has taken from some Latin prose version current in England of this favorite legend. Strangely enough, the precise sort of Jew-baiting here pictured still persists in Russia and elsewhere, and not infrequently appears in the press. Sir Thopas is a merry burlesque of the most popular romances, like Guy of Warwick, Amis and Amiloun, Launfal, Libeaus Disconus, and Sir Tristram. The Nun's Priest's Tale of the Cock and the Fox is a story from the almost universal Reynard the Fox cycle, on which point one might consult Miss Petersen's "On the Sources of the Nonne Prestes Tale," Boston, 1898. The Pardoner's Tale is a sort of sermon, or exemplum, on the text, Radix malorum est cupiditas, and the edifying plot is one much employed both in the East and the West. Compare, for example, Kipling's King's Ankus, and the Decameron, Day 6, Novel 10. The Wife of Bath's story belongs to a well-known type, a version of it being found, for instance, in Bishop Percy's Folio MS., vol. 1., as The Marriage of Sir Gawaine, and in Sir Frederick Madden's Sir Gawayne as the Weddynge of Syr Gawen and Dame Ragnel. For the oldest types of it see G. H. Maynadier's Wife of Bath's Tale, London, 1901.

THE ROMANCE OF THE ROSE

The thirteenth century French Roman de la Rose, by Guillaume de Lorris and Jean de Meun, was one of the most influential of European poems. Chaucer shows extreme familiarity with it, and tells us (Legend of Good Women, A Prologue, 255) that he translated it. The extant English version, of 7696 lines as contrasted with the 22,000 of the original, passed without question as his until 1870. Since then the authorship has been much debated; and at present most are inclined to call lines 1-1705 Chaucer's, lines 1706-5810 not Chaucer's, the rest possibly his; but the matter is not entirely settled. For a summary of the discussion see Miss Hammond's Chaucer, p. 451. The French poem has been edited by Meon, Paris, 1814, and by others. From the end of our excerpt the story goes on to tell how the youth entered the garden and fell in love with a fair bud in the rosary; how with the help of Good Reception and Venus he kissed it; then how Jealousy, Scandal and others drove him off; and how after a long strife, which Jean de Meun sows with interesting digressions, the lover finally won his rose.

THE PARLIAMENT OF FOWLS

The Parliament of Fowls celebrates the wooing by Richard II of the Lady Anne of Bohemia, whom he married at Westminster in January, 1382. Richard is the formel eagle, the other eagles his unsuccessful rivals. The vision setting is noteworthy as having been employed by Chaucer in several of his poems, probably under the influence of the Romance of the Rose and of the more recent French verse. On the interpretation of the historical allegory see Emerson, Modern Philology, VIII (1910), p. 45, and Moore, Modern Language Notes for Jan. 1911.

TROILUS AND CRISEYDE

The real creator of the Troilus and Criseyde story is Benoit de Sainte-Maure, who made it a conspicuous episode in his Estorie (or Roman) de Troie, an elaborate and entertainingly mediæval account of the fall of Troy in over 30,000 lines, written in the north-west of France about 1160 (ed. L. Constans for the Société des Anciens Textes Français, 1904 f.). Benoit elaborated the brief accounts of the Trojan War found in the late Latin writers Dares and Dietys; and his own work was latinized in about 1287 by Guido da Colonna (or delle Colonne) of Messina as the Historia Trojana. This again was the source of Boccaccio's Filostrato, Chaucer's immediate model. Chaucer, however, takes only about half of the Italian, adds twice that amount of his own, and recurs occasionally to Boccaccio's predecessors. A minute comparison of the two works has been made by W. M. Rossetti in the publications of the Chaucer Society for 1875. Valuable recent articles are those by R. K. Root, in The Poetry of Chaucer, Boston, 1906, chap. 6; K. Young, Origin and Development of the Story of T. & C., Chaucer Soc., 1908; Tatlock, Development of Chaucer's Works, Chaucer Soc., 1907, p. l. f.; Kittredge, The Development of Chaucer's Troilus, etc., Chaucer Soc., 1909.

THE LEGEND OF GOOD WOMEN

The Legend of Good Women was planned to celebrate the constancy in love of twenty famous ladies; but Chaucer wearied of the undertaking and gave it up after nine of their legends were finished. His models may have been the Heroides of Ovid, the De Claris Mulieribus of Boccaccio, and similar collections. It is an interesting circumstance that the Prologue, quite the most charming part of the poem, exists in two versions, of which the shorter or A version appears to be the later — though the matter is still in dispute. And this prologue, especially near the beginning, is in diction so amazingly like the works of the contemporary French poets Machault, Froissart, and Deschamps, that it has been surmised that Chancer wrote it largely as a compliment to them and sent it to Deschamps in acknowledgment of certain flattering stanzas addressed by Deschamps to him. Important articles on The Legend are those of J. L. Lowes in the Publication of the Modern Language Association of America, XIX, 593, and XX, 749, and J. C. French's The Problem of the Two Prologues, etc., Baltimore, 1905.

THOMAS HOCCLEVE

THE ingenuous Thomas Hoccleve (or Occleve) was born about 1367, and died about 1450, so that he was precisely a contemporary of Lydgate. Like Lydgate he was a disciple and a profound admirer of Chaucer, perhaps indeed, as he claims, a friend. He was a Londoner, living till his old age at Chester's Inu (where Somerset House now stands), and daily going by the Strand or the river to his work in the Privy Seal office at Westminster. From official records and his own garrulous poems, we know a good deal about his life. In early manhood he lived gayly and extravagantly — at least so he says; when middle-aged and poor he married - for love; and when old he was cared for in Southwick Priory Hampshire. His chief works are the Letters of Cupid (475 ll.), translated from Christine de Pisan in 1402; La Male Regle (448 ll.), 1406, autobiographical; The Regement of Princes (5463 ll.), 1412, a book of advice for Prince Hal, from the De Regimine Principum of Aegidius Romanus, and other sources; the Complaint (413 ll.) and the Dialogue (826 ll.), both about 1421, autobiographical poems. He wrote very pleasing short pieces — balades, roundels, etc. — and versified two stories from the Gesta Romanorum. Hoccleve's work is interesting for the naïve autobiographical details, the satire on follies of the day - like long sleeves - and the sincere tributes to Chaucer and Gower.

The verse is as a rule mechanical, unmusical, yet in certain of the short poems it shows spirit, and something like virtuosity. The extracts are from F. J. Furnivall's Edition of Hoccleve in 3 volumes for the E. E. T. S., with the capitalization somewhat modernized and u and v distinguished.

JOHN LYDGATE

JOHN LYDGATE lived from about 1370 to about 1450, a large part of this time as a monk of Bury St. Edmunds. For a while he was a priest of Hatfield Regis. Little else is known of his life, but judging from his many occasional poems, he dwelt much in the world and was a favorite of princes and nobles. His principal works are: The Temple of Glass (1403 ll., in 7-line stanzas), Reason and Sensuality (7040 ll., in short couplets, unfnished, rich in mediæval description, where Pallas and Venus strive for the author's allegiance), The Troy Book (30,117 ll. in heroic couplets), The Pilgrimage of the Life of Man (24,832 ll. in short couplets), The Fall of Princes (36,316 ll. in 7- and 8-line stanzas), and the Secreta Secretorum, or Secrees of Olde Philosoffres (1491 ll. in rhyme royal). Besides this bulk of somewhat heavy poems, Lydgate produced a great amount of minor verse in various keys, such as fables, saints' lives, religious lyrics, mummings and satires, and in these much of his best is found. Lydgate's reputation in his lifetime was very great; he was constantly named with Chaucer and Gower, and early MSS. and reprints of his works abound. Of late he has been unduly depreciated, partly from lack of material to judge him by, partly from the corrupt state of the text. Now his works are gradually being made accessible. The best account of his life is in Schick's edition of The Temple of Glass, E. E. T. S., London, 1891. H. N. MacCracken in The Minor Poems of John Lydgate, vol. 1, E. E. T. S., 1911, is authoritative on the Lydgate canon. Lydgate's style is smooth, dignified, long-winded; yet at times he attains liveliness and even grace. His diction is incredibly tinctured by that of his revered master, Chaucer. Both in matter and manner he is thoroughly representative of the late fourteenth and early fifteenth centuries; he is a storehouse of mediæval commonplace.

JOHN SKELTON

THE extraordinarily conceited, whimsical, and pugnacious John Skelton was probably born at Diss in Norfolk about 1460. He was educated at Cambridge, and received the degree in rhetoric of Poeta Laureatus - of which he was extremely vain - not only from Cambridge, but from Oxford and Louvain as well. His great learning is attested by Caxton in the preface to his Eneid, by Erasmus, and by the fact that (about 1498) he was made tutor to the prince who (in 1509) became Henry VIII: it is likewise sufficiently patent in his works. From them it is plain that he was much at court, or at least about London. His patrons included Wolsey; but his attitude toward Henry's powerful minister gradually changed until in Speak Parrot and Why Come Ye Not To Court he virulently attacked the Cardinal. The result was that toward the end of his life the poet was obliged to take sanctuary at Westminster Abbey and stay there till his death in 1529. He had been rector of Diss and presumably resident there since 1503. Such was the mischievous and sportive nature of this misplaced parson that for long after his death he remained a stock figure in "merry tales" and plays. His chief works are: The Bowge of Court (before 1508), a vivid allegory of the corruption of courts (bouge=free board); Philip Sparrow (before 1508); The Tunning of Elinour Rumming (c. 1510); Magnificence (c. 1516), an elaborate morality play; Colin Clout (1519), a satire directed against the clergy; A Goodly Garland of Laurel (c. 1520), a long vision-allegory of self-laudation; and Why Come Ye Not To Court? (1522), a violent satire on Wolsey. Many of his works are lost. Skelton is among the most important and original of English satirists: though still under Chaucer's influence (especially in The Garland of Laurel), he is one of the beginners of our modern poetry.

The standard edition of his works is by Alexander Dyce, two vols., London, 1843. The present text is from the American edition of Dyce, Boston, 1866, with the spelling modernized — that being an attention which in the editors' opinion Skelton's poems particularly deserve: only an occasional (sounded) -es or -e is retained, and old spellings that indicate a different pronunciation from the present. Recent articles on Skelton are A. Kolbing's Zur Characteristic Skeltons, and Friedrich Brie's Skelton Studien, in Englische Studien, xxxvII, 1.

STEPHEN HAWES

Stephen Hawes (c. 1474-c. 1529) was a groom of the chamber to Henry VII, and a court poet. He was born in Suffolk, educated at Oxford; was travelled, accomplished, and knew most of Lydgate by heart. By all odds his most important work is The Pastime of Pleasure, or The History of Graunde Amoure and La Bel Pucel, containing the Knowledge of the Seven Sciences and the Course of Man's Life in this World, written in 1506. For descriptions of his other poems, see the Cambridge History of English Literature, p. 226. The copious extracts of The Pastime given in our text are from T. Wright's edition for the Percy Society, London, 1845. In this gentle allegory the hero, Grand Amour, sets out in search of La Bel Pucel. In the tower of Doctrine he is instructed in Grammar, Logic, and Rhetoric — the trivium; and in Arithmetic, Music, Geometry, and Astronomy — the quadrivium. He finds La Bel Pucel and is accepted by her, but cannot marry until he undergoes successfully prodigious adventures with a three-headed giant, a seven-headed giant, and other monsters. He overcomes all these obstacles and marries the damsel. At last age comes upon him, with Policy and Avarice; then Death with Contrition and Conscience; Remembrance writes his Epitaph, and Fame enrolls him among the great knights. The Pastime of Pleasure is a notable link between the old metrical romances and the old didactic allegories, on the one hand, and The Faerie Queene, on the other.

POPULAR BALLADS

A POPULAR or traditional ballad is a song that tells a story and that has been handed down among the folk for generations. Even when an individual author is presumed to have given the story its first form, his personal characteristics were obliterated in the long process of transmission, during which each singer modified the text at his will, until the product is truly that of the people. A text becomes fixed only when it is caught by print, and the life of the ballad, properly speaking, ends. The oldest so caught is Judas, found in a manuscript of the thirteenth century; and one of the most recent is the Bitter Withy, discovered in 1868. We have a few ballads written down in the fifteenth century; but the bulk of those extant probably date in their present form from the seventeenth century; Bishop Percy's old manuscript, for example, was written about 1650. In spite of the praise of ballads by Sir Philip Sidney, Ben Jonson, and Addison, they were neglected by the literary world until well into the eighteenth century. An interest in them was one of the signs of the romantic movement, and the publication of Percy's Reliques of Ancient English Poetry in 1765, which consists largely of old ballads, marks an epoch in English literature. The enthusiastic collecting period was from about 1750 to 1850, Percy and Sir Walter Scott being the most notable of the collectors.

Ballads are the simplest of poetry, the usual metre being a stanza of four roughly iambic lines, the unrhymed first and third of four beats, the rhyming second and fourth of three beats. It is common to have all four lines with four beats, or to have rhyming couplets; very few ballads have any greater metrical sophistication. The refrain is much employed; so is assonance and imperfect rhyme. There is much repetition of phrase and of situation; many of the epithets are conventional; the favorite numbers, three, seven, and nine are conspicuous; gold and silver and gems abound; supernatural phenomena are unhesitatingly accepted; the fairy world is very near, and beasts are not so different from men. Thus many archaic literary traits are preserved in the ballads, along with the emotions and the culture of a long past age.

The standard collection of English ballads is that by the late F. J. Child in ten parts or five volumes — The English and Scottish Popular Ballads, Boston, 1882-98. All these ballads (but not all the versions of them) have been reprinted in one convenient volume with the same title by Helen Child Sargent and G. L. Kittredge, Boston, 1904. The text of our selections is that of Child. The best critical account is that of F. B. Gummere, The Popular Ballad, Boston, 1907.

JOHN BARBOUR

For the life of John Barbour, the first of the important Scottish poets, we have the same sort of information as about his English contemporary Chaucer. From state papers we glean that he was born at about 1320, and that he died in 1395; that he was archdeacon of Aberdeen; that he frequently had safe-conduct to travel and study in England and France—as in 1357, for example, when Edward III permits him to conduct three scholars to Oxford; that in 1373 he was clerk of the audit and one of the auditors of the exchequer to Robert II of Scotland; and that he received various pensions and perquisites from his royal master.

As The Bruce was composed within fifty years of its hero's death, it is by no means devoid of historic authenticity, but in form it is a spirited romance, full of mediæval and patriotic exaggeration, abounding in stirring narrative, and in sage reflections. The 13,615 octosyllabic lines are divided into fourteen cantos. The language is practically that of the north of England in the fourteenth century, and it is sometimes called "Early Scots" to distinguish it from the more sophisticated and more difficult "Middle Scots" of the writers after 1450. The best edition is that of W. W. Skeat for the E. E. T. S., 1870-89, and for the Scottish Text Society, 1893-95, from which latter our excerpts are taken.

In addition to The Bruce, Barbour has had attributed to him on insufficient evidence the fragmentary Troy Book in the northern dialect, a northern collection of Legends of the Saints, and, with perhaps better reason, the Buik of Alexander. Still further additions to his canon are proposed by G. Neilson in his John Barbour, London, 1900 (cf. Athenœum, 27 Feb., 1897, and Scottish Antiquary, Jan., 1897). See also J. T. T. Brown, The Wallace and the Bruce Re-studied, Bonn, 1900; and W. A. Craigie, "John Barbour and Blind Harry as Literature," Scottish Review, XXII, 173.

"BLIND HARRY"

THE authority usually cited for the date and the author of The Wallace is John Major (1470-1550), the Scottish historian, who says that such a work was composed in Major's infancy by a wandering minstrel, Henry, who was blind from his birth. There happen also to be entries of payments to a "Blin Harry" up to 1492 in the accounts of James IV. The poem, however, seems so much like the work of a well-read accomplished person, observant of nature and of affairs, that it is on the whole safer to consider the authorship doubtful. 'The unique MS., in the Advocates' Library in Edinburgh, is anonymous, as are also the early printed editions of 1508, 1570, 1594, 1601, 1611, etc.

The 11,858 lines, in eleven books, are a largely apocryphal biography of the great Scottish hero who figured so prominently in history from 1296 to 1298, and was brutally executed in 1305, but the rest of whose career is almost totally unknown. The work is written in the comparatively new "heroic" couplet introduced by Chaucer, and for the most part in a straightforward, energetic, unvaried style; but not infrequently the author shows that he can use the artificial, "aureate" terms of Middle Scots. The poem has had an immense popularity in Scotland, and in the modern Scots version of William Hamilton (1722) had some influence on Burns.

Our excerpts are from the edition of J. Moir for the Scottish Text Society, 1884-89. For the authorship see J. T. T. Brown's The Wallace and the Bruce Re-studied, Bonn, 1900, and for the best discussion of the legendary and historical constituents of the poem, with their bearing on authorship, the MS. dissertation of F. L. Childs, Studies in The Wallace, in Harvard University Library.

JAMES I OF SCOTS

KING JAMES I OF SCOTLAND, the author of the King's Quair, was captured at sea by the English in 1406 — when he was about eleven — and kept prisoner until 1424. In that year he married an English lady, Joan Beaufort, daughter of the Earl of Somerset, was ransomed, and went home to reign. After an energetic rule of thirteen years, during which he sought especially to crush the power of the turbulent nobles, he was sayagely murdered at Perth by the outlawed Sir Robert Graham and a band of Highlanders.

The poem is an allegorical account of James's love affair. The metre is the seven-line stanza of Chaucer's Troilus, which, from James's use of it, is often called "rime royal." In form it is a love-vision of the type best known by the Romance of the Rose, and it abounds in reflections of Chancer's works, though Lydgate's Temple of Glass is the chief source. In fact, it is one of the most characteristic pieces of the Chaucerian school. The language is a somewhat artificial one, partly northern or Scots, and partly that of Chaucer - Midland English. The date is between 1423 and his death in 1437.

The standard edition is that of W. W. Skeat for the Scottish Text Soc., new ed., 1911, from which our text is taken. The question of the authorship is debated in J. T. T. Brown's The Authorship of the King's Quair, Glasgow, 1896; Jusserand's Jaques 1^{re} d'Ecosse fut-il poète, Paris, 1897; R. S. Rait's The King's Quair and the new Criticism, 1898; A. Lawson's Kinge's Quair and the Quare of Jelusy, Edinburgh, 1910. For sources, see W. A. Neilson's Origins and Sources of the Court of Love, Boston, 1899, pp. 152, 232 f.

ROBERT HENRYSON

Almost nothing is known of Henryson, one of the greatest of the Scottish Chaucerians. He lived perhaps from 1425 to 1500. He may be the master Robert Henryson, already "licentiate in arts and bachelor in degrees," incorporated a member of Glasgow University in 1462; and he is called "schoolmaster of Dumfermlin" in the earliest edition of his Fables (1560).

His Testament of Cresseid, written mostly in Chaucer's seven-line stanza, is, although a bit laden with mediæval machinery at the start, one of the most powerful and affecting poems of the century, as his Robyn and Makyn is one of the most graceful and pleasing of pastorals. The thirteen Fables are perhaps an even more significant accomplishment, for to this time-honored theme Henryson has brought so much vivacity and acute, sympathetic observation of men and beasts, that no fables have more flavor than his. Besides these Henryson wrote a dozen or more short poems. His works have been edited by D. Laing, Edinburgh, 1865; and by G. G. Smith for the Scottish Text Soc., 3 vols., Edinburgh, 1906-8. Our selections are from the latter, in the Testament and the fable of The Two Mice following the Charteris text, in The Fox, the Wolf, and the Cadger that of the Harleian MS.

WILLIAM DUNBAR

Dunbar lived from about 1460 to 1520. He graduated bachelor of arts at St. Andrews in 1477, and master in 1479. He was probably of noble kin, but relatively humble station; and it is possible that he was for a time a wandering friar, though the biographical details that have been drawn from his poem on "How Dunbar was desyrd to be ane Freir" should be accepted cautiously on account of the obviously farcical nature of the poem. Later he was a priest at court, accompanied certain expeditions on the king's business, and received certain pensions and grants of livery. A poet's position in the beginning of the sixteenth century is still like Chaucer's.

Dunbar's two most important allegorical poems are those given in our text—The Thistle and the Rose, a parliament of beasts and birds in imitation of Chaucer's Parliament of Fowls, written in honor of the betrothal of James IV of Scotland and Margaret Tudor, daughter of Henry VII of England; and The Golden Targe, wherein the peet represents himself as trying in vain to ward off the arrows of love by the shield of reason. These elegant stanzas are written in the Middle Scots "aureate" style, and in conscious emulation of Chaucer, Gower, and Lydgate, characteristic praise of whom is to be found at the end of The Golden Targe. There is the same polish in several of the occasional pieces here given; but it is in the Seven Deadly Sins, the Dregy, and Kind Kittok that those qualities for which Dunbar is most famous appear—audacious fancy and rollicking humor, an astonishing virtuosity in every metre, and a cataclysmic wealth of strange words.

Dunbar wrote in all about a hundred poems. The most useful editions are those of J. Schipper, Vienna, 1894, and of John Small and others in the Scottish Text Soc., 1884-93. Our texts are from the latter. Schipper has also written a biographical and critical study, William Dunbar, sein Leben und seine Gedichte, Berlin, 1884.

GAVIN DOUGLAS

GAVIN DOUGLAS (c. 1475-1522) was third son of the great Earl of Angus, Archibald Bell-the-Cat. He was educated at St. Andrews, entered the church, and after many vicissitudes—for he was deep in the politics of a most turbulent period—became bishop of Dunkeld. All his literary work appears to have been done while he was Dean of St. Giles in Edinburgh, from 1501 to 1513. His Eneid (1513), "the first version of a great poet in any English dialect," is a translation of Virgil's twelve books, and the thirteenth of Mapheus Vegius, in vigorous Middle Scots. Peculiarly interesting are the original prologues to all the books, on the seasons or other subjects not at all connected with the poems. That to the twelfth book is perhaps the most overwhelming example of the "fresch anamalit termes celicall," the "sugurit," "aureate," "mellifluate," coinages of these late Scottish mediævalists, who at the same time begin to show the influence of the Revival of Learning. King Hart is of course the human heart in the castle of the body, surrounded by his servitors, the five senses: it is a fairly well constructed allegory of over 900 lines. The Palace of Honour, Douglas's earliest work (1501), comprises 2166 lines in nine-line stanzas. It is an over-elaborate dream-vision, stuffed with all manner of mediæval motives, where the poet finds Venus and Prince Honour in a mansion somewhat like that in Chaucer's House of Fame.

The only collected edition of Douglas's works is that by John Small, 4 vols., Edinburgh, 1874, from which our text is taken.

SIR DAVID LYNDESAY

SIR DAVID LYNDESAY lived approximately from 1490 to 1555. He may have attended St. Andrews University; thereafter, for most of his life, he was a personal attendant, in various offices, upon James V of Scotland, finally in 1529 attaining knighthood and the office of chief herald, or Lyon King of Arms. He was sent on several missions abroad, sat for a while as member of Parliament, and was a general master of ceremonies at the Scottish court.

In The Dream (1134 lines) Lyndesay is seeking to edify his young prince by an allegorical vision somewhat in Chaucer's style, wherein after a visit to Hell, Purgatory, and the various spheres, his guide, Dame Remembrance, displays to him the native resources of his own Scotland; and when the author asks, "Why, then, is it so poor?" she replies, "Because of misgovernment"; and anon follows the excerpt given in our text, where John the Common Wealth lays bare in trenchant fashion the evils under which Scotland suffered. The date of composition may be 1528.

The Testament and Complaint of our Sovreign Lord's Papyago (1190 lines) is one of Lyndesay's most polished satires. The papyago or parrot is blown from the top of a high tree which she ought never to have climbed, and fatally burt. She laments her ambition, and sends one warning epistle to the king, and another to her brethren of the court, which latter ends with the first three stanzas of our extract.

Kitty's Confession is one of Lyndsay's best short satires, — reasonable, pungent, and exposing an obvious specific abuse.

Squire Meldrum (1847 lines) is a little romance, which recalls in a way the old mediæval romances, but which is brought quite up to date — being founded indeed upon contemporary happenings. The Fifeshire hero-squire defeats the English champion in France, wins a sea-fight, also a lovely lady, takes a great castle, is at last dreadfully wounded and left for dead by brutal assailants, but recovers to live to a good old age and make the Testament which is given in our extract.

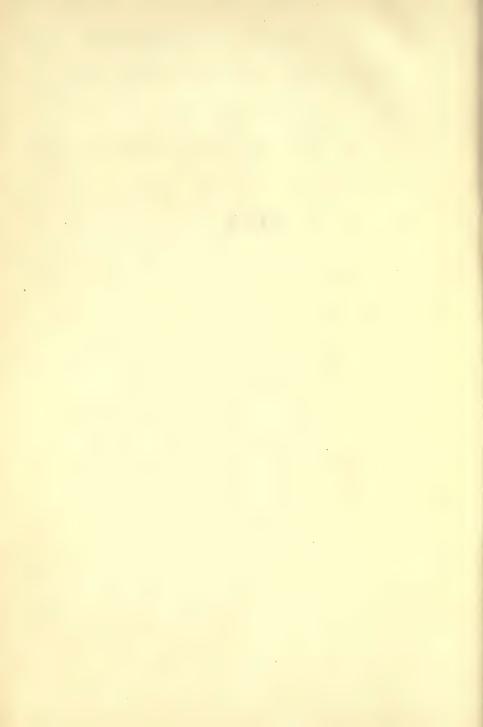

The chief works of Lyndesay's not represented here are The Dialogue betwixt Experience and a Courtier (6333 lines), called also The Monarchy, an account of certain biblical stories and church doctrines, and A Pleasant Satire of The Three Estates (4652 lines), a unique sort of morality play of great length and scope, a keen and amusing satire directed against the weaknesses of the nobles, the burgesses, and the clerics — indeed one of the most remarkable and entertaining works of the time, and the most vivacious and realistic of moralities.

Lyndesay is the last of the Scottish Chaucerians: he cites reverently the master's name along with those of Lydgate and Gower, but he is touched by the spirit of the Reformation and the Renaissance, and is as much a reformer as a poet. The principal edition of his works is that by David Laing, 3 vols., Edinburgh, 1879. That by F. Hall and J. A. H. Murray for the E. E. T. S., from which our texts are taken, is unfinished.
